School Budget Calls for $369,554.84 Increase

EDUCATION BOARD PLANS TO DISCUSS PROGRAM TUESDAY

School Leaders Start Fight To Obtain 30 Per Cent Minimum of City's Revenue in 1928.

121 NEW TEACHERS DECLARED NEEDED

Budget Makers Estimate That It Will Require $182,654 To Maintain Plants Next Year.

Operation and maintenance of an adequate educational program in Atlanta public schools for 1928 will require $3,134,568.17, $369,554.84 more than was spent this year, according to a budget draft made by the administration department of the school system and submitted late Saturday to members of the Atlanta board of education.

The budget, which represents approximately 30 per cent of the city's estimated income for 1928, will be discussed at a special called meeting of the board at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in city council chamber, it was announced by Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president.

More Teachers Needed.

At least 121 new teachers will be required to instruct an anticipated large increase in school population with the opening of the second semester in February, the budget sets out, and cost of instructional service will be $2,631,530.90 next year, against $2,458,736.25 this year.

Other outstanding provisions of the proposed 1928 budget show it will take $182,654 to maintain plants next year as against $53,285.80 this year; $195,343.75 to operate plants as against $155,019.94 this year; $30,000 for capital outlay next year as against $5,352.40 this year.

Marked increases for maintenance of plants is due to the fact that this item was slashed to the very minimum for 1927 on account of a lack of funds, and that improvements must be made next year. Operation also has been curtailed in the interest of economy to prevent a deficit.

Want 30 Per Cent Minimum.

Public schools this year received $2,764,913.83 from the city, the 26 per cent minimum required by the city charter. A concerted move has been launched by members of the board, the administration staff headed by Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, and members of Atlanta Council Parent-Teachers' association to obtain a minimum of 30 per cent in 1928. The move also will have the backing of many outstanding civic and educational leaders.

While the 1927 school board will not be empowered to pass officially on the 1928 budget, it is expected that it will make an exhaustive study of the sheet as offered Saturday night by Raymond R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of business affairs who compiled it with the help of other assistant superintendents and Mr. Sutton, with a view of suggesting changes and of giving it an "unofficial" sanction.

Dr. Eubanks pointed out that while the budget could not be adopted, it

Secret Subpoenas Issued in Probe Of Hearst Charges

Mysterious Man, Whose Identity Is Not Disclosed, Appears at Executive Session.

DETECTIVE REPORT IS EXPECTED SOON

Telegraph Companies Declare Their Wires Did Not Carry Damaging Telegrams.

BY PAUL R. MALLON.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, December 17.—A set of secret subpoenas for new witnesses in the Hearst Mexican document inquiry was sent out tonight by the senate investigating committee.

The action followed an executive meeting of the committee at which were present Undersecretary of State Olds, Director General Rowe of the Pan-American union and a mysterious man whose identity was concealed. All three of the witnesses declined to say anything of the situation.

The mystery witness is understood to be a man from New York who wrote the committee he had valuable information for them to trace the source of the disputed documents published by Hearst newspapers charging that $1,200,000 had been directed to be paid by the Mexican government to four United States senators.

The committee adjourned after an hour's hearing, subject to recall by Chairman David Reed. Special detectives employed by the committee to follow evidence relating to the $1,200,000 transaction were expected to report soon.

Officials of the Western Union and Postal telegraph companies testified their wires had not carried the damaging telegrams which Hearst agents said they procured from files of the Mexican consulate in New York city. Witnesses said no other company could have handled the messages between Mexico City and New York.

The companies had not preserved records for 1926 during which the $1,200,000 was said to have been ordered sent for payment to Senators Borah, Norris, La Follette and Heflin.

3 DIE IN COLDEST WAVE IN FRANCE SINCE WORLD WAR

BY HENRY WALES.
(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Paris, December 17.—France is gripped in the clutches of a frigid cold wave with the lowest temperature since the terrible war time winter of 1917.

The frigid wave took its first casualty tonight. Three died in a local hospital and 20 are in serious condition. The losses of the retail stores, many of which do a huge Christmas business in the out-door terraces, will run into millions.

The thermometer registered 12 below zero centigrade in Paris this morning, and this afternoon, with a brisk wind blowing, it seems colder.

LINDY'S MOTHER TO FLY TO SEE SON IN MEXICO

Dauntless Woman Will Make Journey From Detroit in Tri-Motored Ford Plane.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—A new messenger of American good will towards neighbor peoples will take to the air at Detroit Monday, when Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh sets out by airplane to join her gallant son in Mexico City for the Christmas holidays.

Flying in a tri-motored Ford plane, "Lindy's" mother, as dauntless as himself, will be swept swiftly southward to cover in three or four days an aerial distance just a little greater than her daring son negotiated in 27 hours to write his latest epic in the pages of aviation history.

Evidence of the great value in stimulation of good will between the United States and Mexico which Washington officials received not only in Colonel Lindbergh's flight, but also foresaw in the mother's proposed trip to join her son, was clear in the fact that announcement of Mrs. Lindbergh's plans came from the state department.

Mexico Offers Cooperation.

The plan for Mrs. Lindbergh's flight was arranged by Ford Motor company. Because of its importance from the viewpoint of international good relations, its disclosure came from the department of state.

Formal notification of Washington's approval of Mrs. Lindbergh's adventure was rushed to Ambassador Morrow so that the certain cooperation of the Mexican government to insure the safety and comfort of the mother of the trans-Atlantic flier could be obtained.

Ambassador Tellez, here in Washington, however, needed no words from higher Mexican authority to support his prompt assurances that Mexico, both her government and her people, would be waiting with open

MOTHER AND BABY SAVED FROM FIRE

Firemen Rescue Them From Upstairs Porch of Apartment House at 1078 Peachtree Street.

Mrs. J. F. Moore and her six-week-old baby were saved from burning to death early Saturday evening when fireman rescued them from an upstairs porch of an apartment house at 1078 Peachtree street where they had been trapped by flames. Both mother and baby were almost overcome by smoke when found, and had to be given medical treatment at the Davis-Fischer sanitarium.

Flames were discovered in the upstairs of the building about 8:30 o'clock and several companies answered the alarm. Prompt work on the part of the fire-fighters confined the damage to the second floor, although considerable loss was caused by smoke and water to the downstairs portion. The damage was estimated at about $15,000.

Mrs. Moore and her baby were declared out of danger late Saturday night.

T. L. ROCHESTER, NORCROSS, SLAIN IN HUNTING MISHAP

Norcross, Ga., December 17.—(Special.)—Thomas L. Rochester was accidentally killed near here today while hunting. Rochester was connected with the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company with offices in Atlanta, but he had lived here for a number of years past.

He is survived by his widow, three daughters and one son. Before her marriage Mrs. Rochester was Luette Johnson, daughter of A. A. Johnson, one of the pioneer citizens of Norcross.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon from the Methodist church here.

REMUS FATE NEARS HANDS OF JURORS

Prosecutor Taft Says Ex-Bootlegger's Love of Publicity Led to His Slaying of Wife.

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 17.—(United News.)—George Remus was one of the nation's greatest seekers after publicity and his urge to be before the public finally led, through devious channels, to the murder of his wife, Charles P. Taft, II, prosecutor, told the jury today in his argument for the state.

His summary began after testimony in the trial, already four weeks in progress, was ended. He told the jurors that Remus, first successful in a small way in beating the government as a bootlegger, had visions of winning for himself nation-wide notoriety.

As his bootlegging business grew and his fortune with it, his mind evolved new ways of keeping his name before the public. His linking of the name of his wife, Imogene, for whose murder he now is being tried, with that of Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., former prohibition agent, was a studied bid for publicity, Taft charged.

Says He had "Swell Head."

Remus, Taft went on, got "the swell head" as his success mounted until finally he thought so well of himself that he believed he could do no wrong.

Although Taft's denunciation of Remus was bitter and sarcastic, Remus, who during the last four weeks time and again has flared into anger over thrusts far less pointed, hardly seemed to be listening. He fussed with papers and seldom looked at the 32-year-old prosecutor who was pleading his biggest case.

The jury listened intently. The case is due to be in their hands late Monday, giving them time to do their Christmas shopping.

Meanwhile one of the principal features of the case was before Judge Shook for decision Monday. He was not yet determined whether he will permit the jury to return a verdict of

'Opportunity 5' Taken By Rich's Social Club

ALL ATLANTA URGED TO AID POOR FAMILIES

BY BILL SHIPPEN.

Employees of M. Rich & Brothers company, banded together in the Rich's Social club, have elected to shelter "Opportunity" No. 5 family throughout the coming year.

These young business men and women—whose cheery smiles have brightened your Christmas shopping this year—responded to the "Ten Opportunities" appeal with the same helpful spirit which has made them of real value to the community.

J. F. Asher, manager of men's furnishings department at Rich's, is president of the club, composed of 350 employees from all departments of the store. Other officers are T. L. Story, treasurer, and Mrs. Odessa Henson, secretary.

While the organization is purely social, the membership has made this exception to its policies in view of the urgency of the appeal. This contribution, supplemented by meager funds available from Community Chest allotments, will relieve suffering and want of No. 5 family for the next 12 months.

PARADE OF USED CARS IS STAGED.

In behalf of the "Ten Opportunities" fund a parade was staged Saturday afternoon through downtown Atlanta, featuring the used cars donated to the cause by D. C. Black, Buick dealer here.

The Atlanta police band, which, with six mounted officers, led the parade, was furnished by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale at request of The Constitution.

While two of the "opportunities" have been taken in full by Civitans and the Rich Social club, general subscriptions are woefully lacking this year.

These families are mothered by defenseless widows. They are undernourished, handicapped by sickness—they lack shelter, know hunger and suffer from the bitter cold.

All Atlantans interested are urged to send in their checks. Make them payable to the "Ten Opportunities" fund, care of The Constitution. Any amount will help. If you lack ready money at this time, come forward with a pledge now, and pay it later in monthly installments to the Family Welfare society. Be assured your money will do double duty for the city's ten neediest and ten worthiest families.

Opportunity No. 8

This will be little Alma's first Christmas. It promises disappointment for her. And what goes for little Alma goes, too, for her four brothers and sisters—and their mother as well.

This desperate little family is woefully in need of protection. At present they are housed in a wretched hovel on the fringe of the city—OF ATLANTA.

FATHER DIED CHRISTMAS DAY.

The father was a good provider and steady about his work with a construction company. But one day he fell from a bridge. It hurt his head. He was never the same again.

On last Christmas day he died of the old injury.

The mother is a splendid little woman and quite determined to be independent; but every bit of her time is occupied with the five children, none of whom are over 13. The husband had $2,000 of life insurance with a fraternal organization.

This, however, was canceled because of a technical defect in the policy. The aged parents of the mother had lost their entire savings in a Georgia bank failure and were unable to help.

This little family has known privation and suffering enough to daunt the hearts of strong men, much less a delicate mother and her five youngsters.

FIVE CHILDREN LIFT THEIR HANDS.

Grace is 12 now, and the brother, Leon, is 11—both are studying hard in school. Mary is 8 and Imogene 4 years old.

One dollar a day will provide for this family. Added to funds

THREE GEORGIANS HELD PRISONERS ON ILLFATED SUB

Fred Henry O'Shields, of Atlanta, Joined Army at Outbreak of War and Later Entered Navy.

MOTHER RECEIVES LETTER FROM BOY.

"Don't write until you hear from me again."

That was the closing sentence in the last letter Mrs. Henry O'Shields, of 321 North avenue, N. W., received from her only son, Fred H. O'Shields, a member of the crew of the ill-fated submarine S-4.

The letter, written from Portsmouth, N. H., less than a month ago told his mother that Fred had left the navy. But he always was writing "foolishness," Mr. O'Shields said Saturday night, and he would frequently write his mother that he had been married. The letter following would explain the joke. They believe he was still on the sub when it sank.

Three Georgians, one of whom is an Atlantan, are now imprisoned and probably lost in the ill-fated submarine S-4, which was rammed and sunk late Saturday afternoon off Provincetown, Mass., by the coast guard destroyer Paulding.

The Atlanta man is Fred Henry O'Shields, 27 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry O'Shields, of 321 North avenue, N. W. The other two are James Johnson White, 22 years old, son of the late J. E. White, of Rockmart, Ga., and Henry Handy Brown, son of Young Samuel Brown, of Fitzgerald, Ga. Brown and his father could not be located Saturday in Fitzgerald, according to dispatches from that town.

Eight Years in Service.

The coming January will mark eight years of service in the navy for O'Shields, who also served 23 months in the army during the world war, enlisting at the age of 16 years.

He was born here and spent all his life previous to joining the army in Atlanta. After his enlistment in the army expired he returned to his

FATHER RANSOMS GIRL'S DEAD BODY

Pays Abductors $1,500 and Finds 12-Year-Old Daughter Shockingly Mutilated.

Los Angeles, December 17.—Perry M. Parker, whose 12-year-old daughter, Marian, had been kidnaped and held for ransom, tonight paid an agent of the kidnapers $1,500 on the assurance that she would be returned unharmed.

The abductor then led the distracted father to a corner of the lawn and pointed out the form of his child wrapped in blankets. Rushing to the body as the abductor drove rapidly away, Parker discovered his child was dead and shockingly mutilated.

Warned Not to Tell Police.

All day the frantic father had nursed the hope that his daughter would be returned. He had received numerous mysterious telephone calls and letters through the mail, all assuring him that she would be restored unharmed if he complied promptly with the demand for $1,500, which was to be in $20 gold notes and new money.

Warning was contained in each note and telephone call that if he communicated with the police it would mean he never would see his child alive.

The newspapers agreed to print nothing about the case, fearing publication would endanger the life of the kidnaped girl. However, the police were active on the case, several hundred officers and several detective

SUBMERSIBLE HIT DURING TRIAL RUN NEAR CAPE COD

Score of Salvage Boats Reach Scene in Frantic Efforts To Rescue Crew of Submarine.

DESTROYER MAKES HARBOR IN SAFETY

S-4 Goes Down With All on Board Four Seconds After Collision With Paulding.

Boston, December 18.—(AP)—A radio message received by the Associated Press early today from its representative aboard the U. S. destroyer Sturtevant stated that one of the small coast guard boats sent to the rescue of the S-4 disaster apparently had succeeded in attaching a line and grapnel to the sunken submarine. Efforts were to be made to start work at once to raise the vessel, the message said.

Provincetown, Mass., December 17. (United News.)—Deep beneath the turbid waters of Cape Cod, the wrecked submarine S-4 lay tonight, while government officials rushed plans to rescue the 40 men trapped in its shattered hulk.

Over the restless sea, streaked with tell-tale oil scum, searchlights flashed from a score of salvage boats as a futile search was carried on at the scene of America's third major submarine disaster.

Riding at anchor in near-by Provincetown harbor was the coast guard destroyer Paulding, which a few hours earlier had rammed and sunk the submersible.

Itself badly damaged where its prow had crushed against the steel undersea craft, the Paulding was reported leaking, but was believed in no danger.

Crash Unavoidable.

The S-4 went down with all on board only seconds after the crash. Reports from the Paulding told how the submarine, on a trial run, suddenly appeared almost under its bow.

Occurring while the destroyer was making 18 knots, the collision was described as unavoidable. The Paulding appeared to have crashed into the side of the emerging S-4, which sank before the destroyer's crew could render aid.

Hope that the lives of the approximately 40 men believed aboard the S-4 might be saved seemed remote as coast guards and navy men, under the glare of many searchlights, took up the rescue task early tonight.

Rough seas and extreme cold handicapped the workers as an emergency fleet was assembled at the scene of the disaster.

After Rum Runners.

The Paulding, captained by Lieutenant Commander R. K. Jones, was believed to have been patrolling Massachusetts waters in connection with

BLACKMER SERVED SUMMONS IN PARIS

Washington, December 17.—(United News.)—Harry M. Blackmer, wealthy oil man, who has remained in Europe two years while the government demanded his presence as an important witness in the oil trials, has been served with a subpoena in Paris, official advices received here today said.

If Blackmer persists in his refusal to appear, as he did in response to previous subpoenas, another $100,000 of his property will be seized, government attorneys said. The government already has forced the posting of bond to cover the first seizure. Blackmer is wanted to testify in the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial January 16 as to the affairs of the Continental Trading company, from which, the government charges, Harry F. Sinclair received $230,500 in Liberty bonds which he gave in 1922 to Albert B. Fall, then secretary of the interior, for the lease of the Teapot Dome naval reserve in Wyoming.

ATTORNEYS TO FIGHT RETURN OF BLACKMER.

New York, December 17.—(United News.)—Attorneys for H. M. Blackmer will continue their efforts to prevent his return to the United States and seizure of $100,000 worth of his property by the government, despite service of a subpoena on him in Paris today, George Gordon Battle, one of Blackmer's legal staff, said upon receiving news of the Paris action.

The subpoena served on Blackmer today is the second one, made necessary because the first Fall-Sinclair prosecution was declared a mistrial.

Bargain 'Love Counter'

:: PROHIBITION "ANGEL" FOUND WITH QUART ::

Charged To Kresge by Wife

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 17.—A love nest run on bargain basement methods and dominated by a portly Romeo in the guise of a pious multi-millionaire who stuffed religious pamphlets into the holes in his broken shoes, was pictured today in affidavits revealing the very private life of Sebastian S. Kresge, of Detroit, 5-and-10-cent store king, now being sued for divorce by Doris Mercer Kresge, formerly if Pittsburgh.

The affidavit attached to the divoree papers and sworn to by his New York love-nest housekeeper, Mrs. Jennie Knapp, disclosed that the angel of the prohibitionists was no hero to the feminine valet who presided over the thrifty little apartment Kresge, according to his wife's charges, leased under the name of Jones, at 8 East Forty-eighth street, and which her detectives raided last April.

"He refused to let me change the towels and bed linen every day as had been my custom," runs the housekeeper's affidavit. "During the months he was there he used only one pair of pajamas and never sent them to the laundry. Once I discovered a hole in the sole of one of his shoes. He had attempted to protect his foot from the sidewalk by placing in the shoe a church pamphlet with the text: 'Give your soul to Jesus.'

"He wore the same collar for days at a time, and each night placed it under a weight to preserve its shape."

But if Kresge was no hero to the housekeeper, he may be even less to the Anti-Saloon League, as another affidavit, disclosed today, shows that the man who recently gave $500,000 to the dry cause, had a partly-filled quart bottle of whisky by his bedside at the time of the raid.

Underneath the bed, according to the complaint, the wife and her companions found the hysterical, scantily-clad Gladys Ardelle Fish, chubby 25-year-old Natick, Mass., ex-stenographer.

In retort to the denial of Miss Fish's parents in Natick that their daughter had ever been intimate with Kresge, the wife's attorneys today pointed to a paragraph in the deposition of Kresge's housekeeper, in which Mrs. Knapp swears that Kresge showed her several valentine greeting cards which the millionaire told her were from the former stenographer.

On one of the cards the correspondent had written, the affidavit declared, "I am not a gold digger. I'm digging for a good, old, true heart. I don't want a key to your apartment, but a key to your heart."

City and County Employees Elect Stephens Leader

Fred K. Stephens, who is connected with Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office, was elected president of the City and County Public Service Employees' union, at the annual meeting Saturday night at the Labor temple, 112 Trinity avenue.

Other officers are: George A. Maddox, vice president; R. L. Tribble, recording and corresponding secretary, and T. C. Roberts, financial secretary.

The newly elected officers will take their posts at the regular monthly meeting Saturday night, January 7.

L. P. Marquardt, secretary of the Georgia Federation of Labor, was the principal speaker at the meeting.

ALLEGED GANGSTERS FREED IN BARN MURDER

Marion, Ills., December 17.—(AP)—A verdict of not guilty, purported to have come as a direct result of an undertaker's testimony that the charred body found in a burned barn was not that of Lyle Worsham, was returned here tonight by the jury in the trial of Harvey Dungy, Fred Thomasson and Joe Booher, alleged Birger gangsters, for the slaying.

Bert H. Scobey, Marion undertaker, had testified for the defense that in his opinion the charred body was that of a woman. The decision came after the jury had been out three hours and 20 minutes. The first ballot stood 9 to 3 for acquittal and the decision was reached on the second ballot. The trio are being held on other charges, including robbery.

NAVY PACT FAILURE LAID TO ENGLAND

New York, December 17.—(AP) Failure of the tripartite naval conference called at Geneva last summer by President Coolidge is characterized as a deplorable British blunder by Viscount Rothermere in a cabled dispatch which will be published as the feature article in the Sunday pictorial of London tomorrow. The dispatch follows, in part:

BY VISCOUNT ROTHERMERE.

Last summer, at the invitation of President Coolidge, the Japanese and ourselves met the Americans at Geneva to discuss the reduction of naval armaments. Of all the mistakes the present British government has made the greatest was to let that conference fail.

It failed partly because the British delegates were wrongly chosen. But the actual responsibility rests upon Sir Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary. He seemed utterly unable to realize the all embracing importance of the conference. It was his business to know that there was a large party of American opinion pressing upon the administration at Washington the necessity of enlarging the American navy so that it should at least equal the British navy.

The object set forth by Mr. Coolidge in summoning the conference was to ascertain whether it was possible to arrive at an arrangement for the further mutual limitation of naval armaments.

The consequences of the failure of this conference were obvious and inevitable. As it was Sir Austen Chamberlain's business to foresee, it introduced an element of distrust into our dealings with the United States. It also left America no other course but to bring her navy at least to parity with that of Britain. x x x

We cannot put back the clock. The fatal blunder has been made and we must bear the consequences, but first it is of the most urgent imperial interest that the new British government, whose arrival cannot be long delayed, should issue a declaration of our naval policy.

In that declaration should be included an explicit repudiation of any scheme for measuring our strength in naval construction against the immensely superior resources of the United States. x x x

The immediate future should see a sharp curtailment in British naval expenditure. What size of fleet the Americans choose to build is no concern of ours. We have not the money to emulate them, and, if we had, it would be most wanton waste to spend it on such useless ends.

REICHSTAG LOPS OFF FUND FOR BATTLESHIP.

Berlin, December 17.—(AP)—The reichstag, which has been debating the reich budget, today adopted by a vote of 36 to 32 a motion introduced by a Prussian deputy that the sum of 2,300,000 marks, the first installment toward construction of a contemplated new battleship, should be deleted from the budget.

The Prussian deputy pointed out that it had been difficult to make the 1928 budget balance and that the second installment of 30,000,000 marks could hardly be raised in 1929, so that construction would last so long the vessel would become obsolete before it was completed.

SCHOOL BUDGET CALLS FOR $369,554 HIKE

could be reviewed and suggestions made.

"Atlanta's schools must have more money," Dr. Eubanks said. "We have operated the schools this year as economically as it was humanly possible, and yet we are faced with a shortage of several thousand dollars, which may mean a slash in teachers' salaries. We hope to avert such a necessity, but we are going to stay within the budget, as we promised the citizens advisory committee."

4 Per Cent Increase.

B. Graham West, city comptroller, estimated the increase at 4 per cent, and stated that as no increase in receipts of the city is contemplated at the present time, it would require about 30 per cent of the city's gross receipts next year to meet it.

Only 16 of the proposed new teachers will be negroes, according to recommendations contained in the budget. The others will be white teachers, 18 of whom are to be added to junior and senior high schools to meet the standard set by the Southern Association of Accredited Schools and Colleges. At the present time the number of students taught by the individual teacher is considerably in excess of the teaching "load" as fixed by the association, and th esize of classes must be reduced to prevent jeopardizing Atlanta's stand in the association, H Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of junior and senior high schools declared.

In addition to consideration of the proposed 1928 budget, the board is expected to instruct Mr. Ritchie to advertise at once for bids for additional units at O'Keefe, Brown and Bass Junior High schools. These, it is estimated will cost more than $500,000.

Car Fare Restriction.

Dr. Eubanks also will ask the board to address a communication to officials of the Georgia Power company calling attention to the restrictive clause of the five-cent street car fare for school children.

He will ask that the fact be pointed out to the company's executives that in many of the schools double, triple and in some even quadruple sessions are held. Students thus go to and from school at all hours of the day and many attend night schools. Under the ruling of the public service commission, the board president will ask that these students be given the benefit of cut rate.

"I do not believe that power company officials realized that in restricting use of the 5-cent rate tickets at 4:45 o'clock in the afternoons that they were discriminating against many hundreds of Atlanta school children, and feel sure that they will amend the restriction in some way to include all children who are legitimately entitled to the low rate," Dr. Eubanks said.

"My belief is that the company executives are perfectly willing for all those who are entitled to the reduction be given it. That is all we shall ask. It seems to me that some method to protect the company and at the same time protect these students can be devised."

HORSE IN MANHOLE PROVES PUZZLING CHICAGO PROBLEM

Chicago, December 17.—(United News.)—A horse fell through a small manhole and into a coal bin and it took firemen, human society officers and miscellaneous "advisers" more than two hours to extricate the animal. The manhole was uncovered and the horse's rear feet slipped through. It was necessary to haul the animal out by the neck.

License To Drive From Back Seat Sold Illiterate

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Newark, N. J., December 17.—James Rooney, negro, wore a broad grin of self-confidence in traffic court when Judge Howe asked if he had a driver's license. He was charged with driving without a license.

Rooney handed up to the judge, with a flourish, a blue card. The judge read intently, and when he finished a grin spread over his face. He read the inscription on the card aloud:

"The bearer is hereby entitled to drive from the back seat during the year 1927."

It was signed: "I Worryem, Commissioner of By-Ways."

A roar of laughter smote the ears of James Rooney and his air of confidence fell away.

"Where did you get this?" asked Judge Howe.

"I took an 'zamination for it," said Rooney, with a worried look. "They drove me around the block three times and asked me some questions. Then I gave them three dollars and they gave me that license. They were colored gentlemen—colored inspectors."

"Can't you read?" asked Judge Howe, still laughing.

"No suh."

Sentence was suspended.

MOTHER OF LINDBERGH WILL FLY TO MEXICO

arms to greet Mrs. Lindbergh and share in her delight at the Christmas reunion with her son, so far from home.

ELATED OVER PROSPECTS OF LONG FLIGHT.

Detroit, December 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Evangeline L. L. Lindbergh, mother of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, tonight definitely announced her intention to fly to Mexico City where she will spend the Christmas holidays with her son and Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow.

"It all happened so quickly," she said, "I never was so thrilled. I had just an inkling of the plans for me last night. I didn't think really we would make the flight but we are going, some time Monday." She will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. William B. Stout.

"I enjoy flying," she told The Associated Press, "and have all the confidence in the world in Mr. Brooks. We expect to make the trip by short flights, and they tell me weather conditions will govern all our flights. We hope to take off from the Ford airport at 10 o'clock Monday morning, but if the weather is unsuitable we will wait, of course."

Mrs. Lindbergh was not certain what plans would be arranged for her while in Mexico, but she expected to return early in January by airplane.

Asked if she preferred flying to a trip by train, she laughed and said, "Why not?"

LINDBERGH WILL ATTEND BULL FIGHT TODAY.

Mexico City, December 17.—(United News.)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbegh, at the end of a day during which 60,000 persons had acclaimed him at a single event, tonight looked forward to a Christmas here with his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh.

Mexico's distinguished visitor, informed by President Calles of Mrs. Lindbergh's decision to fly here for the holidays, was smiling when he entered the national stadium, where more than a thousand school children went through exercises in his honor. While the thousands cheered him at every opportunity, and he bowed his acknowledgements, his thoughts were plainly on Mrs. Lindbergh, in Detroit, and the plan that she should come to Mexico, as he had—by air.

"I consider a flight here by my mother as safe as one by rail," the colonel had said only a short time after President Calles had informed him of Mrs. Lindbergh's acceptance.

Choosing to ignore protests from anti-cruelty societies in the United States, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh will attend a bull fight here tomorrow.

The announcement of Lindbergh's decision was given out in a statement from the United States embassy, detailing the flier's program for the next three days. The bull fight will begin at 3:30 p. m., tomorrow.

Receives Greatest Ovation.

While airplane motors roared overhead and a bright sun lent color to a brilliant spectacle, the Mexican capital at the national stadium today gave Colonel Lindbergh its greatest ovation.

School children, thrilled by the opportunity to pay homage to the airman, were the participants in a spectacle the color and magnificence of which has seldom been surpassed here. Sixty thousand persons packed the stadium, while outside an additional 10,000 fought with guards who were forced to refuse them entrance.

Colonel Lindbergh sat in President Colles' box which was draped in American and Mexican colors. The exercises, sponsored by the department of education, were given by the children who filled the great field. Four bands were stationed near the presidential box and during the exercises there was music, while during intermissions a program of songs was given.

Sometimes as many as 500 children were participating in the games, calisthenics, gymnastics and dances, and after each number the American visitor cheered for the youthful performers. Each number was given directly before Lindbergh and the president.

Every time Lindbergh rose in his box there were thunderous cheers for him. It seemed that the masses in the stadium only waited for the slightest opportunity to burst forth with thousands of cries of "Viva Lindbergh."

REMUS FATE NEAR HANDS OF JURORS

not guilty without adding "On the sole ground of insanity."

If Remus is acquitted because the jury thinks he was insane at the time of the killing he must go into probate court. If he is found not guilty and nothing is said of insanity he may walk out a free man. Unless Judge Shook imposes a jail sentence on the contempt of court citation made this week.

Dodge Assails Defendant.

As both sides rested their cases, Dodge issued a phillipic against the defendant.

Dodge's statement termed Remus "yellow" and "devoid of decent instincts" and was similarly uncomplimentary to the defense witnesses at the trial.

"I have been under subpoena for over 10 days," Dodge said in part, "waiting to be called to testify in the case of the state vs. Remus. The subpoena was issued by the defense. Why they have failed to call me, in view of all their repeated assertions regarding my conduct, about which they know that I would have had no hesitancy in speaking the truth to anyone, anywhere and anytime, I fail utterly to understand."

MISSISSIPPI A. & M. STUDENT STRIKE BELIEVED ENDED

A. and M. College, Miss., December 17.—(AP)—A student strike at Mississippi A. and M college today was believed ended with the return to college tonight of practically all of a group of students, who, it was declared "walked out" in an effort to persuade college authorities to dismiss school today for the Christmas holidays.

The official date for recessing for the holidays was set for next Wednesday and Dr. B. M. Walker, president of the college, declared tonight that school would not turn out before that date. President Walker said a report that 150 students, affecting all classes up to the senior class, had walked out was exaggerated.

RELIGIOUS CASTES IN INDIA CALLED TO DISCUSS UNITY

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Madras, India, December 17.—With the approval of all the heads of the Hindu religious community, Srinivasa Lyengar, president of the Indian national congress, today called a unity conference of all Hindus, including high caste Brahmins and untouchables of all other castes, to discuss plans for removing caste restrictions, which now are the chief obstacles to Indian unity.

The proposal declares that there can be no national unity movement leading to independence unless there is peace and harmony between all Indians, and therefore, no caste, subcaste or other division can be held inferior to any other.

EDWIN BRADBERRY IS HELD IN DEATH OF LAWSON MADDOX

Edwin Bradberry, 16, of 1151 Arlington avenue, was bound over to the Fulton county grand jury under $2,000 bond, in Recorder Murphy M. Holloway's court Saturday afternoon, on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Bradberry, who is employed by a local automobile agency, fatally stabbed T. Lawson Maddox, also an employee of the company, in a friendly scuffle last Tuesday night, according to witnesses.

HOLIDAY PAGEANT TO BE GIVEN TODAY AT SECOND BAPTIST

At 5 o'clock this afternoon the regular hour for the twilight service of the Second Baptist church, the pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, will bring a short, interesting Christmas message, the choir and children will sing, and the Fidelis class of young women will give a pageant on "The Way." Visitors will be welcomed, and every member of church and Sunday school is invited.

The idea of giving will be presented in the pageant, and the next Sunday, December 25, at the morning service in the Sunday school, every class will have the opportunity to bring gifts for the less fortunate. These gifts will be presented by a representative from each class and placed in charge of Ernest F. Brown, who will be ready with automobiles to distribute and return in time for the morning worship at 11 o'clock. L. A. Witherspoon, program chairman, and the Sunday school superintent, John S. Spalding, extend an invitation to members and visitors.

Power Co. To Give Service Buttons to 848 Veterans

Nine men who have been in the service of the Georgia Power company for 40 years or more and more than 600 other employees who have had ten or more years' service will be honored at exercises Wednesday at the Forsyth theater when the company will present gold service buttons to its veteran employees. A total of 848 employees of the company over the state are eligible for the service buttons, 641 of them working in Atlanta.

Heading the 40-year men still in active service is H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board of directors. The others are W. D. Kirk, motorman; J. A. Robinson, in charge of the street railway lost and found department, and J. B. Barnes, colored employee at the gas works. The other five are on the company's annuities rolls, having been retired. They are J. W. Clay, R. P. Crane, Charles F. Jones, William T. Snead and R. C. Thomason.

This will be the first distribution of service buttons to employees of the company, although street car men for some years have worn gold stars indicating periods of service ranging from five to forty years. Employees working elsewhere than Atlanta will be presented with their buttons during the course of the week at exercises presided over by their respective district managers.

Exclusive of employees on the annuities rolls, a total of 31 Atlanta employees have been in service between 30 and 40 years, 190 between 20 and 30 years, and 436 between 10 and 20 years.

Each of the buttons will bear the company seal and slogan, "A Citizen Wherever We Serve," with the distinctive colors for the various periods of service. Those for the 40-year men will be set with a diamond. The 30-year buttons will be gold with green enamel and three stars, those for the 20-year men will be green and maroon with two stars, and the 10-year buttons will be white and green with one star.

P. S. Arkwright, president of the company, will have charge of the meeting and will award the buttons. Short addresses will be made by Mr. Atkinson, W. E. Mitchell, vice president and general manager; G. W. Brine, vice president, and I. S. Mitchell, Jr., treasurer.

"The company is proud of the fact that so many of its employees have been in service for a decade or more and the presentation of these buttons is only a small expression of our appreciation of their loyalty," Mr. Arkwright said Saturday. "It should also be a matter of pride to the communities we serve that these men and women are so interested in the work that many of them remain in it all their lives.

"What we are doing Wednesday is simply to express our appreciation of the great part our veteran employees have had in the building of this company for the service of Georgia."

Army Is Greatest Opponent Of Militarism, Says Davis

Major General, On Speaking Tour, Defends Defense Project

Officers of the United States army insist that there is nothing militaristic in the national defense project of this country, according to Major General Richmond P. Davis, commander of the fourth corps area, who returned this week from a two weeks' tour of Florida and south Georgia. General Davis spoke at many points during his tour and at each place declared that the army, in working to build up the coordinated parts of the national defense fabric, is the greatest of all opponents of militarism. "We do insist," he said, "that our army and navy forces shall bd adequate and ready for any emergency which may arise."

Florida leads the states of the fourth corps area, in reserve activity, General Davis said that staff officers of the area reported to him when he assumed command.

General Davis, in his speeches, cited the provision for a small regular army and universal service in the law enacted by the first congress of the United States, as largely parallel to the present system of defense.

Original Law Disregarded.

The original law, however, was never effective, he pointed out, and because of the general disregard of its observance, this country has never gone into any military emergency with proper preparation.

Outlining the present national defense system, General Davis said that reserve activity consists of three groups, the C. M. T. C., R. O. T. C. and the reserve officers. The national guard, he said, bears close relation both to the regular army as first line troops and to the reserves in being citizen soldiery. The guard, he asserted, is "the connecting link of the triumvirate" and he expressed deep gratification that it is becoming so strong and secure.

"The C. M. T. C. movement," said General Davis, "I consider one of the most progressive, and one of the most important factors in our national life. It had a slow start, just as did the boy scouts, and it is progressing more or less satisfactorily, but not with that spontaneity which should be the rule.

C. M. T. C. Has Dual Function.

"The C. M. T. C. has a dual function. Not only does it begin the preparation of the youngster to take his part when the real emergency arises, but it is a most important agency in developing the idea of citizenship, in building up in the young man high ideals in all of his activities, civilian or military, and in improving to a marked degree his physique—a most important factor for success in any avocation.

"The R. O. T. C. is but a step beyond the C. M. T. C. Older boys and better organized, but the objectives are the same.

"A commission in the reserves is but the last step in building up the reserve activity. And, indeed, we are builders—slowly, but I hope surely.

"Reserve officers may be of great service in spreading the gospel of the C. M. T. C. and the R. O. T. C. in addition to preparing themselves to do the individual parts that may fall to them when called into the service.

Enemies of Preparedness.

"It has not been so very long since the enemies of the C. M. T. C. and C. R. O. T. C. attempted to cripple these activities. I refer to pacifism and communism. These two enemies of preparedness and organized government as we understand it will rise again to do their dreadful work.

"The former, sponsored by deluded but well-intentioned idealists; the latter by direct and deliberate enemies of our government—but in both instances equally destructive.

"We of the army do insist that there is nothing militaristic in our national defense project; that we are the greatest opponents of militarism; and we do insist further that our army and navy forces shall be adequate and ready for any emergency which may arise."

Books Solve Many Gift Problems

DON'T be like the little boy who, when he asked what to give his mother for Christmas and it was suggested that he give her a book, promptly replied, "Oh, but she has a book."

HERE are some new ones—

FOR a man—"The Great Bear," by Lester Cohen, a story of Wheat and Wall Street with a passionate love affair; or "Tall Men," by James Stuart Montgomery, a dramatic story of the Civil War.

FOR a woman—"Rebellion," by Marteel Howe Farnham, the "God-awful Truth About the Possessive Father;" or "The House Made With Hands," a simple but exquisite story; or "Dusty Answer," by Rosamond Lehmann, a remarkable first novel—the soul and emotional struggles of Judith, a modern young woman.

HONEY-FRUIT PIES RESULT OF GENIUS OF MASTER BAKER

"It isn't enough," says Maeterlinck, "to possess a truth; it is essential that the truth should possess us." When the truth—a clear-visioned idea—gets hold of a worker it never lets up until something worth while has been accomplished.

When, after years of intensive effort, "Simon the Pieman," perfected Hubig's famous honey-fruit pies to add joy to the daily menu and make all the feasts of the year finer and fuller, he was simply giving a tangible, definite form to the ideal that haunted his brain day and night.

The Simon Hubig company, which has been built and developed around the highest ideals of truth, has evolved into the largest exclusive pie-making institution in the country, to the edification and delight of not only the "small boy" and the "little girl," but a Christmas pageant, will be given by the entire church organization of the Baptist tabernacle at 7:30 o'clock tonight. The pageant will be under the leadership of Miss Lucile Abbey.

Members of the B. Y. P. U. will act as carolers, the boys and girls of the primary and junior departments will give the Christmas story, and the choir will furnish special musical numbers. The Rev. Will H. Houghton, pastor, will read the Scripture story throughout the pageant.

Living pictures, presenting the entire story, from the promise of the Redeemer to His birth, will be given throughout the program.

Special musical numbers will be given by Thomas Hoffman, Mrs. Kate Heard, Mrs. G. A. Mitchell, J. E. Slider, a trio by Mrs. A. H. Martin, Miss Dorothea McEwen, H. M. Tyler, and a special number by the Tabernacle Double quartet. Mrs. D. L. Wood will be at the organ and Harry Tomar will direct the stringed quartet.

At the close of the program the Christmas love offering will be presented from the Sunday school, W. M. S. and the B. Y. P. U. by Mrs. J. E. Slider, Mrs. J. B. Goodman and Miss Lois Bell.

The public is invited.

TABERNACLE GIVES HOLIDAY PAGEANT AT 7:30 TONIGHT

"Thou Shalt Call His Name Jesus," the enjoyment and welfare of the grown-ups as well.

With a background of six years of pie-baking, Hubig's Famous Honey-Fruit pies have established themselves as the acme of perfection in the pie baker's art. More than half a century of the study of food values and the mixing and baking art are bound to result in something of an unusual nature, and this, coupled with a fixed and unvarying rule of using only the purest ingredients; the handling of all these in the most sanitary manner so as to shield and guard them from any impurities, and then baking them in finest modern daylight bakeries—these are just some of the reasons why the Simon Hubig company has won the popularity it now enjoys.

It is difficult to visualize sixteen million pies, and yet the Simon Hubig company during the last year has baked and sold more than sixteen million of its delectable pastries. Officials of the Simon Hubig company state that the coming year will see this splendid record surpassed. Pies are a particularly apropos Yuletide subject, and thousands of Christmas dinners in the city will be topped off with a generous serving of Hubig's famous banberry mince pies.

Ruth St. Denis And Ted Shawn To Fete Dancers

Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, internationally known dancing stars and instructors, will tender an informal reception this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the ballroom of the Georgian Terrace to local dancing pupils and their friends.

Pupils who attend will be invited to dance before the two stars and wil lreceive the benefit of their advice as to their talents and possible careers.

The Denishawn dancers, pupils of the famous pair, will also be present at the reception. They are appearing with Miss St. Denis and Mr. Shawn in "Ziegfeld's Follies" at the Erlanger this week.

Miss St. Denis and Mr. Shawn are the founders of the first American ballet and creators of many entirely new dance formations and ideas, which may be said to have indicated a radical departure from European dancing standards and traditons.

For six years these stars have toured the United States with their own company, and have but recently returned from a tour of the Orient. In the "Follies" they will introduce many eastern dances not heretofore seen in America, it is said.

GENERAL ELECTRIC CLUB HOLDS FIRST SOCIAL GATHERING

The first general meeting of the General Electric club, organized last July to provide means for social contact between employees in the service shop and warehouse of the company, was held at 6 o'clock Saturday night at the Henry Grady hotel.

The meeting was given over to a speaking program, led by H. C. Bussey, district engineer of the company. Other speakers included C. E. Mohns, of the engineering department; G. H. Coker, and H. F. Burdett.

Business meetings of the organization are held fortnightly at the plant, but the Saturday night affair was the first social function.

Officers of the club are: H. F. Palmer, president; J. F. Evers, secretary, and A. H. Rives, treasurer.

6 Days to Buy Gifts at Davison-Paxon's

To the Women of Atlanta—

Wednesday evening, December 21, from 5:30 until 9 o'clock, this store will be open to MEN ONLY to do their Christmas shopping—for their mothers, wives, daughters, sweethearts, and mothers-in-law.

This is a good time for men to take their children and buy presents for mother, for they have all to themselves those departments in which the majority of attractive things for women are found and which are, usually, very embarrassing for men to shop in.

The entire store is theirs this one night—the gift shop, the lingerie shop with its wealth of dainty silken underwear, silk hosiery department, jewelry, and leather goods—every department—as well as Toytown in the basement. The men's departments will also be open for those purchases men may want to make.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW SET FOR JANUARY

The Atlanta Automobile association will sponsor a Southeastern Automobile show at the auditorium-armory January 23 to 28, 1928, inclusive, it was announced by the exposition's management Saturday.

The show, which is expected to be the largest ever conducted in the southeast, will be under direction of F. B. Steward, leader in exposition work, with Robert H. Martin, prominent automobile dealer, as general chairman.

A full organization from the ranks of the automobile association has been completed to attend to details of the automobile show, which will display the latest models of the nation's foremost cars and improvements and innovations in the automotive industry to Atlantans.

Committees Formed.

Headquarters of the show now is located at Parlor F of the Ansley hotel, and the list of exposition committees is composed of the following widely known automobile and accessory leaders:

Show Committee—R. H. Martin, chairman; J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., John E. Smith and H. H. Alexander.

Space Committee—D. C. Black, chairman; Floyd Northcutt and Charles LeRoux.

Contest Committee—Lon Credelle, chairman.

Truck Committee—T. P. Hicks, chairman.

Accessory Committee—W. D. Alexander, Jr., chairman; W. R. Minnich and J. R. Cheshire.

Publicity Committee—Charles LeRoux, chairman; "Buddy" Coghill, William Cherry and H. M. Van Devender.

Ticket Committee—R. N. Reed, chairman.

Entertainment Committee—L. D. Hicks, chairman.

Budget and Audit Committee—H. H. Alexander, chairman.

Many Companies Aiding.

As evidence of the wholehearted support which the automobile show is being accorded, the management Saturday announced that the following automobile houses have signed up for display space:

The Buick company, Reo Sales and Service, Inc., Star Motor company, Willys-Overland, Inc., Goldsmith-Becker company, Thompson-Cauthorn company, Paige Company of Georgia, Olds Motor Works, Martin Nash company, Jordan Company of Georgia, John Smith company, Marmon Atlanta company and Lambeth-Eskridge company.

Accessory firms which are supporting the movement to date are the Southern Bearing and Parts company, Georgia Motorist, E. M. Thomas company, Auto Top and Manufacturing company, Auto Electric and Magneto company and Alexander-Sewald and company.

Ticket-Selling Event.

Fifty cents admission to the exposition will be charged, and the management will stage a contest for women ticket-sellers, with $500 in four prizes to be awarded those whose sales run highest.

Already included in this contest are 13 well-known young women, these being Miss Frances Ann Burns, 1109 West Peachtree street; Miss Mildred Harding, 1384 West Peachtree street; Miss Sue Medlock, 915 Drewry street, N. E.; Miss Sarah Claude Bergren, 231 Gibson street; Miss Jessie Mae Jones, 451 Glenwood avenue; Miss Sara Kendrick, 946 Drewry street; Miss Marchenia Hilderbrand, 680 Spring street; Mrs. Augusta Baker Bloodworth, 1145 Briarcliff place, N. E.; Miss Alma E. Jones, 1023 Ponce de Leon avenue; Miss Thelma Huff, 1041 West Peachtree street, N. E.; Mrs. J. D. Ennis, 831 Ponce de Leon avenue; Miss Margaret Housholder, 915 Capitol avenue, S. Auto Parade Is Staged To Aid Ten Neediest Families of City

These automobiles, contributed to the "Ten Opportunities" fund by D. C. Black, Buick dealer, paraded through downtown Atlanta Saturday afternoon behind the Atlanta Police band. A detachment of mounted officers cleared the way through holiday throngs for this procession, staged by The Constitution in behalf of the city's ten neediest families.

These cars, now on display at the Black company, will be knocked down to the highest bidder when the "Opportunity" appeal closes Tuesday morning. Send in a bid to The Constitution. Every penny will go to the city's very poor.

OPPORTUNIY "5" TAKEN BY RICH'S SOCIAL CLUB

by The Constitution up to 7 o'clock Saturday night:

"Opportunity" No. 1—This little family, which is in need of $455 to insure a livelihood during 1928, has been fully cared for by miscellaneous subscriptions.

"Opportunity" No. 2—Mrs. T——; Sonny, a cripple, and little sister Sue, now have approximately $150 to their credit. They still lack $600 to feed and shelter them for the coming year.

"Opportunity" No. 3—The Civitan club of Atlanta has subscribed for this family in full.

"Opportunity" No. 4—This widow and five little children have been given $250 by a prominent Atlanta business man who asked that his name be withheld. William Fisch, of the Ocean Surf Pool company, has pledged $10 a month for 1928. Just $150 additional will make up the budget. Tubercular infection has spread through this home. They need nourishing food and adequate shelter if they are to survive the winter, doctors say.

"Opportunity" No. 5 has been subscribed in full by the Rich's social club.

"Opportunity" No. 6—This family lacks the entire amount of $465, necessary to keep bodies and souls together for the coming year. The widow has been deserted, and she is not strong enough to provide for her five little ones.

"Opportunify" No. 7—This family, an invalid widow and three children, Bessie, Betty and Billie, will receive $10 a month from Miss Julia Hall, but lack of $456 with which to carry on the business of living for another year. These youngsters are bright and promising, yet they cannot hope to develop on their present fare.

PLEDGES ARE MADE EVEN AT SACRIFICE.

Two pledges of $5 a month have been received. Generosity like this is made at sacrifice to the benefactor—but it means life itself to the beneficiary.

Have you done as much for the poor as the salesmen and saleswomen of Rich's, on whose competence you rely for a joyful Christmas of giving? Have you looked beyond your own hearth in providing holiday bounties? Perhaps you can better afford generosity than these 350 department store workers.

Saturday's mail brought a $25 check from H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board, Georgia Power company; another for $50 from a prominent woman who asked to remain anonymous, and $25 checks each from the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce and Horton Brothers.

Another generous check was inclosed in a letter from the president of a leading marble company here, who also pledged $5 a month during 1928 to one of the ten needy families.

AGED CABINET-MAKER GIVES.

Mr. Atkinson, a generous contributor to the "Ten Opportunities" since its inception, heartily indorsed the appeal.

One letter, on the sheet of which was pinned a $5 bill, came from a Macon contributor with the words: "Sorry I'm not rich, but maybe this will help."

Another contributor to the fund was an elderly German cabinet-maker. "Give this to Mrs. T——, Sonny and Sister Sue," he said, handing over a dollar, "—and a merry Christmas to them all."

Miscellaneous subscriptions totalling $228 were received Saturday, in addition to the Rich's social club contribution.

Among these were included:

$10—O. R.
$1—Anonymous.
$10—Mrs. C. A. Woods.
$5—Mrs. W. A. Watson.
$5—J. B. Summerlin.
$1—Anonymous.
$5—A Friend.
$5—J. L. H.
$1—Gus Reich.

BIDS ARE RECEIVED ON AUTOMOBILES.

Of numerous bids received Saturday on the six used cars contributed to the "Ten Opportunities" fund by D. C. Black, Buick dealer, the following were the highest:

No. 1—Buick 6, $40, by Mrs. Bertha Bettis, of 250 Hayden street.

No. 2—Overland 4, Red Bird, $40, by Charles A. Burns, of Emory University, Ga.

No. 3—Essex 4, coach, $35, by Mrs. Viola Smith, 337 Gray street.

No. 4—Ford touring, $20, by Mrs. Odell Godfrey, 76 Batchlor avenue.

No. 5—Apperson 8, 7-passenger sedan, $80, was bid Friday by W. M. Digby.

No. 6—Hanson sedan, $15, by J. C. Beshers, 352 Marietta street.

All of these automobiles are in first-class running condition. They are now on display at the Black company, 329 Peachtree street. Go in and look them over; a salesman will point them out to you. Send in a bid to The Constitution, in care of the "Ten Opportunities" editor.

Remember that every penny derived from their sale will go directly toward furnishing 10 widows and 50 little children with the necessities of life for a year to come.

Saturday's bids showed a substantial increase over those of the previous day, yet the amounts offered are only a small part of the appraised value of each car. The highest bids will be published daily, with the automobiles to go to those who have offered most when the "opportunity" appeal closes Tuesday morning.

now available, it will mean wholesome food for growing children, a livable shelter from the weather, fuel for the fireplace and adequate clothing.

A sum of $364 will give them a living for 12 months to come, or $182 will tide them through the winter and well into the summer. Any amount will be more than welcome.

This splendid mother, and Alma, Grace, Leon, Mary and Imogene—their desperate plight is your "Opportunity" No. 8.

FRANCE AND U. S. MAY REDRAFT ROOT PACT

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Conversations here with relation to the anti-war treaty proposals made by France are tending towards the view that the subject can be best treated in extending or redrafting the Root arbitration treaty between the two countries which expires February 27.

It was said at the state department today that this appeared to be the "most logical" method of insuring continued peace between France and the United States but it was emphasized that the American viewpoint did not contemplate a blanket commitment to arbitrate questions of every character.

MUSSOLINI OUTLINES NEW PACT WITH FRANCE.

Rome, December 17.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini presented to the council of ministers today a scheme for carrying out the provisions of a Franco-Italian modus vivendi.

The plan calls for the regulation of the treatment of the nationals of each country in the territory of the other until the conclusion of a special convention on that subject, or if the convention is not concluded before, until June 1, 1928.

MEXICAN CO. RESUMES EL EBANO DRILLING

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Tampico, Mexico, December 17.—The Mexican Petroleum company has resumed oil production and drilling in the El Ebano field, near this city, following the recent decision of the Mexican supreme court enjoining the government from interfering with the company's operations in the Mexican oil fields.

Although only a few laborers, skilled mechanics and engineers are at work, officials of the company have indicated that within the next few weeks the El Ebano operations will assume the same proportions of last year when work was suspended because of the regulatory decree of President Calles. El Ebano is one of the richest oil-producing sections of the Huasteca field. It is known as a "Doheny property."

Other large producing companies which suspended operations at the same time as the Mexican Petroleum company, have not re-opened their oil camps, but it is believed here these companies will follow the action of the Mexican company early in the new year.

RUTH TO DEDICATE ANNISTON'S NEW AIR PORT TUESDAY

Anniston, Ala., December 17.—(AP) Ruth Elder will dedicate Anniston's new air port Tuesday, the day she will arrive for her first visit to her parents since her "glorious failure" at a trans-Atlantic crossing with George Haldeman in the "American Girl."

The dedication ceremonies will climax an all-day celebration in honor of the girl pilot. Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama, will be present with his staff to take part in the demonstration.

CHRISTMAS MAIL FROM OVERSEAS BEGINS ARRIVING

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—The tidal wave of Christmas mail from overseas is beginning to make itself felt and promises to be the greatest in volume ever handled.

Word was received at the postoffice department today from New York that the White Star liner Majestic, due Tuesday from Southampton, was bringing 17,664 bags of mail, the largest consignment ever received at New York from one steamship. Christmas gifts by parcel post comprise 3,100 bags of the consignment.

MONEY IS SOUGHT FOR RURAL GROUP SETTLEMENT PLAN

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—The interior department has been asked by the southern reclamation conference to petition congress for an appropriation to carry out a program of planned group settlements in rural sections of the south.

The conference stipulated that if such funds were obtained they be so safeguarded that within a reasonable time the money would find its way back into the treasury.

The department recently completed a survey of southern states to ascertain if model farm communities would not be feasible and advisable. After a study of the survey and four initial experiments made by the bureau of reclamation the conference voted to ask congress for funds to expand the work.

"ON WITH BLOOMERS OR OFF WITH DANCE" IS ORDER OF POLICE

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Sterling, Ill., December 17.—"On with the bloomers, or off with the dance." That's what Police Commissioner George Thomas, of this city, has ordered to operators of all public dance halls.

The girls' wearing apparel, or lack of it, leave nothing to imagination while dancing, according to Commissioner Thomas. The order was issued last night and has been affirmed by the commissioner. It is understood corsets and bloomers have been left in the check room. An inspector will be appointed to enforce the ruling and many have applied for the job.

RAIL MAGNATE LEAVES $10,000,000 ESTATE

Chicago, December 17.—(AP)—The late Frank L. Sout, lumber and railroad magnate, left an estate of $10,000,000, an inventory of assets filed in probate court today, showed. The inventory listed personal property valued at $10,216 and a balance of $8,920.08 in a Chicago bank.

DANES SEEK RADIO STATION GIVING OUT "RED" PROPAGANDA

Copenhagen, Denmark, December 17. (AP)—The Danish authorities are trying to find a foreign broadcasting station which they have been informed is broadcasting bolshevist propaganda.

Professor William Rung, of the Polytechnic academy, by chance recently picked up an unidentified station believed to be in or near Denmark whence lectures on soviet doctrine were issued in the Danish language.

BOMBING PLANES PREPARE ATTACK ON $250,000 BRIDGE

Fort Bragg, N. C., December 17.—(AP)—Eleven United States army bombing planes and one observation plane arrived here at Pope Field today from Langley Field, Va., preparatory to taking off early next week for attacking Swift island bridge over Peedee river near Albemarle.

The squadron will be separated into four flights for the attack. The bombers for the last few weeks had been preparing for their part in the destruction of the bridge during the annual bombing practice program at Langley Field.

Destruction of the $250,000 concrete bridge, the Bragg officers told the Associated Press tonight, will be one of the best tests for modern aerial warfare.

FALL OF RUMANIAN RULE IMMINENT

Grosswardein, Roumania, December 17.—The fall of Rumanian government within a couple of months seems certain.

Discredited by the trial of M. Manoilescu, former Crown Prince Carol's agent, shaken by the internal and external reaction against the students' riots at Grosswardein, lacking the leadership of the late Premier Jon Bratiano, who alone is credited with direction of the Rumanian nation and dynasty in the last 16 years and divided by differences between the members of the cabinet itself, suffusing throughout the country economic paralysis, the government already is showing signs of disintegration.

This means the dissolution of parliament and new elections as demanded by the leader of the opposition M. Maniu, generally regarded as the logical successor to the premiership.

M Maniu has pledged himself to allow the people of Rumania, if Prince Carol demands, to settle the question for all time whether the black sheep crown prince returns as regent or king.

Embarrassed by the bad impression from the student riots, and especially by the Keller case, at home and abroad, it is reported that M. Manoilescu, who for years has been working to create good will between Rumania, England and America, is threatening to resign.

The opposition is openly making capital of the disturbance, as M. Maniu bitterly condemns the policy of the government, from the economic program, returning private debts to foreigners under foreign control to Rumanian enterprises, down to the treatment of minorities.

Harrison Seeks Probe.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—An investigation of the activities of the administration of the Rogers act reorganizing the foreign service was asked today by Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi. Chairman Borah of the committee indorsed the proposed investigation.

ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION OR YOUR MONEY BACK

COMMITTEE HEARS SMITH JANUARY 7

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Granting the request of Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, for postponement until after the Christmas holidays of hearings on his right to the senate seat temporarily denied him last week, the senate campaign funds committee today fixed January 7 for his appearance.

In addition the committee decided to hear on that day Samuel Insull, Chicago public utilities official, and his personal counsel, Daniel T. Schuyler, who now desire to purge themselves of contempt by reason of their refusal to tell the names of the persons to whom Insull gave around $40,000 for use in the Illinois senatorial campaign in 1926.

Upon their first two appearances before the committee, once in Chicago, and once in Washington, Insull and Schuyler told fully of their contributions to Smith's primary campaign fund and also of donations of other sums in that campaign on behalf of George Brennan, defeated democratic candidate for senator, and for propaganda against the world court.

They refused, however, to go into their contributions on the ground that they did not relate to the senatorial contest.

FIND 11 BALLOT BOXES MISSING IN PA.

Media, Pa., December 17.—(AP)—Eleven Delaware county ballot boxes and the 1926 general election ballots they are supposed to have contained are missing and one box from the city of Chester was turned in empty except for the voters' check list, it was disclosed today as court clerks continued removing the ballots and election paraphernalia of each precinct to paper containers for use of the United States senate.

The contents of all ballot boxes in the state are to be sent to Washington for use in the election contest brought by William B. Wilson, democrat, against William S. Vare, republican, who holds the certificate of election as United States senator.

Monroe County Nonagenarian Doesn't Feel Old

Juliette, Ga., December 17.—Mrs. Eliza Hill Manry, a lifelong resident of the Goggans community, Monroe county, has recently observed her ninetieth birthday. Despite her advanced age, Mrs. Manry says she does not feel old. She is always actively engaged in various household duties, being especially fond of sewing. She is also fond of reading and at present is enjoying Thackeray's "Book of Snobs."

Mrs. Manry is the only daughter of Major Joseph Hill and Delaney Waller Hill, and was born and reared on a farm near Goggans that was given to her mother in 1832 by Mrs. Hill's father, the late Henry Waller, of Putnam county. Mrs. Manry still owns this property.

Among the messages received by her on her birthday was a letter from her grandson, Wellington Wright, former New York newspaperman, who is now engaged in literary work in Paris, France, and a cable greeting from another grandson, Dupont Wright, who is London correspondent of the New York Times.

Aghan King Travels.

Bombay, India, December 17.—(AP) King Amanullah, of Afghanistan, and his wife, accompanied by their suite, left here today aboard the steamship Rajputana for Europe. The majesties passed through Indian en route to their European visit.

Hollywood Too Lonesome

:: "PEOPLE DON'T UNDERSTAND ME," HE SAYS ::

So Scarface Goes Home

Chicago, December 17.—(United News.)—Beneath the automatic pistol which Scarface Al Capone wears under his left arm there beats a heart of gold.

A kitchen apron he prefers to a bullet-proof vest as wearing apparel. The Christmas spirit flows through him as his beer flows in the polished pipes of Chicago bars. And as for civic pride—why Al just can't be happy away from Chicago's noise and soot and parks, to say nothing of its police and its gambling houses.

"People don't understand me," the overlord of vice complained to his friends today.

Thus it was that Scarface Al, the sentimentalist, revealed his true reason for risking police threats and jail cells to return to Chicago from Los Angeles where he had intended to spend a long vacation.

He found warm sunlight, and it was nearly Christmas and he should have been cold. Blue skies instead of gray. Orange juice but no gin. And his two children were far away in Chicago waiting for Santa Claus, and no daddy to kiss on Christmas morning.

Al just could not stand it. He called his two gangster guards, and they put their automatics in their pockets and hit for home.

Then, too, there was the strong intimation of Los Angeles police that Chicago gunmen didn't fit into the peaceful atmosphere of sunny southern California, where only bona-fide citizens of Hollywood are allowed to shoot each other, and then only with the highest motives.

Besides, there was, according to rumors spreading about Chicago, a communication from powerful interests here that it would be well to return. But that, too, was a little story of Christmas.

It was revealed soon after Capone left Chicago for the coast that he expected to save $100,000 in Christmas presents by being far from Lake Michigan when the Christmas carols floated on the breeze.

That $100,000 is the total of Capone's usual Christmas gifts to politicians and ward "heelers", to gangsters and gunmen, and, by popular repute, to policemen.

The rumor today was that one of the numerous interests affected was unwilling to let Santa Claus sneak out of town without a struggle and sent word to Capone in Los Angeles that unless he came home—"and came through" various and unexpected things might happen to his speak-easies and hotels and other business institutions.

LIST THREE GEORGIANS ON ILL-FATED SUB

the usual Christmas campaign against rum runners when it rammed the submersible.

The destroyer was traveling at 18 knots when the crash occurred. Meager reports reaching coast guard headquarters here told how the crew of the Paulding first sighted a periscope under its port bow after the collision.

Scarcely had the crash occurred, when the submarine disappeared. Only an oil slick marked the scene of the disaster as the Paulding, damaged almost to the danger point, limped toward shore.

Later a buoy was placed in the waters, under which more than two score seamen were believed trapped in the battered hulk of what had been one of the navy's veteran submarines.

While the salvage fleet, hastily assembled from the various naval bases nearest the scene of the disaster, swung into action, more rescue craft, under government orders, were speeding to Provincetown from more distant points.

During the first two hours that followed the crash, only a scattered crowd watched operations from the crescent sands of Cape Cod, for few residents of Provincetown and other cape hamlets were aware that a major disaster had occurred at their very door.

But as the news spread, wildfire-like, hundreds swarmed onto the beach over a two-mile stretch, able to see but little in the darkness which had settled over the whirling waters that lashed the cape.

Divers Expected.

A score of coast guard craft and private boats, aided by giant searchlights, tonight were scattered around the buoy-marked spot where the submarine went down, watching the bleak waters with vague hope.

Meanwhile, the submarine S-9 and the submarine tenders Falcon and Bushnell, were proceding to the scene, expecting to arrive early tomorrow.

The mine-sweepers Lark and Mallard had been ordered to Provincetown from the Charlestown navy yard, but this order subsequently was rescinded and it was believed the destroyer Sturtevant would come here instead.

Ten coast guard destroyers were reported in New London, Conn., harbor, available for service.

Other coast guard and naval craft also were prepared to speed to Provincetown to cooperate in the salvage work.

Divers were expected to reach here late tonight to prepare for work tomorrow.

Wind Hampers Work.

The wind, which was blowing about 25 miles northwest at the time of the collision, became brisker as the evening wore on.

At 9 p. m., it was blowing about 35 miles and appeared to be growing toward almost gale force.

Fear was felt by coast guard officials that the wind might seriously hamper the salvage work, which was not expected to get actually under way before dawn.

As the wind increased, making the sea even more rough, small boats which had gone to the scene of the crash for an all-night vigil, scurried to havens of safety.

A falling mercury added to the discomfort of the salvage workers, who awaited impatiently the arrival of equipment which would make it possible to start the forlorn task of reaching the submerged craft.

Under the moonless sky the larger salvage boats continued their vigil while hundreds of persons who had gathered along the shore for a distant glimpse of the operations, left the beach.

The gleam of many searchlights against the distant sky was all that could be seen from the shore after darkness settled over the restless waters of the cape.

No new reports had come to the Wood End coast guard station and it was believed the rescue boats had found nothing to indicate in what manner the ill-starred submarine was damaged.

MESSAGE SAYS CREW SANK WITH SUB.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Admiral Hughes, chief of naval operations, was informed by the navy yard at Boston at 6:19 p. m. that no one had been rescued from the S-4.

At 7:40 tonight the navy department announced that it had been officially advised that a four-hour search for survivors of the submarine S-4, rammed today off Provincetown, Mass., by the coast guard destroyer Paulding, had proved futile.

The navy yard reported that the Paulding was traveling 18 knots an hour when she struck the submarine. Admiral Hughes announced that an oil slick had been found where the submarine was struck and the position had been marked.

The officer in charge of the S-4, Lieutenant Commander Roy K. Jones, and other officers on board, Lieutenants J. A. McKinley, D. Weller and G. N. Fitch, all made their homes in this city.

Naval men at the base estimated that the collision between the Paulding and the S-4 occurred in water between 150 and 200 feet in depth.

Of the four officers listed in navy department records as members of the S-4 crew, Lieutenant Commander R. K. Jones, in command, is recorded as from Hennessey, Okla., with his wife and two children residing at Halethorpe, Md.

Lieutenant J. McKinkley is listed from Norristown, Pa., his wife living at San Diego, Calif. Lieutenant Graham Newell Fitch, is a native of Washington, D. C. His mother and wife live here.

Lieutenant Donald Wecler is listed as a native of Los Angeles. His wife and mother live at 1429 Southwest Moreland avenue, Los Angeles.

In addition to the S-4's officers, navy department records show the following enlisted men, some of whom might not have been on the vessel when it met with mishap, were assigned to the submarine:

Clarence Ferdinand Bethke, engineman, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis. Mother, Clara Bethke, 403 Fifth avenue, north, Wisconsin Rapids.

Walter Bishop, radio man. Wife, Dorothy Thelma Bishop, at 1228 Pennsylvania avenue, S. E., Washington.

Earl Welsh Boone, chief electrician's mate. Wife, Mrs. Josephine Y. Boone, 499 North Los Robles, Pasadena, Calif.

Henry Handy Brown, fireman, Father, Young Samuel Brown, lives at 701 Sultana drive, Fitzgerald, Ga.

Carl Harold Thompson, engineer. Wife, Marie Thompson, 625 Greenwich street, San Francisco.

Walter Ross Tolson, seaman, sister, Gladys Bright, Fountain City, Tenn.

Henry Handy Brown, fireman. Father, Young Samuel Brown, lives at 701 Sultana drive, Fitzgerald, Ga.

James Johnson White, fireman, mother, Mrs. Nannie White, Rockmart, Ga.

Rudolph James Rose, electrician's mate, father, Roger Rose, Delia, Alberta, Canada.

Frank Snizek, torpedo man, mother, Katherine Snizek, 8 Edison street, Ridgefield Park, N. J.

Roger Leslie Short, torpedo man, mother, Minnie G. Short, 804 Spring street, Boonville, Mo.

Donald Fred Goerling, electrician's mate, mother, Mrs. Celia Goerling, 225 York street, Vallejo, Calif.

Peder Haaland, machinist's mate, brother, Oscar Haaland, Ada, Minn.

Aaron Albert Hudges, chief machinist's mate, brother, John S. Hodges, Riverside, Calif.

Arthur Frederick Hodges, machinist's mate, mother, Mrs. Sophie Kenerson, New London, Conn.

Daniel Michael Galvin, fireman, brother, Joseph Galvin, 485 West 135th street, New York.

EXCITEMENT IN CAPITAL; WILBUR SEES COOLIDGE.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—The capital was swept with excitement tonight by word of the sinking of the submarine S-4 off Provincetown.

Although lacking detailed advices, the navy department went immediately into action, ordering Captain Adolphus Andrews, commanding the submarine base at New London, Conn., to dispatch all available vessels to the scene of the disaster.

Secretary Wilbur's first act upon being notified tonight of the sinking of the submarine was to tell President Coolidge of the disaster.

Mr. Coolidge expressed his regret, the secretary said in a statement issued later, and his intense anxiety over the fate of the members of the crew, inquiring as to rescue methods and meaures. Mr. Wilbur added that he told the president everything possible was being done to get the men out alive.

As soon as word reached the navy department that the S-4 had met with disaster, clerks were summoned to prepare lists of the craft's muster roll. Admiral Hughes, chief of naval operations, remained on the job tonight and was in frequent communication by telephone with the Boston navy yard and other naval posts along the north Atlantic seaboard.

Coast Guard Active.

At coast guard headquarters there also was activity, although official advices, beyond those describing that the Paulding thought she had rammed the S-4 and had made Provincetown harbor with her hold full of water, were meager.

The sinking of the S-4 was viewed by naval officers here as the worst disaster in the navy since S-51 was sunk September 25, 1925, after a collision with the steamer City of Rome. The S-51 had a crew of 31 men and six officers, and 28 enlisted men and all the officers were lost. The S-51 was engaged in engineering operations at the time of the collision off Block Island.

Among the experts ordered to the scene of the collision was Captain E. J. King, who had an important part in the raising of the S-51. He was instructed to proceed by plane from Norfolk, Va., to New London, and arrangements were made to have him hustled on from there to the rescue operations.

Tonight orders went forward from Secretary Wilbur to Vice Admiral Ashley H. Robertson, commander of the scouting fleet whose flagship, the battleship Wyoming, is at Philadelphia, to dispatch to the scene whatever cruisers and destroyers under his command he believes could be of use.

LISASTER RECALLS OTHER OCEAN TRAGEDIES.

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Submersible fighting craft, while forming a comparatively small part of the world's great navies, have furnished some of the outstanding marine disasters of the past decade.

The last great disaster was the loss of the S-51 off Block Island, R. I., when 34 men were killed in the sinking of the submarine in a collision with the City of Rome, September, 1925.

Other accidents to underseas craft, as shown by the Associated Press records, were:

The American submarine O-5, in collision with a steamer at the Atlantic ocean entrance to the Panama canal in 1923; three men lost.

In 1915, at Honolulu, loss of 22 officers and men of the F-4.

In December, 1922, 42 men were trapped eight hours under water when the S-48 went to the bottom with an open hatch. All were rescued. The accident happened on a trial cruise off Bridgeport, Conn.

In August, 1923, a new unnamed Japanese undersea boat sank on its first trial trip at Kobe, with the largest recorded loss in submarine history, 85 men were killed when the craft listed and sank.

49 Die In Jap Sub.

March 19, 1924, 49 lives were lost on the Japanese submarine No. 43 in collision with the Japanese battleship Tutsuta off Susebo.

January 10, 1924, 43 officers and men of the British submarine L-24 were lost off Portland, Eng., in a collision with the British dreadnought Resolution.

In September, 1925, the Italian submarine Sebastiano Veneiro was lost during maneuvers off Sicily, with 50 men aboard.

On March 23, 1922, during war games off Gibraltar, a British submarine with 23 men aboard, was rammed and sunk by a British destroyer.

In 1918 a British submarine sank in the English channel, and during the war numerous German underwater boats were lost and never recovered.

On January 30, 1925, the American S-48 grounded off Portsmouth, N. H., in a snow storm, but was floated the next day, and during the same month the S-19 grounded for a short time off Cape Cod.

An accident at the Brooklyn navy yard in 1916 caused four death and many injuries to members of the crew on board the United States navy E-2. The accident was caused by an explosion.

The explosion of gas in the storage battery compartment of the U. S. submarine S-49 at New London, Conn., killed three men and injured nine others, April 4, 1926.

SEES HOPE TO RESCUE MEN IN DEATH TRAP.

New London, Conn., December 17. (United News.)—Some of the men trapped in the shattered hulk of the sunken submarine S-4 may be taken out alive, in the opinion of Captain Adolphus Andrews, commander of the submarine base here.

He told the United News tonight that there was a "great possibility" that members of the submersible's crew were alive and that some might be rescued.

"Provided the S-4 were not crushed in such a manner as to be entirely flooded," he said, "the members of the crew probably would have an air supply sufficient to sustain life for about 72 hours.

"If the S-4 were rammed amidships, the chances of any of its crew escaping alive would appear very remote, but if the submarine were struck on the bow or stern, the immediate closing of bulkheads might easily save them from drowning."

NAVY DIVERS SENT TO AID IN RESCUE WORK.

Newport, R. I., December 17.—(AP) Eleven divers from the diving school of the Naval Torpedo station under command of Lieutenant F. E. Mathews, started for Provincetown, Mass., tonight to take part in the attemtp to rescue the crew of the United States submarine S-4, which was rammed and sunk by the coast guard destroyer Paulding today.

The divers expected to arrive at the scene of the disaster by daybreak, where they will join the submarine tender Falcon, which left New London with diving equipment.

The detachment is making the trip by motor, three trucks carrying equipment besides the personnel. Rhode Island state police escorted the naval trucks to the Massachusetts line, to expedite their journey, and in Massachusetts police of that state performed a similar service.

UNABLE TO ESTIMATE TIME CREW MAY LIVE.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Naval officers said they were unable to estimate how long the crew of the S-4 could survive if not brought to the surface. They declared it was impossible to make calculations until it could be established what reserve of air there was in the rammed submarine.

In the case of the S-51, run down off Block Island by the "City of Rome," it was possible, they said, to figure air conditions in the submarine, because she had been running on the surface and had a good supply of air.

If the S-4 had been submerged for some time, they said, she probably was running short of air and this condition would mitigate against the crew trapped in her hull.

The coastguard reported to the navy department that the captain of the Paulding did not know the submarine was near until her periscope appeared off the port bow.

SCIENTISTS DEBATE MAN'S ANTECEDENTS

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Whether man is descended from the great apes or whether recently discovered evidence indicates entire elimination of the ape from human ancestry was debated by scientists at the Academy of Medicine last night.

Henry Fairfield Osborn, of the Museum of Natural History, held the ape and man had no connection. The ape mode of arboreal locomotion in the forests has produced a very specialized type of hand, foot and limb proportions, which absolutely precludes the possibility of this type giving rise to the human foot or limb, he said.

Professor William K. Gregory, of Columbia university, disagreeing, said Dr. Osborn's "intense application to the study of fossil horses and elephants had led him to infer that because horses of the lower oligocene age were unmistakable horses in the making so the entirely hypothetical lower oligocene dawn men would equally be men in the making and widely different from apes."

agencies engaging in the 54-hour search.

Among the notes received by the parents, were two or three signed by their daughter, expressing a tearful desire to get home and pleading with her father to accede to the demands of her captors. She said she would die if forced to "endure this much longer."

It is presumed she was even then under torture. On the notes signed by the child was a postscript signed, "George Fox," the name used by her captor in all his communications. In all communications from him, the Parkers were warned to "use good judgment," and the sinister postscript that "the affair must end one way or another within 72 hours.

home here and remained for about five months. He then entered the navy and for almost eight years has been on duty.

Fred never stayed out late at night, Mr. O'Shields said, but there was one night, ten years ago, he did not come home. His mother was worried, and the father, remembering his own youth and The Call suspected.

A news item in the paper told them the story of their boy's enlistment in the army.

War is Declared.

His mother was unwilling to give up her boy so Mr. O'Shields went down to the recruiting station to claim him as a minor, but found that Fred already had been sent to Cincinnati.

The next day America declared war on Germany.

Shortly after he entered the navy he won distinction in the target field and was given a year's promotion for excellence with the four-inch guns.

In addition to his parents, he has four sisters, all of Atlanta. They are: Mrs. Walter Parr, Mrs. H. D. Lawson, wife of a city police officer; Mrs. Will Timbs and Mrs. J D Davis.

MOTHER OF VICTIM LIVES IN ROCKMART.

Rockmart, Ga., December 17.—(Special.)—James Johnson White, one of the victims of the S-4 submarine disaster, left Rockmart five years ago, at the age of 17, to join the navy. He was the son of J E White. He has returned but once, at the time of his father's death, about two years ago.

In addition to his mother, White is survived by three brothers, Frank, Charles and Horace, all of Rockmart, and three sisters, Ruby White, of Rockmart, and Mrs. L C Hulsey, of Rockmart, Mrs. L. G. Hulsey, of Temple, Ga.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LX., No. 186. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 18, 1927.

HARRIS AGAIN WILL OPPOSE NAMING TILSON

Expresses Belief That 95 Per Cent of Georgians Are Against Appointment as Judge.

NOMINATION NOT GIVEN TO SENATE

Senior Senator Successfully Fought Selection at the Last Session of Congress.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Georgia senators will continue their opposition to the confirmation by the senate of the appointment of Joseph Tilson, of Atlanta, as federal judge for the middle district of Georgia if the name should be resubmitted by President Coolidge, Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, said today.

A statement issued by Senator Harris, reviewing the history of the Tilson case and expressing the belief that 95 per cent of the people of Georgia approved of his opposition, said:

"The day after congress passed the act creating the middle judicial district of Georgia Senator George and I went to see the president and told him that we had heard that Ben Davis, the negro national committeeman from Georgia, had endorsed Mr. Joe Tilson, of Atlanta, for United States judge of the new district. We told the president in the most courteous and respective manner that we were not urging the appointment of anyone, but as there were hundreds of able lawyers in the new district, well fitted to discharge the duties of judge, we sincerely hoped he would appoint the judge from among them; that however much we would regret having to oppose the president's nominee, we would feel it out duty to oppose the confirmation of Mr. Tilson, or anyone else who did not reside in the district at the time. We were not in any way trying to interfere with the rights of the president, but were doing what the constitution makes it the duty of senators—to be a part of the appointing power.

Wisdom of Fathers.

"In my opinion the constitution of the United States, next to the Bible, is the greatest document ever written. I believe our forefathers who wrote the constitution were inspired. They had left the old country to make a home in a new land because of the oppression of the rulers of the old world, and they took from our ruler, the president, much of this power and gave it to congress and the states.

"The constitution made the president the commander-in-chief of the army and navy but it took from him the power to declare war and gave this to congress, responsible to the people, and denied the president the right to spend money to carry on a war except appropriation by congress for that specific purpose.

"The framers of the constitution, in order to protect the rights of the states, declined to give the president the power to make appointments of judges and others, except with the advice and consent of the senate. The constitution makes both the senate and the president the appointing power. This was wisely done to prevent a president from making appointments in a state far distant from where he resided, and not familiar with the character and fitness for office. Senators living in the states and knowing the people would not be so handicapped.

Review of Case.

"The wisdom of our forefathers is shown in the Tilson appointment, but the president instead of advising with and getting the consent of the senate, as the constitution directs, violated the constitution by ignoring the senate and acting on the advice of Ben Davis, the negro national committeeman from Georgia. He sent Mr. Tilson's name to the senate for confirmation, as the law directs, but when informed that many republican senators and all the democrats on the judiciary committee had voted against Mr. Tilson's confirmation and that a majority of the senate would do likewise, the president, without giving the senate an opportunity to defeat the nomination, withdrew

W. C. T. U. Disputes League's Charges About Prohibition

Declares Increased Police Severity Responsible for Large Number of Drunkenness Arrests.

LESS DRINKING NOW LEADERS CONTEND

Congressman's Charges of Smuggled Liquor Are Exaggerated, Surveyor of Port Declares.

Evanston, Ill., December 17.—(AP) The Women's Christian Temperance Union issued a statement from its headquarters here today disputing the prohibition contentions made by the Moderation league in a recent report of its third annual survey.

The moderation report purported to show, said the W. C. T. U. statement, that "prohibition is responsible for an increase of drunkenness under prohibition." One basis for the contention is the number of arrests.

"That organization has not considered the effect of arrests made under the enormously increased police severity," asserted the statement, "nor has it taken into consideration the increase in population. Ten years ago the police rarely arrested a 'drunk' unless he was disorderly. Today police are instructed to arrest all intoxicated persons."

According to the statistics of the W. C. T. U. the arrests last year were 139 per 100,000 as compared with 180 per 100,000 persons in 1914. The union takes into consideration the increase in population.

"The Moderation league "contends there is more drinking among youth under prohibition," said the W. C. T. U., and this it denies.

"The latest information, based on common sense," the statement adds, "and accurate surveys, shows there is even less drinking now among students than there was three years ago, and that youth is giving up the idea that drinking is 'smart.'"

$100,000,000 FOR PROHI ENFORCEMENT SUGGESTED.

St. Louis, December 17.—(AP)—As much as $100,000,000 a year would not be too much to spend for prohibition enforcement, Francis Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, said here today.

McBride, who was visiting St. Louis on a tour of all states in the union, issued a statement in which he declared the present purposes of the prohibition forces to keep congress dry, to obtain whatever legislation is necessary to make enforcement successful and get whatever appropriations are necessary.

SURVEYOR SAYS SMUGGLING CHARGES ARE EXAGGERATED.

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Thomas W. Whittle, surveyor of the port, in commenting today upon Congressman Laguardia's charges that $500,000 worth of liquor is smuggled into the port every week, declared the estimate was "greatly exaggerated."

Laguardia's charges, he said, were too indefinite and gave no names which might be investigated. While not denying that some liquor finds its way past customs inspectors, Mr. Whittle doubted that any elaborate system of liquor smuggling could be carried on successfully without the knowledge of his 400 guards and scores of inspectors.

CONGRESSMAN'S CHARGES ARE ORDERED PROBED.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—The intelligence unit of the customs service was ordered today by Secretary Mellon to investigate charges made in the house yesterday by Representative La Guardia, of New York, that a large New York smuggling syndicate was providing liquor obtained from steamship lines to wealthy New Yorkers.

E. V. HAYNES PARK OFFER WILL FACE COUNCIL MONDAY

Other Important Matters Slated To Come Up for Consideration Before City Lawmakers.

City council Monday faces a busy session with several important matters slated for consideration in addition to the regular routine which will come at the last session of 1927.

Alderman Charles M. Ford, of the tenth ward, and Councilman Horace Russell, of the eighth ward, will attend a meeting of the city's governing body for the last time as officials of council Monday. They will be succeeded by Alderman-elect Everett Millican and Councilman-elect Raleigh Drennon, respectively.

One of the most important matters which has faced council in the past year will be acceptance of a proffer of Eugene V. Haynes, prominent real estate developer, of 36 acres of land adjacent to a 110-acre tract now owned by the city and on which is located the Peachtree creek disposal plant. Mr. Haynes' offer is contingent on utilization of the entire tract for park purposes not later than January 1, 1932. It also contemplates removal of the Peachtree creek disposal plant to another site and plans for development of the entire tract into what will be known as the Peachtree Creek Memorial park. The new park will be owned and controlled by the city of Atlanta and will extend from Peachtree road to the Chattahoochee river on both sides of Peachtree creek.

Acceptance of Mr. Haynes' offer is expected to be the signal for many other contributions of acreage on the same basis that Mr. Haynes made his. The city and Fulton county will cooperate in establishment of the park in honor of the valor and sacrifice of both Union and Confederate soldiers in the civil war. All legal barriers to development of this and other park sites located outside the city were removed at the last session of the state legislature.

No opposition to acceptance of the gift is expected as practically all members of city council favor establishment of the park and relocation of the Peachtree disposal unit in a plant large enough to adequately treat sewage from all units. Engineers estimate 3,000,000 gallons of untreated sewage flow into the creek at the Peachtree unit daily. This condition has been branded as a menace to health and otherwise objectionable.

PETTICOAT RULE IN OKLAHOMA BELIEVED ISSUE

Ill Feeling Against Governor's Secretary Has Lurked Among Legislators in Rump Session.

"MORAL TURPITUDE" LAID TO GOVERNOR

Reported at Least Six Women Will Be Summoned in Investigation of Latest Charge.

Oklahoma City, Okla., December 17. (United News.)—Petticoat politics was clearly defined tonight as the real issue in the attempt of an insurgent legislature to impeach Governor Henry Johnston.

Behind the camouflage of charges of misuse of public funds and maladministration voted against the governor by the house of representatives has lurked the ill feeling among legislators which grew from the influence of Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, secretary to the governor, exerted on political affairs.

During the early stages of the rump session of the legislature, however, Mrs. Hammonds figured only slightly in legislative discussions.

Accused of "Moral Turpitude."

Addition of a seventh impeachment charge accusing the governor of "moral turpitude" in his relations with Mrs. Hammonds brought out the real basis of the campaign against the governor.

It was reported tonight that "at least six women" would be summoned in connection with the seventh impeachment charge.

Beyond characterizing the latest activities of the house as "muck raking," and asserting he would not dignify the charges with an answer, Governor Johnston has not moved to forestall the scandal investigation. It was understood, however, that both Johnston and Mrs. Hammonds might issue statements soon.

Denies Reports.

Mrs. Hammonds denied today published reports that she had been "eliminated from the political situation." The reports grew out of her absence from the capitol yesterday. The secretary said she had spent the day with Mrs. Johnston, wife of the governor.

Alleged Theft Halts Plans For Marriage

Edward F. Panero, of New York, Is Languishing in Durance Vile.

Romance says that "love laughs at locksmiths," but federal agents Saturday gave the old adage a new twist when the law stepped in and foiled cupid.

Edward F. Panero, of New York, came all the way from the home of Tammany Hall and Al Smith to marry an Atlanta girl. His plans went astray, however, and Saturday afternoon he was languishing behind the bars of Fulton tower in default of $1,500 bail.

Federal officers who took Panero into custody charged him with violation of the national motor vehicle theft act, in that the defendant is alleged to have transported a stolen automobile from New York to Atlanta. Panero denied the charges Saturday in a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner L. S. Ledbetter, but was ordered to be held for the federal grand jury.

In the preliminary trial, Panero said that he came to Atlanta to get married. His story was to the effect that another man gave him a ride here in an automobile, and then asked Panero to dispose of the car for him while he transacted some other business. Panero refused to reveal the nature of his business in New York on the ground that he did not want to incriminate himself. He also withheld the name of his intended bride.

WOMEN COMMUNIST SUSPECTS ARE RUTHLESSLY SHOT DOWN IN CHINESE ANTI-RED WAR

IMPORTANT POSTS IN CITY COUNCIL TO CHANGE HANDS

Alderman Claude Ashley Is Practically Conceded Position of Mayor Pro Tem., Succeeding Dobbs.

While only a few changes in committee assignments for 1928 were predicted Saturday in reorganization of the Atlanta city council January 2, several of them will be shiftings of important posts.

Alderman Claude Ashley, of the fourth ward, was practically conceded the position of mayor pro tem to succeed Alderman W. Guy Dobbs, of the seventh. Aldermen J. Allen Couch, of the fifth, and Charles Murphy, of the twelfth, who have been mentioned prominently as likely candidates, have definitely announced that they will not make the race.

Retirement of Councilman Horace Russell, of the ninth ward, and of Alderman Charles M. Ford, of the tenth, will leave a number of committee posts to be filled. It was generally predicted, however, that Mayor I. N. Ragsdale will assign the successors, Raleigh Drennon and Everett Millican, respectively, to the vacated positions.

Couch's Reelection Forecast.

Alderman J. Allen Couch, present chairman of the schools committee of council, probably will draw his assignment again next year, according to forecasts. The only contemplated change on the committee is that Councilman Jack C. Savage probably will succeed Mr. Russell, who retires from council.

The chairman of the school committee next year will be a member of the Atlanta school board and in addition to having a vote on all expenditures of council, also will be the only official of the city government to have a vote on those of the board. This will be a unique situation, and is due to passage several days ago of a charter amendment making the chairman of the school committee a member of the board of education.

George Lyle is slated to succeed himself as chairman of the tax committee and the only other change expected is that Alderman William B. Hartsfield will be succeeded by Raleigh Drennon.

Hartsfield's Retirement Predicted.

Retirement of Alderman Hartsfield as chairman of the bridge committee was predicted Saturday in order that he may devote his attention to develop-

Ruth Elder Reaches Atlanta Tuesday, En Route Home

RUTH ELDER

Newark, N. J., December 17.—Ruth Elder, America"s foremost woman aviator, is to take a respite from her stage appearances for a week's rest in her old home at Anniston, Ala., she revealed tonight as she closed a week's stand at Loew's State theater here.

She will leave New York tomorrow night, arriving in Atlanta at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday morning and that day expects to fly with her old partner in the American Girl's trans-Atlantic venture, Captain George Haldeman, in a Fairchild's plane from Atlanta to Anniston. She will have a week's vacation then, and will resume her theatrical appearances, for which she was booked, upon her return from the Azores, for 100 days at $1,000 a day, at the Loew house in Cleveland, Christmas week.

Her itinerary after the Forest City is not fixed as yet, but her tour is expected to carry her across the country, appearances in San Francisco and Los Angeles having been definitely scheduled.

"It is the thing a press agent would expect me to say, I suppose," she told the Chicago Tribune press service at the Robert Treat hotel here tonight, "but the fact remains that theatrical appearances are a lot more trying than anything I've ever experienced, our try at crossing the Atlantic included.

"I specified the week's rest in my stage contract and I feel that I've earned it. I'd rather have had it during the holiday week, but that could not well have been arranged, it seems, and so I'm to have to be content with a pre-Christmas celebration back home in Anniston. And to tell the whole truth, I doubt it will be with any great keenness for it that I'll assume my try at stage work at Cleveland Christmas week."

CANTON STREETS SCENE OF KILLING OF 19 RUSSIANS

Women With Bobbed Hair Considered Communists; At Least Fourteen Have Been Shot.

RELATIONS BREAK DENIED BY SOVIET

British Police Guard Soviet Consulate in Shanghai; All Visitors Are Thoroughly Searched.

Shanghai, December 17.—(AP)—The work of expelling communists is being pursued with utter ruthlessness in Canton and Hankow, even women and girls are being shot down indiscriminately if suspected of being communists.

Bobbed hair is considered the sign of a woman communist in China and at least 14 bobbed-haired girls and women have been shot by antired troops in Canton. During the ruthless campaign against the communists, troops shot down the girls and women in the streets without compunction.

Nineteen Russians, declared to be communists, have been executed in the streets in Canton as a warning to those who turned to communism, said advices from Hongkong. Among those reported killed were M. Kirisheff and his wife. The latter was the secretary to Michael Borodin, Russian advisor to the former national government.

Fifteen Officials Deported.

Fifteen soviet officials, including Consul General Plitesche, were deported from Hankow this morning and started for Shanghai aboard a Chinese steamer.

While ruthless methods are being pursued in Canton and Hankow, the nationalists in Shanghai have contented themselves with more moderate methods, merely requiring the registration of all Russians with the declaration whether they are "red" or "white."

SOVIET DENIES NATIONALISTS RIGHT TO SEVER RELATIONS.

BY JOHN POWELL.

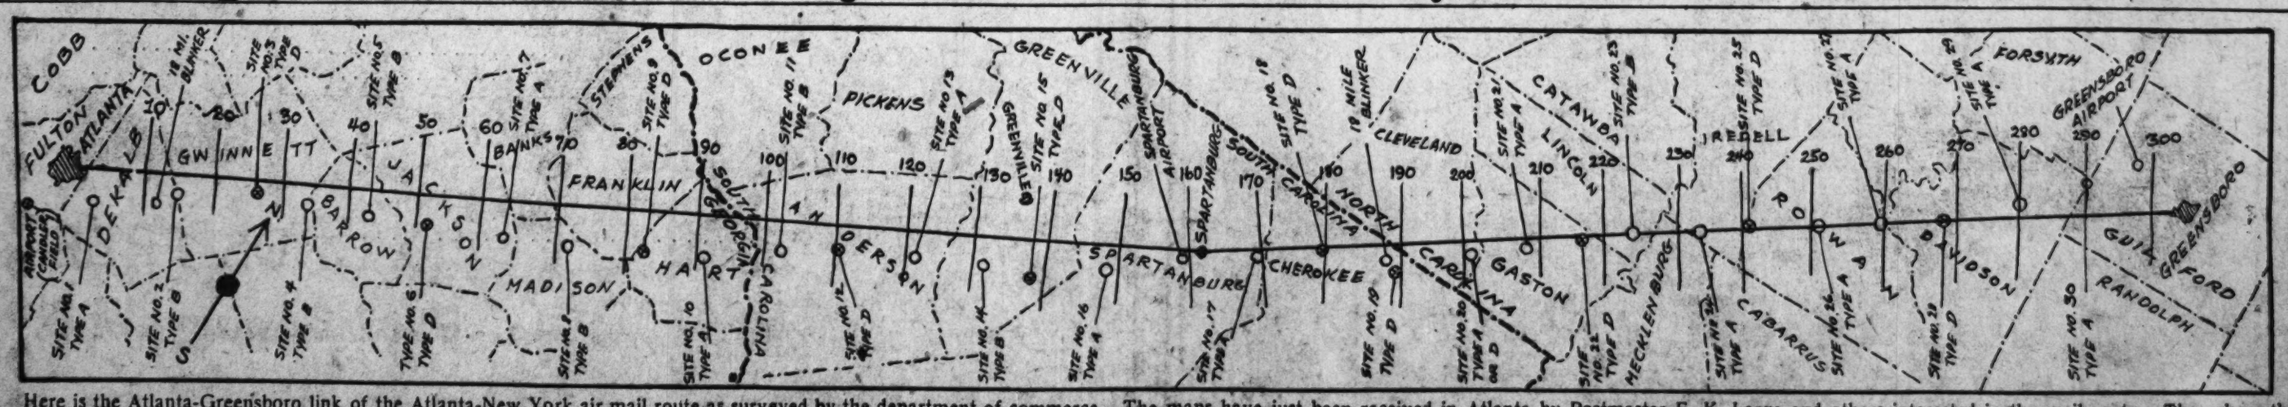

Shanghai, December 17.—The soviet government, through Consul General Koslovsky, this afternoon handed the Chinese nationalist government a note denying the right of the nationalist government to break off relations with the soviet government, declaring that the soviet consulates exist in China by virtue of the treaty concluded between China and Russia at Pekin in 1924, which still is in existence.

The soviet note then declares that the nationalist government in breaking off relations means only that certain Chinese generals have seized the power of the nationalist government and are under pressure of certain imperialist powers, which maintain consuls in China under unequal treaties.

In reference to the Chinese allegation that the soviet consulates and commercial agencies are serving as headquarters for red propaganda, the soviet note declares, "the soviet government repudiates in a most energetic manner the unfounded statements that the soviet consulates, state and commercial agencies, are considered responsible for the red propaganda and asylum of communists.

"We especially repudiate the allegation that our consulate in Canton guided the revolutionary movement of the workers and peasants in Kwangtung province. This is an old attempt to consider the Chinese revolution of workers as a consequence of the activities of the soviet official institutions."

Maps Show Atlanta-Greensboro Link of New Air Mail Route

Here is the Atlanta-Greensboro link of the Atlanta-New York air mail route as surveyed by the department of commerce. The maps have just been received in Atlanta by Postmaster E. K. Large and others interested in the mail route. They show the emergency landing field locations, and places at which airway beacon lights will be installed. By airline the route is a little more than 300 miles, with Spartanburg, S. C., as the half-way point. Beacon lights have been located approximately ten miles apart, while emergency landing fields are fifteen to twenty miles apart.

Each circle with a tail pointing to the name of the type of beacon indicates an airway beacon light, while circles with crosses indicate emergency landing fields and beacons. The map shows that a blinker light will be placed on top of Stone Mountain. Each of the airway beacons will be of tremendous candlepower, so that a pilot will see a line of searchlights in each direction, thus preventing air mail pilots from losing their way in night flying.

Air mail service between New York and Atlanta is scheduled to start in March. The contract already has been let for the Atlanta-Miami air mail route, and service on this route will start about the same time as the New York-Atlanta route. The Pitcairn Aviation company, of Philadelphia, has the New York-Atlanta-Miami contract, and already has erected a hangar at Candler field, furnished with a well-equipped machine shop and repair department. The Pitcairn company already is doing commercial flying at Candler field, having four ships in service. The lighting equipment at Candler field has been installed and lights will be cut on for the first time within a few days.

MINERS ORDERED TO LEAVE HOUSES

Columbus, Ohio, December 17.—(AP) Just a year from the time they went out on strike because of wage differences, 116 union miners and their families in Belmont and Jefferson counties must move next April 1, from company houses, under a decision of Federal Judge Benson W. Hough here today.

Upholding the mining companies seeking the eviction orders in all but one of the cases cited—that of 18 houses at Clarkson mine No. 2, Fair Point, Belmont county—the court at the same time held off time of eviction to April 1, declaring "equity demands such an order be enforced only within a reasonable time."

The evictions were sought by the Clarkson Coal Mining company, Atlantic Contracting company and Monroe Coal company as supplementary to their suits to enjoin union miners and union officials from interfering with attempts to operate their mines on a non-union basis.

Holding that their contracts terminated with their employers last March 31, Judge Hough also held that employment of the union miners was a prerequisite to occupancy of the company houses.

CHURCHES ACT TO AID MOTHERS, CHILDREN.

Pittsburgh, Pa., December 17.—(AP)—Churches of the Pittsburgh district moved today to relieve the distress of thousands of women and children of striking coal miners, faced with the rigors of winter in barracks or other temporary quarters provided by the United Mine Workers.

Officials of the union estimated that 1,800 families are now housed in barracks and that similar accommodations are being provided for some 1,500 other families facing eviction from company houses. In addition, hundreds of families are quartered in other makeshift homes.

Adoption of the program of organized relief followed a meeting of representatives of various denominations called by the Pittsburgh Council of Churches, when the report of a survey of conditions in the mining camps made by Colston E. Warne, assistant professor of economics at the University of Pittsburgh, was submitted to the churchmen.

HARDMANS TO VISIT

Governor's Family To Spend Christmas Week in Valdosta

Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman and family will spend Christmas week with relatives of Mrs. Hardman at Valdosta, Ga., it was announced Saturday at the executive offices. The governor will spend Christmas day in Atlanta and will leave Monday morning of Christmas week with his family for Valdosta. On the trip the governor will enjoy fishing, hunting and other sports.

The governor went to Commerce, Ga., his home town, Saturday but will return to the capitol Monday morning.

Jewish National Fund Drive Will Be Carried Out Today

Tag day worker makes auspicious start when she "prospects" Julian V. Boehm prior to opening of Maccabean day campaign. The young lady holding the coin box so dexterously while she tags Mr. Boehm is none other than Miss Rae Rosenberg, chairman of the Junior Hadassah J. N. F. committee, who, with Charles W. Bergman, will lead the Maccabean day cohorts in their tag activities today.

Armed with coin boxes, small blue and white tag buttons and designating sleeve emblems, a small regiment of Maccabean day workers will visit the homes and gathering places of Atlanta Jewry today in canvassing the city for the Jewish national fund.

The occasion is an annual event sponsored by local organizations throughout the country for the past fourteen years. From small individual contributions collected in this manner the J. N. F. has been able to purchase large land holdings in Palestine to be kept as a permanent possession of the Jewish people as a whole.

In Atlanta each member of the Jewish families will be tagged on dropping their small coins into the boxes carried by the volunteer workers. The nickels and dimes collected here last year totaled enough to buy nearly three acres of land in Palestine. This year the work has been organized more thoroughly and more workers have been enrolled. Leaders of the movement predict record returns for today's campaign.

Conducting the local Maccabean day activities are Co-chairmen Charles W. Bergman and Miss Mae Rosenberg. The workers are composed largely of girls and some boys for the Young Judaean clubs and Junior Hadassah. Approximately 30 teams with two workers in each team will set out to canvass the community this morning, continuing their work until evening, when they will assemble to tally up the returns of the day. Miss Rosenberg, who is chairman of the J. N. F. committee of Junior Hadassah, will be assisted by Miss Rose Seff, vice chairman. Mr. Bergman is head of the Young Judaea council here.

Significance of Maccabean day being sponsored by the Jewish national fund at opening of the Chanukah season, the Jewish holiday observed for eight days starting Monday, is seen in the fact that Chanuka commemorates the victory of the Maccabees, who, in Biblical times, liberated the Jews and regained their lands with the sword. Nor the land is to be redeemed peacefully with contributions of the fund.

Maccabean day, Flower day coming in mid-summer and J. N. F. boxes constitute the principal resources of the organization maintained to purchase land in Palestine.

$24,000 Pledged In Capitol Ave. Church Canvass

Every-member canvass of the Capitol Avenue Baptist church, recently conducted, resulted in the largest amount in pledges for the coming year in the history of the church. To meet a total budget for the year of $28,000, the members subscribed $24,000, to be divided among current expenses, missions and benevolences, and building fund. There are 1,200 members of the church, and the average Sunday school attendance for the past twelve months has been approximately 800.

Dr. W. H. Major has been pastor for the last thirteen years, during which period the church has enjoyed remarkable growth. Officers of the church, selected at a recent congregational meeting, for the year 1928 are as follows:

STEEL KING HOPES TO LIVE 20 YEARS TO REALIZE DREAM

Philadelphia, December 17.—(AP)—Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate, asserted here today that he hoped to live 20 years longer to see his dreams of great industrial progress come true.

"I have enjoyed every day of my life," he said, speaking at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Engineers' club, "and I wouldn't change a minute of it if I had to live it over again. Business is picking up. After January 1 it will be still better."

Test Flight Today.

Curtiss Field, New York, December 17.—(AP)—The Sikorsky bombing plane "Guardian," will leave here at 10 a. m. tomorrow, weather permitting, for Washington, on its maiden cross-country flight. The ship is scheduled to fly to Wilbur Wright field, Dayton, Ohio, on Monday for an extensive series of tests.

Christmas Brings Financial Worries To Chest Agencies

The Christmas season has brought worry to Atlanta's 35 agencies of charity and human welfare which operate under the Community Chest, growing out of the threat of suffering and unrelieved want at a time when happiness should reign.

The condition, it was pointed out in a statement by Chest officials Saturday can be prevented if all persons who last year pledged contributions for support of the city's charitable organizations in 1927 pay their pledges.

The sum of $22,336.04 was due the agencies from the Chest funds for December operation. Of this, only $8,627.65 has been collected which, with a balance of $1,488.85 on last December 1, makes $10,117.50 available for the city's charitable agencies, and a deficit of $12,219.44 for the month's operations, according to the statement.

The money from the $460,000 in pledges raised in the campaign which closed November 1 and by a subsequent telephone appeal is for 1928 operations of the Chest agencies and none of it is available until after January 1. Then, too, this will be considerably less than the amount declared necessary for 1928.

As to the current shortage in funds for December, the statement said:

"Approximately $60,000 is due and unpaid on the 1927 pledges. This amount, of course, includes pledges from those who, for one reason or another, will be unable to pay, because of death, removal, or financial reverses. However, a large proportion is due from persons who, in the past, have paid promptly and there is every reason to suppose they would pay now if they realized how badly the money is needed."

The necessity is one actually of keeping in operation the agencies which serve the administration of Atlanta's charity funds, according to the statement, a number of them having been unable to pay bills regularly on the 10th of the month and very few having paid salaries of employees.

Hits Children's Institutions.

The condition, it was pointed out, will strike particularly hard at the children's institutions, those shelters for little waifs who have found there all the opportunity and tender care they have obtained in life and who expect there also the happiness that is every child's right at Christmas time. These will be unable to pay salaries of nurses and other staff members or the wages of cooks and attendants unless the past due pledges are paid.

The Community Chest has been able through the slack period of the year to provide money for its agencies by an arrangement with the clearing house banks which enabled it to borrow funds when necessary for regular payment to the agencies on the first and fifteenth of each month, the money to be repaid to the banks as pledges were paid. However, because December 1 brought a greater default in the payment of pledges than was anticipated, the assistance of the banks has not been available, and there remains the danger of cessation of activities of several vitally necessary agencies, according to the statement yesterday, unless the past due pledges are paid.

PASSENGERS GIVEN SCARE AS LIMITED CAR LEAVES TRACK

Several passengers were shaken up when the observation coach on the Dixie Limited, which was scheduled to leave from the Terminal station at 6:45 o'clock Saturday night, jumped the track under the station and ran more than 75 feet before the train was stopped. The coach, the last on the train, was pulled for about 50 feet alongside the tracks before it mounted the concrete walkway and tore away a portion of it.

Passengers on the car were transferred to another car and the train pulled out from the station, only a few minutes late, while workmen placed the car back on the tracks and sent it to a repair shop. The damage was slight.

BUREAU SECRETARIES TO MEET NEXT APRIL

Secretaries of chambers of commerce, convention bureaus, motor clubs and representatives of highway departments will assemble in St. Petersburg, Fla., April 18-19, 1928, for the second annual meeting of the Southern Tourist and Convention Bureau Secretaries' association, which was organized last year by Fred Houser, executive secretary of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau.

The organization meeting took place October 18-19, 1926, in offices of the convention bureau, for the purpose of promoting tourist and convention business in the south; of working out a broad publicity program; of promoting adequate hotel accommodations where necessary; of providing for further cooperation with railroads and exchanging information for mutual benefit, and of encouraging tourist travel in the south for commercial and industrial development.

Cities represented at the organization meeting last year were Atlanta, Montgomery, Ala.; Washington, D. C.; Lakeland City, Fla.; St. Petersburg, Fla.; New Orleans, La.; Athens, Ga., and Warm Springs. The program included various talks and discussions relative to tourist travel and development in the south.

Officers elected at the 1926 meeting were: Fred Houser, Atlanta, president; vice presidents, Fred J. Cramton, Montgomery, Ala.; Charles G. Tingle, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Sam Fowlke, New Orleans, La.; Mrs. L. P. Wood, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; C. O. Kuester, Charlotte, N. C.; L. M. Glenn, Greenville, S. C.; B. B. Wiggins, Jr., Jackson, Miss.; Dick Parks, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Oliver J. Sand, Richmond, Va. O. L. Haymond, formerly of the Atlanta Motor club, was elected secretary and treasurer of the organization.

"I believe the meeting in St. Petersburg next April will be successful in every way," said Fred Houser, president of the association. "Atlanta and the south have emerged from the ashes of the civil war, through the inspiring days of such men as Henry Grady and Ben Hill, to the days of the new south. Through the efforts of our assembly in April we want to bring out some method of showing the nation that the south is not only a winter playground, but a good place to live the year round, where industry thrives and commerce has an upward trend."

MAYTAG WASHER SALE SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Recent announcement of the new Maytag washer has given such added impetus to the growing sales volume of the Maytag company, that the factory has been unable to supply the demand, according to a statement issued by F. L. Maytag, chairman of the board of directors.

"So great has been the demand or the new Maytag washer that we have increased our production from 1,250 to 1,400 Maytags per day, and still we are running approximately 10,000 washers behind," Mr. Maytag reports. "The factory payroll is not the largest in the history of the organization, amounting to considerably more than $400,000 for each 26-day working period. Approximately 2,000 persons are employed on the full-time basis at the Maytag factory."

The new Maytag embodies the latest refinement in machine design, and as a result, it is as nearly silent and perfect in operation as it is possible for any mechanism to be. All moving parts are inclosed and require no adjustment or attention. A feature of the new Maytag is the roller water remover—an exclusive patented feature, obtainable only in Maytag washers. There are now more than a million women owning Maytag washers, and approximately 40 out of every 100 washers sold are Maytags, officials state.

COLLEGE PARK HOME YIELDS SMALL STILL

A small household still, located between two fireplaces in a home near College Park, was raided by County Officers Ed West and Jim Ragsdale and a College Park officer Saturday. The house was unoccupied and no liquor was found, but 150 gallons of beer were poured out.

ROBINSON PROMOTED; HERE WITH CENTRAL

Because of Atlanta's increasing importance as a transportation center, the Central of Georgia Railway company has created the position of executive general agent here and has promoted to fill it Frederick J. Robinson, general passenger agent of the railroad. His appointment was announced Saturday by Vice Presidents Charles T. Airey and H. D. Pollard, as effective January 1, 1928. At that time Mr. Robinson will move from Savannah to Atlanta and establish headquarters here. He will be succeeded as general passenger agent by John W. Blount, at present assistant general passenger agent.

FREDERICK J. ROBINSON.

Mr. Robinson is one of the ablest and best-known transportation men in the southeast. He entered railway service as a youth, as clerk in the local freight station of the Central of Georgia at Columbus, Ga. His record has been one of steady promotion. For three years, from November, 1894, to December 31, 1897, he was stationed in Atlanta as city passenger agent of the Central, and he again served several months here in 1899 as traveling passenger agent. He was appointed assistant general passenger agent, with headquarters in Savannah, in July, 1901, and was promoted to general passenger agent on August 1, 1916.

Mr. Blount, the new general passenger agent, like Mr. Robinson, has had long service with the railroad, having entered as a clerk in the baggage room at Macon in 1890. His subsequent promotion has been steady, and on January 1, 1917, he was made assistant general passenger agent at Savannah. Both Mr. Blount and Mr. Robinson are well-known here, having been frequent visitors to this city.

Mr. Robinson's appointment will mean the opening of an additional office in Atlanta and will not affect the present personnel of the Central of Georgia. Representatives of the railroad here are F. E. Ellis, division freight agent; E. E. Fuller, commercial agent; J. Y. Bruce, commercial agent, located in the Fourth National Bank building; W. H. Fogg, division passenger agent; T. J. Stewart, district passenger agent; W. P. Stovall, traveling passenger agent, at 38-40 Walton street, Grant building.

WOMAN BOUND OVER ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Mrs. Nell Nichols, of 330 Central avenue, was held for the federal grand jury Saturday by United States Commissioner L. S. Ledbetter on prohibition charges. Bond was fixed at $200. Mrs. Nichols is charged with having six gallons of whisky hidden under the front steps of her home.

Eloise Horton, negress, of 520 Collier street, was held for the federal grand jury under $200 bond for possessing 40 gallons of whisky.

"The World Doesn't Forget,"

STREET CORNER SCENE OF REMINISCENCE

So Disabled Vet Repays Apple

BY ELMO HAMBY.

Christmas gift!

It was a windswept downtown street corner and Christmas was near.

A Salvation Army band stood in the street near the curb and called sinners to repentance. The thud-thud of the drum and the throbbing jingle of the tambourines were muffled by overcast skies that seemed to reach down to the damp pavement.

The "lassies" had spoken and the captain stepped forward.

"God is good," he said. "And all the world is happy and joyous at this time. The world is good and kind, but don't forget your own personal salvation at this time when people are not forgetting those they love."

In the small band of stragglers who listened there stood a man. He had a face that was drawn, and his eyes seemed to have been dulled in a pawing rush of life that had swept him aside. Closely wrapped around his meager form was an O. D. service overcoat, dirty and ragged, and with a bare spot on the shoulder where a division shield had been sewn, showing cleaner than the rest.

A hacking cough at frequent intervals shook his gaunt frame.

By his side, at his feet, sat a basket with a few apples in it.

He was an "apple man."

When the captain had finished, the "apple man" moved to his side and tugged at his sleeve.

"Yes, brother?"

"Remember me?"

"No, I don't believe I do."

"I remember you, captain. It was in the bitter cold of late October and the war. One night, with the foul breath of hell still clinging fresh to my clothes, I came staggering back with my outfit from the front to the relief station.

"The relief never arrived. And the sinkers were gone. . . . How I had dreamed about those sinkers in that world of hours I spent on the front . . . but you—remember?—gave me an apple. . . . It had mud splattered on it.

"Well . . . it's almost Christmas, isn't it? You said the world doesn't forget. You're right, captain, I'll never forget that apple until my dying day . . . and it won't be long now!"

A grim smile was cut short by another of those terrible coughs.

"This time . . . it's me that's got the apples."

He stooped down to the basket and quickly took out an apple. He rubbed it against his sleeve and handed it to the captain.

And he moved on.

CARTER WILL HEAD EMORY INDEPENDENTS

Emory University, Ga., December 17.—S. L. Carter, of Hogansville, Ga., was elected to head the Independents, non-fraternity student body, at its regular meeting Thursday night. He succeeds Sanford B. Smith, of Carrollton, Ga.

Other officers elected were Bill Woolfolk, Montgomery, Ala., vice president; Joseph Harrington, Macon, Ga., secretary, and J. L. Harris, of Valdosta, Ga., treasurer. All of the men are prominent in campus activities.

PRIME MINISTER EXPRESSES REGRET AT STUDENT RIOT

Bucharest, Rumania, December 17 (AP)—Premier Bratianu, addressing the government's parliamentary majority today, expressed the government's deep regret over student excesses in anti-Semitic riots at Oradea Mare and Cluj earlier in the month.

The prime minister declared that those who have a mistaken idea of nationalism must be put on the right and profitable path and youth directed to serious work.

JUDGE PENDLETON IS PAID TRIBUTE BY ATLANTA BAR

The life and services of the late Judge John T. Pendleton, for many years a conspicuous figure on the bench of Fulton superior court, were eulogized Saturday morning by the Atlanta Bar association at ceremonies which featured the presentation of a portrait of the jurist to Fulton superior court.

The exercises took place in the courtroom of Judge E. D. Thomas and the portrait of the late judge will be placed on the wall in the courtroom in which he presided for many years.

The presentation address was delivered by Judge Thomas H. Jeffries, Fulton county ordinary. Other speakers were Judge W. D. Ellis, recently retired from the Fulton superior court bench; Judge John D. Humphries, senior judge of Fulton superior court; John L. Tye, Harry A. Etheridge and George Whitman, prominent members of the Atlanta Bar association. T. A. Hammond, president of the Atlanta bar, presided.

FIRE DAMAGES SILL OF CAPITOL OFFICE

Fire believed to have been started by a lighted cigarette thrown from an office window in the state capitol caused slight damage to a window sill of Justice Beck's office Saturday morning. Quick action by firemen prevented the fire from spreading.

Firemen were called out twice Saturday afternoon within a few minutes' time to extinguish flames in the home of T. J. Griffith, 963 D'Alvigney avenue, N. W. Both fires started in the roof and only slight damage was done, according to fire reports.

Holiday Plans Of 'Y' Include Local Newsies

Atlanta "newsies" will not be neglected during the merry Christmas season, it is apparent from preparations being made by the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. for an elaborate turkey dinner to provide for 350 of these youngsters. The dinner, which is the annual feast of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' club, will be held this year at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night, in the Luckie street headquarters.

C. C. Mitchell, who is in charge of the Boys' club activities, providing comfortable recreation quarters and facilities for newsboys of the city throughout the year, will be assisted at the Christmas dinner by members of the Y. M. C. A. Ladies' auxiliary.

According to Mr. Mitchell, the program for the night will be featured principally and almost exclusively by eating. No garnishings that belong to the traditional Christmas dinner will be omitted and ample provision is being laid in to provide for the full house that indications point to.

The Atlanta Y. M. C. A. has conducted a club for the boys for the past 13 years. The clubrooms are located in the boys' building and are fully equipped with games, magazines and other means of enjoyment. A regular program is conducted, including gymnasium classes, movies once a week and an occasional special entertainment, such as the coming Christmas dinner. It is in these quarters that the boy of the street spends his evenings after he has "sold out" his papers, the club secretary remarked.

Georgia Press Association To Have New Summer Camp

With arrangements for construction by the Georgia Press association of a summer camp in the north Georgia mountains completed Saturday following the signing of a lease for the camp site by press association officials and the Georgia Power company, work will be started immediately to construct the buildings and equip the camp, it was announced.

The new site, said to be one of the most beautiful in Rabun county, is located on several peninsulars and coves on the shores of Lake Rabun, one of the power company's hydro-electric storage lakes, just above the Lakemont summer colony.

Negotiations for the new site were closed Saturday with the signing of the lease by Miss Emily Woodward, of Vienna, president of the Georgia Press association, and members of the committee, O. W. Passavant, editor of the Newnan Herald; Mrs. Nora Lawrence Smith, of Ashburn, editor of the Wiregrass Farmer, and John Paschall, managing editor of the Atlanta Journal, a member of the executive committee of the association.

Temporary Camp Abandoned.

A temporary camp at Terrora, two miles above Tallulah Falls, now maintained by the association, will be abandoned with completion of the new camp.

The new site covers 20 acres, extending back from the lake to a lofty elevation, on which the houses will be constructed. Plans, as announced by Miss Woodward, call for the construction of a clubhouse with several bedrooms, a dance floor and all accommodations for use when large parties visit the camp. In addition a number of small cottages, which will be sub-leased to members of the association and furnished by them, will be completed by spring. All of the houses will be equipped with electricity and shower baths, and other modern conveniences.

The obtaining of the new site for the summer home of the Press association was declared one of the progressive achievements of the administration of Miss Woodward, who is the first woman to be honored with the office of president of the association.

During the past summer many Georgia editors and their families took advantage of the camp at Terrora, but the distance from the lake and the temporary, scattered buildings seriously detracted from that location, which all will be eliminated through the new site.

6 Days of Wedded Life Too Much; Divorce Is Filed

Macon, Ga., December 17.—On June 7 of this year Miss Florie French became the bride of Aldine S. Cheek, in this city. After six days of married life the bride left for the home of her parents. She filed suit for divorce yesterday, charging cruelty.

CHANGE OF VENUE GIVEN IN CALHOUN FIGHT FOR JAIL

Arlington, Ga., December 17.—When the hearing of the petition for mandamus to require the board of county commissioners to provide courthouse and jail facilities came up at the December term of Calhoun superior court, H. A. Wilkerson, attorney for the petitioners, raised the question of change of venue on the grounds that a qualified jury to hear the testimony could not be obtained in this county. This point was verified and agreed to by court and by the attorney for the commissioners when a test was taken of jurors present drawn to serve for the regular business of the court.

Judge W. V. Custer ordered that the venue be changed to Dougherty county to be heard at the next term of court in that county in Albany on the third Monday in next March.

Montezuma Music.

Montezuma, Ga., December 17.—(Special.)—Under the auspices of the Music Lovers' club a cantata, "The King Cometh," by R. M. Stultz, will be sung at the First Baptist church on Christmas night. A free-will offering will be taken, the proceeds of which will be used for the poor of the community.

Jews To Observe Feast of Lights For Eight Days

The Feast of Lights, ancient Jewish holiday known also as Chanukah and celebrated since the time of Judas Maccabeus, 165 B. C., will be observed by the Jews of Atlanta beginning Monday and extending for eight days.

The custom, marked by singing and the lighting of candles in the homes and synagogues, is symbolic of the liberation of the Jews by the Maccabees and restoration of the temple of Jerusalem and the holy city to the people of Israel.

Programs in observance of the holiday are annually held by various religious organizations of the community. In the synagogue of the Shairith Israel congregation exercises will be held at 7 o'clock tonight. An address will be delivered by Rabbi Tobias Geffen. Other features of the program, arranged by the sisterhood of the synagogue, with Mrs. Paul Wolkin as general chairman, will include presentation of a beautiful "Parochas," donated by Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Borochoff, and a series of violin and piano solos.

On Wednesday night at 8 o'clock, the Sunday school of the Jewish Educational alliance will present a Chanukah program, including recitations, plays and songs all related to the story of Chanukah. Parts have been provided for all children in the school. The program will be opened and concluded with songs by the group, while in between the plays and recitations the glee club will render special selections. Older children of the school will present a play "By the Light of Chanukah," while a dramatic explanation of lighting of the candles will be given by the young children. Instrumental music will be included. Invitation to attend is extended to parents and friends of the children.

In other Jewish centers the holiday will be observed by similar exercises, and in many homes candles will be lighted on each of the eight nights.

GREEK COMMUNISTS FACE TREASON TRIAL

Athens, Greece, December 17.—(AP) The Greek parliament has voted to prosecute the ten communist members of the chamber of deputies for high treason.

During the debate, which started Monday, a crowd of several hundred communists staged a demonstration in front of the parliament building. They were dispersed by police and a number of them arrested.

The deputies will be prosecuted on charges of complicity in the autonomy movement in Macedonia and Thrace.

Protect Xmas Happiness With an Accident Policy

Santa Claus is coming—

This should be the most joyous season of all the year. People are busy shopping for Christmas; traffic is jammed; everybody's excited—splendid conditions for traffic accidents.

Why not do your bit now to safeguard the Yuletide against disaster. At any moment you may fall victim to the ever-mounting accident wave. What would Christmas be if heavy medical bills should fall on your shoulders?

Protect the happiness of Christmas with an accident insurance policy. You can do it cheaply and efficiently under the terms of The Constitution's offer to its readers of the famous $7,500 travel accident policy issued by the North American Insurance company, of Chicago. This old and reliable concern already has paid more than $53,000 in claims to Constitution policyholders.

The policy, which costs only $1.25 per year, provides for payment of sums ranging from $7,500 in case of death resulting from certain accidents; heavy cash payment for permanent injuries and $10 weekly indemnity for disability resulting from the stated accidents. And the cost is only a fraction of a penny a day.

A train wreck, a crash of automobiles, the speeding wheels of an onrushing car or a burning building may leave you a victim of the ever-growing wave of accidents today.

In this paper appear regular advertisements supply full details of the great offer. Watch for them.

This $7,500 travel, $2,000 auto and $1,000 pedestrian accident policy is issued only to subscribers of The Daily and Sunday Constitution and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 17 and 70 at $1.25 per year.

One who is now taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution or will subscribe for same through carrier in Atlanta or suburbs, through an out-of-town carrier, monthly or otherwise, is a subscriber and is eligible.

Those taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution by mail, either through a postoffice or rural route delivery for one year are eligible by paying $1.25 per year per policy above the subscription price.

In sending applications for insurance the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation. If beneficiary is desired, full Christian name must be given and relation of same to the insured.

Office System Will Make Auto Tag Buying Easy

Facing the heaviest sales in history of automobile license tags and with indications already pointing to a greater distribution of tags than ever before, Secretary of State S. G. McLendon is perfecting an office organization which will handle the enormous business this year with greater convenience to the public than any time heretofore.

With the experience of past years as a criterion, Secretary McLendon has reduced the distribution system to a point where it is as near scientifically perfect as it can be made. By cutting down the blanks to be filled from four to two and by sending out rating books to sheriffs, ordinaries, court clerks, banks and filling stations he feels that the service this year will be better than in any previous year, he stated Saturday.

"It is a greater task to dispose of tags quickly and at the same time preserve correctly the record than a person would think at the first glance," Secretary McLendon said. "For the protection of the car owner it is necessary that a certain amount of information concerning his automobile be filed in our office. To obtain this information requires a certain amount of cooperation from the tag buyer and it is our purpose to make the work of the tag buyer as little as possible. We intend to go to every length to accommodate the public and with just a little careful cooperation from the buyers we can eliminate a lot of inconvenience and delay.

One of the most important things for the tag buyer to bear in mind is that he must bring the model number of his car with his application.

Fixed By Weight.

"Under the new law the price of the license is fixed by weight, and we can ascertain the weight of a car from our rating books if the purchaser has the model number," Secretary McLendon said. "Many licenses must be issued for cars which are of old models and types and to find out the weight of these cars we must have the model number."

The "window department," which serves the people of Atlanta, is under the direction this year of J. Threatt Moore. Mr. Moore has organized a force of capable workers who will fill orders at the windows. The force has been so organized that it will be able to handle an enormous amount of daily business.

The mail order department is under the direction of Dr. Royall J. Miller and he is prepared to give even more efficient service this year than last year. He has equipped the office with the latest time-saving devices for opening and classifying letters and has organized a capable force of workers to see that tags are mailed out to applicants on the same day the application is received. This is a tremendous task, particularly during January, as a large amount of mail is received daily. This must be classified, records of passenger cars and trucks must be carefully kept and the tags sent as quickly as possible to the applicant. Dr. Miller has sent copies of the new rate sheets to every sheriff, ordinary, court clerk and bank in the state and is now sending them to as many filling stations as possible. Purchasers who live in towns outside of Atlanta can get information concerning mail orders from these officials or from filling stations and banks.

Preservation of the records is carried on under the direction of Arthur T. Harris, chief clerk. Mr. Harris has organized a large force of typists and has added an additional room, located in the basement of the capitol, for the compilation of these records. In the new room desk space is provided for 30 typists and if the business grows larger than is expected more room is available.

All automobile owners must have their new tags by February 1, 1928, under the new law. Those who drive their machines without the new tags after that date will be subject to heavy penalties.

O L D. DIFFERENCES BETWEEN HOLY SEE AND PRAGUE ENDED

Rome, December 17. — (AP) — A "modus vivendi" between the holy see and the Czecho-Slovak republic was initialed today at the vatican.

The agreement puts to an end differences which have existed between the holy see and Prague since 1925, when the Czech government gave an official character to celebrations in honor of John Huss, the Bohemian religious reformer of the middle ages who was burned at the stake as a heretic.

The vatican protested against this and later recalled its muncio to Prague.

APPLAUSE GREETS ACQUITTAL OF MAN ON FLOGGING COUNT

Raleigh, N. C., December 17.—(AP) G. E. Belshe, county road camp supervisor, indicted on charges arising from the flogging of E. A. Jones, a rural merchant, and his negro helper, a year ago, was acquitted by a superior court jury today after 43 minutes of deliberation.

He was the second of 15 Wake county men indicted on similar charges to be cleared. Leland Rogers, the first to be tried, was acquitted earlier in the year. Applause from the crowded courtroom, which followed the jury's verdict, was promptly silenced by Judge Sinclair, who briefly censured the courtroom crowd for the demonstration.

The acquittal ended a four-day trial in which more than 100 witnesses testified.

Figures Released by State Geologist McCallie Represent Increase of $721,654 Over 1925.

Georgia's mineral resources added $19,149,903 to her wealth during the year 1926, according to the mineral statistics for that year just reported by S. W. McCallie, state geologist. These figures, Dr. McCallie states, were collected by his department in cooperation with the United States geological survey, the federal bureau of mines and the United States bureau of the census.

This figure represents an increase of $721,654 over that of the previous year.

The largest industry contributing to the mineral output of the state is brick and tile manufacturing, which shows a total of $5,975,486. This includes common brick, face brick, various kinds of tile, architectural terra-cotta and flue lining, paving brick, fire brick, sewer piping, etc.

Precious Metals Lowest.

Georgia gave to the world only $3,708 worth of gold and silver during 1926, the lowest figure in the entire report. Pottery comes next lowest for that year, with $9,990, although it is expected that the ceramics industry will eventually be one of the leading enterprises in the state. This will be when the recently established ceramics department at Georgia Tech has been in operation long enough for its graduates to make their influence felt in the development of their state.

There are some peculiar items which come under the heading of "mineral resources." For instance, water. The man on the street would be apt to argue the point as to water being a mineral, but Dr. McCallie's report estimates that the mineral valuation of "mineral waters" bottled and sold in Georgia during the twelve-month period was $30,000.

Dr. McCallie urges a protective tariff upon asbestos, stating that if a duty of only a few dollars per ton was placed upon the low grade Canadian asbestos, Georgia's asbestos industry would be materially stimulated. As it is, the valuation for asbestos, coal and coke, grouped in the report, is only $206,528. The only counties contributing to the asbestos output were Barrow and Habersham, with the main portion coming from the latter. This because of a manufacturing plant located at Hollywood, Ga.

Bartow county alone contributed $532,700 worth of barytes, making this state one of the leading producers of this material in the country. Mineral barytes are used mainly in the manufacture of paints, in the rubber industry and in the making of chemicals, etc. Crude barytes ore on board cars at the mine is sold for about $7 per ton.

Bauxite Worth $108,650.

Wilkinson, Macon, Chattooga and Bartow counties produced bauxite to the amount of 19,680 tons, valued at $108,650, an increase of $8,841 over the preceding year. About one-fourth of Georgia bauxite is used in the manufacture of aluminum and the remainder in the chemical industry.

Three Portland cement plants were operated in Georgia in 1926, two in Polk county and one in Houston. In addition to these, another plant is now contemplated in Washington county. The value of cement produced during the year was $680,362 greater than in 1925.

Sixty-three water-power plants were operated in the state in 1926, according to the report, with a total capacity of 435,822 horsepower. Thirty-seven of the plants were operated under public utility and municipal managements, while 26 were employed in manufacturing and miscellaneous uses. Georgia stood fourth among the south Atlantic states in water power production, being exceeded by Alabama, South Carolina and North Carolina.

Minerals produced in the state during the year, with the value of their total products, were as follows:

Asbestos, coal and coke	$ 206,528
Baryte	532,706
Bauxite and Portland cement	2,779,723
Brick and tile	5,975,486
Clay	1,398,061
Fullers earth and manganese	1,614,184
Gold and silver	3,708
Granite	2,243,491
Iron ore and ocher (latter estimated)	349,198
Lime and limestone	553,178
Marble	2,815,149
Mica, talc and soapstone	97,461
Mineral waters (estimated)	30,000
Pottery	9,990
Slate, sand and gravel	541,080
Total	$19,149,903

More Land Asked For Sanitarium At Battle Hill

Need of additional land for recreational advantages for inmates of the Battle Hill sanitarium was stressed in city hall circles Saturday, and it was predicted that members of city council would begin a drive to secure another "acre or two" for that purpose.

Although the city owns ample acreage in the tract on which the institution is located, members of the hospitals and charities committee pointed out that it is unsuitable for recreation and that grading would cost more than it would require to purchase a small adjacent strip. No site has been settled upon and none is under consideration at the present time, but members of the committee point out that desirable strips could be bought at a nominal price.

It is expected that a sum will be carried in the January finance sheet for the project.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale will recommend to the 1928 finance committee that steps be taken to meet the $100,000 offer of Jacob Elsas to establish a pay ward for Grady hospital where a person of moderate means may receive expert medical attention at a nominal fee.

The city under stipulations of the Elsas contract would be required to raise $150,000 to supplement the Elsas fund.

NEGRO CHURCHES TO AID EX-SLAVES AT MEETING TODAY

The campaign of the Ex-Slave association to raise funds for ex-slaves and aged colored people will be emphasized in colored churches of the city today by representatives of the association.

The final meeting will be held this afternoon in the chapel of the Holmes institute, where addresses will be delivered by prominent ministers and leaders of the race, who will speak of the service and loyalty of the ex-slaves in the south before and after the war.

Contributions will be received at 411 Hilliard street or call IVy 2254.

ESCAPED NEGRO LIFER RECAPTURED IN PHILADELPHIA

Rufus Hicks, alias "Mule" Hicks, a negro serving a life term in the state prison, who escaped last August from the Clarke county chain gang, has been recaptured in Philadelphia, according to notice received Saturday by the state prison commission.

Hicks is held in Philadelphia on a charge of highway robbery. The Georgia prison commission notified Philadelphia authorities they would send for the prisoner providing the authorities there will drop the highway robbery charge so that the negro can be brought back to Georgia to finish serving his sentence in this state.

When he was convicted of murder in Muscogee county, Hicks was sentenced to be executed. The death sentence was commuted by the governor to life imprisonment after several prominent south Georgia citizens had appeared in behalf of the negro.

Hicks escaped from the Clarke county gang August 2 at the same time five other prisoners escaped.

FINE ARTS VOLUMES COLLECTED AT EMORY

With the instituting of several fine arts courses in the Emory university curriculum, has begun the establishment of a collection of fine arts books in the university library. The books deal with painting, architecture, sculpture and music.

Among the books are McFall's "History of Painting," and Littlejohn's "How to Enjoy Pictures." There are many other volumes on painters and painting, with lives and works of many individual artists.

This new field of study has received hearty enthusiasm among a large group of students in the Emory classes. Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey is professor of this department.

MONCRIEF TO OCCUPY PULPIT IN AVONDALE

Rev. Adiel Jarrett Monerief, Jr., will preach in his pulpit at the Avondale Baptist church in Avondale Estates this morning and evening. The subject of the evening sermon is one of especial interest. He will preach on: "The Land of Dwarfs." In the morning service the sermon will deal with the first chapter of John's gospel.

Miss Zella Paddock, director of the Avondale church choir, is presenting a special Christmas musical service. The choir has been rehearsing the program for several weeks.

J. ALFRED SPENDER GUEST OF ATLANTA

Spender will be the forum committee luncheon of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Monday at 12:30 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce assembly hall. One of the six or eight luncheons a year given by the forum committee to visitors of national or international renown, Monday's luncheon, it is anticipated, will bring together the largest gathering of prominent Atlantans and Georgians ever assembled on such occasions to greet a visitor.

At dinner today Mr. and Mrs. Spender will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Sr., in their home on Wesley avenue.

About this time last year, the holder of the Walter Hines Page newspaper fellowship for junior journalists, Thomas Cadett, of the London Times, was in Atlanta on a year's tour of America. The two months in Atlanta were spent by Mr. Cadett as a member of The Constitution's staff.

Mr. Spender's tour of America as the initial holder of the senior Page fellowship will occupy three months. During this time he will study political and business conditions, keeping close contact with newspaper work here, with the view of publishing a book on his observations after returning to England.

Mr. Spender has already been west and comes to Atlanta from New Orleans. After his farewell here Tuesday, he will leave for Asheville, N. C., where he and Mrs. Spender will rest before continuing their tour.

In addition to his position of international importance, Mr. Spender is personally known in America, for he was one of the outstanding members in the press gallery during the disarmament conference at Washington in 1921. In England he has held the position of editor on the Westminster Gazette for 30 years, conducting that paper as the organ of the Liberal party of Great Britain and a fearless fighter in that cause.

Aside from his importance as an author of books on political and world conditions and his journalistic position, Atlanta's distinguished guest is a pleasing and illuminating speaker and in this capacity has won the admiration of those coming in contact with him on his tour of America.

Arrangements have been made at the forum committee luncheon Monday to permit as many as possible to attend. Atlanta citizens are invited to make reservations with the chamber of commerce committee. The meeting will be presided over by James A. Holloman, of The Constitution, chairman of the forum committee.

HARRIS RENEWS FIGHT ON TILSON

Mr. Tilson's nomination. After the senate adjourned the president appointed Mr. Tilson, who held until the senate met last December, when, under the law, the president had to again send his name to the senate for confirmation.

"The senate judiciary committe acted on Mr. Tilson's nomination and only one of the 16 senators on the committee voted for Mr. Tilson. That one vote was cast by Senator Ernst, of Kentucky, who was defeated for reelection. Senator Ernst's political supporters in Kentucky included the negroes like Ben Davis in Georgia. Senator Ernst opposed my resolution offered in the senate to investigate the sale of federal offices in Georgia.

"No member of the senate thought that the president would again withdraw Mr. Tilson's name after he knew the senate at the next executive session would almost unanimously defeat him, but he again withdrew his name and kept the middle district of Georgia without a judge until the senate adjourned and he could again name a judge and deprive the senate of its constitutional right to pass on his confirmation.

Charges Unworthiness.

"If Mr. Tilson does not understand the constitution he should not serve as judge; if he does understand the constitution which makes the senate a part of the appointing power and knows a majority of the senate opposed his confirmation, yet is willing through the influence of Ben Davis, the negro national committeeman from Georgia, and his brother, the republican leader of the house from Connecticut, to violate the constitution in order to serve as judge, I do not think he is worthy to hold the high office. How inconsistent it is for Mr. Tilson to pass sentence on people who violate the law when he holds his office in violation of the constitution which he takes oath to uphold?

"The appointment of a United States judge not residing in the district is far reaching in its dangerous consequences. The principle involved, if allowed to go unchallenged by the senators who also take the oath to uphold the constitution, is one that carried to its next step would be the appointment to federal office of men not even residents of the state. A republican president appointed a resident of Delaware, Judge Swayne, to serve as judge in a Florida district. All such things smack too much of the old carpetbag days in the south.

"We unveiled in the capitol a few days ago the statue of Alexander H. Stephens, and on that great occasion for our state, all who spoke of his many virtues stressed the fact that he was always guided by principle, and I am proud that the people of Georgia will approve their public officials who stand by principle even though they differ with him. Mr. Stephens answered such criticisms by quoting: "Times change and men change with them, but principles never."

No Criticism of Opponents.

"I realize that some of my good friends and a few prominent lawyers who are influential in the politics of our state are deeply interested in Mr. Tilson's confirmation, and I have no criticism of them or anyone who differ with me in this matter. I am not unmindful of the patronage and many favors a United States judge can use to place lawyers and others under obligations to him and that an unscrupulous judge could use this to give serious opposition to the reelection of a senator who opposes him. I have even been threatened with opposition by some of Mr. Tilson's friends, influential democratic politicians and lawyers, if I did not cease my opposition to Mr. Tilson and abandon the principle involved in opposing a United States judge serving in a district in which he did not reside at the time of vacancy. I have said to all who advised me to abandon this great principle for expediency, that it was a matter of deep regret that I felt it my duty to continue this fight for a great principle, that I would not be worthy of the confidence of the people of Georgia if I abandoned it.

"To some of Mr. Tilson's friends who have told me of the threats to make this an issue and that Mr. Tilson's friends had already determined on the man to oppose me—a man of great wealth—they reflect on the good people of Georgia if they think they can be purchased and compliment me, by feeling that it would be useless for a poor man like myself to oppose me and must select 'a man of great wealth.' They forget that the voters of Georgia cannot be bought and that senators whose elections were purchased in other states are being denied the right to sit in the senate. If I mistake not the views of the people of the United States and their senators, there will be no more senators seated of this character.

Used as Tool.

"Mr. Tilson has not yet observed what is patent to so many; that while he has unselfish friends who are genuinely interested in him, some of them my friends, that he is being used as a tool by a few men who have always opposed me politically and hope to use Mr. Tilson to embarrass me and injure me politically—some of them not even residents of the middle district. The fact that Mr. Tilson has moved in the district since he was appointed does not alter the principle involved, that he was not a resident of the district when the vacancy occurred.

"Recently some of my good friends, the officers of the W. C. T. U., wrote me and called attenion to Mr. Tilson's record in enforcing prohibition and asked me to cease my opposition to his confirmation. I am always glad to have the views of these good people. I am proud of the fact that I have always been on the moral side of all public questions as well as prohibition. I am always with the Christian men and women. Because of this I was greatly honored by the prohibition leaders of Georgia to come to Georgia several years ago and preside at the meeting celebrating the enactment of the state-wide prohibition law, and I was glad to accept. Some of Mr. Tilson's strongest supporters are men who have been among the worst enemies of prohibition in Georgia.

"My colleague, Senator George's record on these questions is known to all and I wish to assure my prohibition friends that there are hundreds of able lawyers in the middle district—men who have fought for prohibition a hundred times more than Mr. Tilson—and Senator George and I will defeat the confirmation of anyone who we believe will not enforce this law.

Praised for Stand.

"During the past few months I visited most of the counties in Georgia. In most of them I made speeches to the largest crowds that have ever honored me. At a number of places where I spoke the courthouse would not hold the people. I told them of my work for the farmers and industries of my state, told of my record on many matters. In each address I told them of my reasons for opposing Mr. Tilson and was applauded at all times. Tens of thousands told me they approved my stand on this matter, and less than a dozen told me they favored Mr. Tilson. In some counties of the new district every lawyer declined to indorse Mr. Tilson though some of them were urged to do so by Mr. Tilson's appointees at the very time the lawyers had cases pending before Mr. Tilson.

"I have been told by persons who read the papers of Georgia that of the two hundred and fifty papers published in the state less than a dozen have supported Mr. Tilson in spite of the fact that he has many favors to give, including the designation of papers to do certain printing for which they are paid.

"It is my judgment after visiting most of the counties of the state and talking to tens of thousands about the Tilson matter that 95 per cent of the people approve my opposition to his confirmation.

"I hope the president may not again send Mr. Tilson's name to the senate. Senator George and I, who under the constitution are a part of the appointing power, have notified the attorney general that while we would regret to differ with the president, we would feel it our duty to oppose Mr. Tilson's nomination and that, in our judgment, a large majority of the senate would join us.

"In conclusion let me state that my duty compelling me to fight for this far-reaching principle has not been pleasant or easy. It would have been far easier for Senator George and myself to have abandoned the principle involved and pleased some of our good friends. It is a source of genuine regret that we could not do so. I cannot help believing that most of these friends upon reflection will approve our stand for a principle. In order to show the people of Georgia that Senator George and I, as well as those who approve our efforts in behalf of this principle, are not different from the people in other sections, I could give you many instances in other states where other senators and their people have fought for this same principle. Only recently in the state of California a vacancy occurred for a position similar to that held by Mr. Tilson. One of the candidates, an assistant attorney general of the United States, like Mr. Tilson, did not reside in the district at the time of the vacancy. I have been reliably informed that both the United States senators, every republican congressman and every bar association in every county opposed the appointment of an applicant because of non-residence in the district.

"It is quite natural that Mr. Tilson should have friends in Atlanta who were interested in his appointment in a district in which he did not reside at the time of the vacancy, and I would like to oblige them, but I am sure if there was a vacancy in the Atlanta district and the president appointed a lawyer in Savannah, Macon or other city not in the Atlanta district, that these same Atlanta people would voice their protest and urge the senators to oppose. So far as I know no Georgia governor has ever filled a vacancy in our courts by appointing a non-resident."

MORROW IS APPROVED AS MEXICAN MINISTER

Washington, December 17.—(United News.)—The senate today approved President Coolidge's appointment of Dwight Morrow, financier, to be ambassador to Mexico.

Confirmation was voted after a two-hour executive session devoted to discussion of Morrow's former connection with J. P. Morgan & Co.

Appointment of Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of war, to be governor general of the Philippines, succeeding the late Leonard Wood, also was confirmed.

Morrow, already at his post in Mexico City under a recess appointment, was opposed by Senators Reed, democrat, Missouri, and La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, in the executive session.

The senate today also confirmed appointment of Noble Brandon Judah, Chicago lawyer, to be ambassador to Cuba.

Judah and Stimson have not yet left for their posts.

STEWARDS' MEET PLANS JUNIOR COLLEGE IN OXFORD

Oxford, Ga., December 17.—(Special.)—White rain interfered with attendance, the Methodist preachers' and stewards' meeting here Friday, a goodly number came and most of the charges in the district were represented by preachers and laymen. Dr. A. W. Rees presided.

Rev. W. W. Brinsfield, agent for superannuate homes, and Dr. Frank Brandon of the general hospital board, gave an interesting account of the progress of their work. The matter of the junior college to be established at Oxford, was given especial emphasis. Dr. Rees outlined the plans for the part Newton county is expected to take in launching the enterprise, and much enthusiasm was apparent.

The findings committee made their report, and it was passed upon favorably by the body, and all the interests of the church were given due attention.

A delightful luncheon was served the guests by the ladies of Oxford at the Haygood dormitory and after a short session at the church the delegates left for their homes.

ton, who is manager of the local office of Fenner & Beane, cotton brokers, was convicted of violating the Georgia law against the operation of "bucket shops." In its decision the supreme court reversed the lower court and ordered that Mr. Layton be given a new trial.

The supreme court, in reversing the case, held that legitimate sales of cotton or other commodities under contract for future delivery are not contrary to the Georgia "anti-bucket shop" statute. The court held that this statute was designed to prohibit gambling in cotton futures and not to interfere with the legitimate sale of cotton for future delivery where actual delivery is contemplated.

After the supreme court handed down this ruling the state sought a re-hearing in the case but this application also was turned down in this decision rendered Saturday.

RULING INCORRECT, STATES TALMADGE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Commenting on an opinion rendered Friday by Georgia M. Napier, attorney general, holding that the state board of entomology could check out "money to its credit in the bank" by action of a majority of the board, Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture and chairman of the board, declared Saturday that any such action, without the commissioner's approval and signature, would be a violation of law.

"Under the civil code," said Mr. Talmadge, "all funds administered by the board must be disbursed from the state treasury, by means of requisitions signed by the commissioner of agriculture and by executive warrant.

"There are no funds of the board immune to this restriction," he said, "since fee money held in trust cannot be spent until deposited in the treasury, and then only upon requisition, signed by the commissioner of agriculture, and warrant." In support of this view he quoted section 2141 of the civil code, as follows: "All fees collected in this manner shall be turned over to the state treasurer."

Mr. Talmadge said there was only one other class of funds handled by the department, this being appropriated money kept in the treasury and paid out in the same manner as other money deposited there.

The commissioner's remarks dealt with an opinion requested of the attorney general by Sam J. Slate, state auditor, who inquired into the status of funds held in two bank accounts, which could not be checked upon, the banks said, because of conflicting instructions from Mr. Talmadge and from E. Lee Worsham, state entomologist, and secretary of the board.

NARCOTIC-CONTROL EXPERT TO SPEND YULE SEASON HERE

The Honorable Sara Graham-Mulhall, international authority on problems of narcotic drug control and winner of the 1926 Pictorial Review award of $5,000 for outstanding achievements in that direction, will arrive in Atlanta tonight to be the guest of Mrs. Chauncey Smith, 61 Eighth street, N. E., for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Graham-Mulhall has a long and distinguished record of service in international control of the drug tariff, and she has held numerous offices connected with that subject, principally that of first deputy commissioner of the New York state department of narcotic drug control.

In addition, Miss Graham-Mulhall is a distinguished lecturer, author and sociologist, and is the founder of the Foundation for World Narcotic Research and Reclamation. In 1916 the Gold Medal of the Museum of Public Safety was conferred upon her "in recognition of the devotion of time, money and personal service in humanitarian achievement."

MAN WITH LEG BURNED SPENDS MONTH ALONE

Cordova, Alaska, December 17.—(AP) After lying alone for more than a month in his cabin in the wilds of interior Alaska, with one leg burned off nearly to the knee and the other foot badly injured, Nick Raworth, a young Canadian war veteran, was taken to the Kennecott hospital today. Hospital attendants said that he had a chance to live.

Winners in Constitution's Airplane Word-Building Contest Announced

P. M. Faulkner, Route 3, Monticello, Ga., won first place, and S. A. Beaty, 1404 Elizabeth avenue, Charlotte, N. C., second, in The Constitution's Twin Puzzle "Internationals" word contest, the management announced Saturday.

"We are sorry that you were kept anxiously waiting for so many days, but the judging of the answers and lists submitted was an unusual task, and the greatest care was taken to perform this as perfectly as is humanly possible," the management said in announcing the outcome of the contest. "The judges and their assistants checked and rechecked the lists and at last were able to announce the 50 winners.

"It was found after deducting incorrect words and penalties that P. M. Faulkner had the greatest number of correct words. Having fully qualified his list of words, Mr. Faulkner is awarded the maximum amount of first prize, which is $3,000.

"S. A. Beaty, of Charlotte, N. C., had the second largest correct list and is second prize winner. He, too, availed himself of full opportunity and will receive $1,000. The winners and the amounts of the prizes they have won are listed below. It will be noticed that many of them won the maximum prizes. We are sorry that it is not our privilege to award maximum prizes to each and every winner.

"The winners are being officially notified of their success and prizes will be awarded within a few days. In closing this contest The Atlanta Constitution takes great pride in announcing the winners, and feels that this probably has been one of the most successful reader-interest contests. Thousands participated and enjoyed the building of words out of 'Internationals.' In all, the contest proved to be interesting, educational and profitable to our readers. We know that all those who had entered will realize that all cannot be winners, and that 'to the victor belongs the spoils.' We are sure that they will join The Constitution in wishing the winners much happiness from their prizes."

Mr. Faulkner is also the winner of the $500.00 extra first prize for promptness. The $3,000.00 prize which was awarded for first place together with the $500.00 extra prize for promptness, totals $3,500.00, awarded winner of the first prize.

There were many good lists submitted, but not good enough to win prizes.

The names of the following contestants submitted word lists that show their keen interest and more than ordinary ability in compiling words in a contest of this kind. Hard work and a well prepared list of words, however, as there were but 50 prizes to be awarded, could not win unless the list rated among the 50 best, and while many of the contestants who submitted word lists did not win prizes, we think that at least 50 of those who submitted the next best lists are entitled to honorable mention.

We take this opportunity to compliment them on the fine word lists they submitted.

Honorable Mention.

Rules of Contest.

Rules and regulations under which the contest was conducted, and by which the winners were selected, were as follows:

1. Any man, woman, boy or girl living in Georgia or adjoining states, who is not an employee of The Atlanta Constitution or a member of an employee's family, may submit an answer. Prize winners in former contests conducted by The Atlanta Constitution are not eligible to enter the contest or to assist others.

2. Make as many words as possible from the letters in the word "INTERNATIONALS." You may use the letters over and over again in different words, but each word must not contain a letter more times than it appears in the word "INTERNATIONALS." For example, you may use the letter "e" just once in each word; the letter "a" twice and the letter "n" three times, etc.

3. Write your words plainly on one side of the paper, in alphabetical order and number words consecutively, one, two, three, etc. Write your full name and address in the upper right-hand corner.

4. Do not use proper nouns, proper adjectives, foreign words, obsolete words, contractions, Scotch or other dialectic words. Words spelled alike but with different meanings will be counted as one word. Words spelled differently, but with the same meaning will be counted as separate words. Both the singular and plural may be used and both will be counted, provided both forms are found anywhere in the dictionary. A misspelled word will not be counted.

5. The judges will use Webster's New International Dictionary, latest edition, as their authority in deciding the winning answers.

6. One correct word will be deducted for each incorrect word.

7. If there is a tie for any prize, the full amount of the prize will be paid to each person so tied.

8. Only one prize will be awarded to a household, or group of persons. Every list must represent your own effort, and must be compiled by the person submitting it.

9. The largest nearest correct list of words prepared according to these rules will count 50 points and will win FIRST PRIZE. The next largest and nearest correct list will count 49 points and will win SECOND PRIZE, and so on until the fifty prizes have been awarded.

10. There will be three independent judges having no connection with The Constitution, who will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes; and participants by sending in their answers agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive. The Constitution reserves the right to reject at any time any contestant who it believes has violated the rules.

11. Subscriptions (both new and renewals) payable in advance at the regular subscription rates will be accepted in qualifying answers for the maximum prizes. However, in qualifying for the $3,000.00 FIRST PRIZE at least one new yearly subscription must be sent in.

12. Do not write for explanation of rules. It would be unfair to answer questions for one without sending the same information to all others. Fair play is assured to all. LIST OF WORDS MUST BE MAILED AND POSTMARKED ON OR BEFORE MIDNIGHT DECEMBER 1, 1927.

Fifty Prizes Offered.

According to the rules and regulations of the contest, there were only 50 prizes to be paid. These 50 prizes go to those who turned in the 50 largest correct lists of words, made from the word "Internationals," keeping in mind that one correct word was to be deducted for each incorrect word.

These were the conditions of the contest, and no doubt thoroughly understood by all. The largest correct word list won first prize. The second largest correct list won second prize. The third largest word list third prize, and so on down to the fiftieth prize.

The amount of the prize to be paid the winner of the first prize depended on the amount of remittance for subscriptions sent to qualify the answer, viz.: If the first prize winner, who, of course, submitted the largest correct list of words, should not have qualified with remittance and subscriptions, the total amount to be paid under the rules would have been only $35.00.

Terms of Offer.

If only $5.00 and six months' subscription to The Daily and Sunday Constitution had been sent, the first prize winner would have been paid only $350; if qualified with only $0.50, for one year's subscription, the amount of first prize would have been only $1,000.00. But in this contest the first prize winner sent in two annual subscriptions, one of which was new, with a total remittance of $19, and under the rules is therefore entitled to $3,000.

The same rule applies to the second prize, in accordance with amount stated in the prize table, which appears in the announcement of the contest, likewise the third, fourth, fifth prize, etc.

The Constitution and judges, under the rules of the contest, have no voice in, nor are they interested in any certain individuals winning prizes. The contestants themselves by the grade of word list which they submitted themselves determine the winners. The only thing that the judges could do was to pick out the winners according to the standing and grade of list submitted, and the results as published herewith are the findings of the judges and aids after a careful and diligent examination of the word lists submitted.

1,532 Words Win.

The announcement of the winners in this contest is of special interest to all contestants, as well as readers of The Atlanta Constitution who may have had interest in the contestants.

There were a large number who entered the contest. Only 50 prizes were offered. Those submitting the 50 best lists, according to the rules and regulations of the contest, naturally were awarded the 50 prizes.

Many contestants submitted word lists which contained more words than those the prize-winners had, but according to rule 6, not only each incorrect word must be deducted, but a list must be penalized one correct word for each incorrect word submitted in the list. When this rule was applied, those who submitted the larger lists had a net rating far below those of the winners.

The winners of the first several prizes submitted but very few incorrect words. The winner of the first prize submitted a word list totaling 1,551 words, of which 19 were incorrect. This left the correct number of words 1,532. Applying rule 6 a further reduction of 19 words had to be made, making a rating of the first prize-winner's list of words 1,513.

The winner of the fiftieth or last prize submitted a word list totaling 1,465, of which 67 were incorrect, making a net rating, after rule 6 was applied, of 1,331.

EMORY SINGERS TO GIVE CAROLS RENDITION TODAY

The Emory Glee club will sing Christmas carols at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening, December 18, at 7:30 o'clock for the third consecutive year. Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, director of the club, will be assisted by Dr. Sheldon, city organist, with several organ solos.

The carols which will be sung by the Glee club are songs that have come down through several centuries, from many countries. Some of the songs are "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming," "While By My Sheep," "The Holy Mother," "Bring a Torch," "Silent Night," "Ye Watchers and Ye Holy Ones."

Sam Proger, violinist and member of the Emory orchestra, will render a violin solo, "Ave Maria." The club will sing as its last carol, "Adeste Fidelis," the Emory quartet leading, assisted by the Glee club chorus.

LOFTIS COMPANY WINS CHEVROLET CONTRACT

Growth of the Loftis Plumbing & Heating company, of Atlanta, which has just been awarded the plumbing and sprinkling contract for the new $2,500,000 Atlanta plant of the Chevrolet Motor Car company, is one of the real business romances of the south.

William Stephenson Loftis, established the business April 10, 1903, with nothing but his energy and skill and a cash capital of only $160. No other capital aside from the original $160, except that earned by the business as it grew and expanded under the energy and skill of Mr. Loftis, was ever put into the business.

WILLIAM STEPHENSON LOFTIS

At the beginning the business occupied half of the first floor at 23 East Hunter street, a space of only 16 by 50, 800 square feet. It now occupies its own large three-story building at 438-440 Marietta street with 16,000 square feet of floor space.

The first year's business was only a gross of $3,500. There was a gradual increase each year from the start, due to perfect service and close prices, coupled with Mr. Loftis' skill and good business management. The business last year amounted to more than $450,000, close to half a million dollars, which puts it in a very small class of plumbing and heating concerns that do that much business in the south or the country. The Loftis Plumbing & Heating company now does business in all of the southern, southeastern and middle western states.

Throughout this territory the Loftis company offers plumbing, heating, sprinkler systems, high-pressure boilers, mechanical ventilation, vacuum cleaning systems, air cooling systems, refrigeration systems and ice water systems.

In the 25 years that Mr. Loftis has been in business many big contracts have been handled. Among those being Loew's new million dollar theater, Columbus, Ohio; Alabama theater, Birmingham; Hurt building addition, Atlanta; Read house, Chattanooga; Richmond hotel, Augusta; Federal Reserve bank addition, Atlanta; Berry school, Rome; American Benberg Silk mills, Johnson City, Tenn.; Southern Railway Engine terminal, Columbia, S. C.; J. P. Allen building, Atlanta, and many large jobs for the United States government and the city schools of Atlanta.

At a conference last week in Detroit with officials of the Chevrolet Motor Car company Mr. Loftis was awarded the contract for plumbing and sprinkler system in the new two and one-half million-dollar Atlanta plant. This sprinkler system is the largest ever installed in the southeast, having more than 5,000 sprinkler heads, Mr. Loftis says. The Loftis Plumbing & Heating company is owned entirely by William Stephenson Loftis.

MUSEUM ABOLISHES ADMISSION CHARGE

Admission will not be charged to the High Museum of Art in the future, J. Carroll Payne, president of the executive board of the museum and of the Atlanta Art association, announced Saturday.

Mr. Payne said that the general public will be admitted to the galleries free of charge during the hours the museum is open, from 10 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. All of the galleries now are filled with exhibits.

Freezes To Death.

Thomasville, Ala., December 17.—(AP)—The frozen body of S. J. McNider, 60, Mervin, Ala., merchant, was found late today by searching parties who instituted a hunt for him after his disappearance last night.

New, Brilliant Comet To Visit City This Week

Skjellerrups comet, the newest discovery among the heavenly bodies, should come within naked-eye vision of Atlanta tonight, and soon should be easily visible for a period of about two weeks. The comet is said to be the most brilliant to visit the earth within 15 years, or since Halley's comet made its last swing in this direction.

Local astronomers were eagerly scanning the skies for the new comet Saturday night, but haze on the horizon obscured it. The comet will be seen over the northwestern horizon between the sunset point and the north star, moving three or four degrees north each day. The comet is said to be very close to the sun in the line of vision, and will be seen in the early evening and should be bright and easily seen by Monday night.

This new comet was not anticipated by the astronomers until its recent discovery by the amateur astronomer for whom it is named. Astronomers said that it will reach the height of its brilliance about Christmas time.

Although astronomers are in doubt as to whether or not it has a tail, they believe that it has a fiery appendage because it is said to be traveling at a tremendous rate of speed.

Atlanta will also see Encke comet in January, according to Judge John D. Humphries, well known as a local astronomer. Encke's comet is one of the most regular visitors, having been observed during 36 visits since its discovery.

Divorced Husband Dead.

New Cumberland, W. Va., December 17.—(AP)—Granted a divorce yesterday, Mrs. Flora M. Dell learned today her husband, John Dell, died in Wierton, W. Va., three hours before the papers were signed. The divorce was obtained on the ground of wilful absence.

YOUTHFUL ATLANTA ARTIST IS AWARDED PRIZE FOR POSTER

E. M. LUSINK.

Embert M. Lusink, Atlanta commercial advertising artist, was informed Saturday from Rochester, N. Y., that the poster design drawn and submitted by him had been awarded first prize and accepted for use by the Rochester automobile show board of directors for 1928. Mr. Lusink, formerly connected with a leading advertising agency in Rochester, is now consulting commercial artist in the office of of Howell Foreman, counsellor and executive in advertising and publicity, Fourth National Bank building, Atlanta.

In a letter announcing the winning of the prize by Mr. Lusink, R. J. Mengle, executive secretary of the Rochester Automobile Dealers' association, congratulates the young Atlanta artist upon his successful competition. Mr. Lusink stated Saturday that he expected a copy of the finished lithograph design to be forwarded to him in Atlanta, where it will be placed on exhibition for department store executives, automobile dealers and other business concerns using art in advertising.

AID FOR MINISTERS IS DECEMBER WORK OF PRESBYTERIANS

In Atlanta and throughout the Presbyterian Church in the United States during the month of December, united attention is centered on the cause of Christian education and ministerial relief. Dr. Henry H. Sweets, of Louisville, Ky., is executive secretary of this work and he has associated with him a staff of experts.

Churches are making especial offerings to the work of the executive committee of Christian education and ministerial relief during this month, and on Christmas day a program prepared by the committee will be rendered in all churches. The program, prepared by Mildred Welch, is called "There Shall Come a Star," and is concerned with the dedication of life and white gifts for Christian service.

According to the last report of the Christian education and ministerial relief committee, the Southern Presbyterian church has 359 candidates for the ministry and mission service in schools and colleges under the care of various presbyteries and aided by this committee. This committee aided last year 167 aged ministers, 246 widows, 45 orphans and four unordained missionaries. The endowment fund for ministerial relief is greatly aided by the income from the Graham building of Jacksonville. Plans are being made looking to inauguration of a plan in 1930, by which each aged minister may receive a minimum annuity of $600.

ment of Candler field, Atlanta's airport. Mr. Hartsfield is chairman of both committees at the present time, but the air field takes so much of his time that it is felt his activity as promoter of the infant industry should not be curtailed by too many assignments. Of late Mr. Hartsfield has complained that his committee assignments are taking too much of his time, and it is expected that Mayor Ragsdale will relieve him of the bridge committee rather than lose his services as head of the aviation committee.

In the event Mr. Hartsfield is not renamed chairman of the bridge body, Councilman Wiley L. Moore, of the Seventh, was pointed to as his logical successor. Councilman C. L. Chosewood, also of the third ward, probably will succeed Mr. Hartsfield in the event he is retired from the committee, although there was some speculation as to whether he would be relieved of the entire assignment or merely of the chairmanship.

The police, parks, streets, traffic, sanitary, ordinance and legislation, charter revision, water, municipal garage, auditorium and conventions, contested claims and litigation, library, insurance, electric and other railways, electric lights, benevolence and pensions, cemetery, public improvements, salaries, public buildings and grounds, printing, bureau of municipal research and statistics, freight rates and transportation, minutes, municipal market and aviation committees are expected to be reappointed with the single exceptions of substitution of retiring members by those who succeed them.

Orme to Remain.

Councilman A. J. Orme will remain as chairman of the finance committee and since Councilman T. Frank Callaway, of the tenth, has expressed a desire to be relieved of service on this body it is expected that Mr. Millican will succed him. Mr. Drennon probably will succeed Mr. Russell, who will retire.

Alderman Gann will succeed Councilman Jack C. Hardy, of the sixth, as a member of the board of firemasters, and Councilman Jim E. Bowden will be named in place of Councilman Ben T. Huiet, it is expected.

In the event that Mr. Moore is named as chairman of bridge committee, either Alderman Gann or Councilman Ellis B. Barrett is slated to succeed him as chairman of the sewer committee. Mr. Millican and Mr. Lyle are slated to succeed Mr. Ford and Mr. Sudderth, respectively, as committee members.

New Park Planned.

Authorization of the purchase of a 360-acre tract of land for establishment of a large park in the southern and western sections of Fulton county also is expected at the meeting of council Monday.

The tract is known as the Perkerson estate, and a large delegation of citizens from that community will be present to back Alderman Charles M. Ford and Councilmen T. Frank Callaway and W. Garland Cooper, of the tenth ward, in presenting the resolution whch provides that the city and county buy the tract jointly.

Owners have set a price of $1,000 an acre on the tract, and this is said by a board of appraisers to be an exceedingly reasonable figure. The measure will be offered to council with unanimous approval of the parks committee, a large majority of members of the finance committee and a majority of the members of council itself. Practically no opposition to the proposal is expected.

County to Give $60,000.

Fulton county commissioners have agreed to contribute $60,000 towards buying the tract and to relieve the city from any payment until January 1, 1930. They also will begin construction of an 18-hole golf course on the newly acquired tract this winter and will have it completed for use by spring, it was announced.

Reconsideration of a proposal offered at the last meeting by Alderman William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the bridge committee, that the city purchase a strip of property on Central avenue, known as the Felkner property, for erection of the Central avenue viaduct, will be before council. The purchase price, $57,000, was attacked by Councilmen Harry York and Jack Hardy, of the sixth ward, as excessive. They, therefore, served notice of reconsideration after council approved the purchase at the session held December 5.

Alderman J. Allen Couch, Alderman Ford, Councilman W. E. Saunders and others will offer a paper, bearing the unanimous approval of the school committee, asking the special financial committee established several weeks ago to administer funds for the remainder of the year, to find $22,000 to prevent a slash in teacher's salaries for the latter half of December.

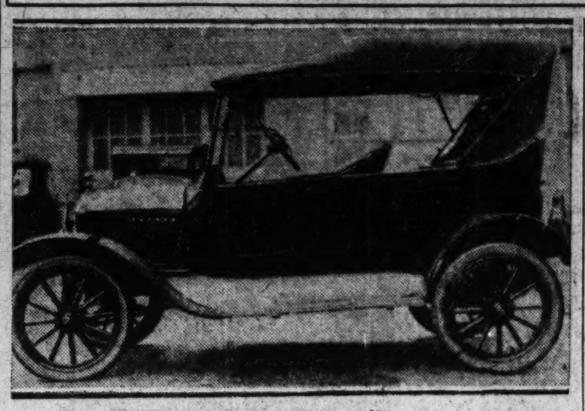

The special committee is composed of Councilman A. J. Orme, chairman of the finance committee; Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and City Comptroller B. Graham West. Due to a shortage in funds in the school department, the school board faces a deficit of approximately $22,000.

Hope that collection of overdue taxes would provide enough money to obviate the necessity of asking the special allocation to the board of education was abandoned Saturday, when Mr. West announced that receipts of the city marshal just about met previous estimates.

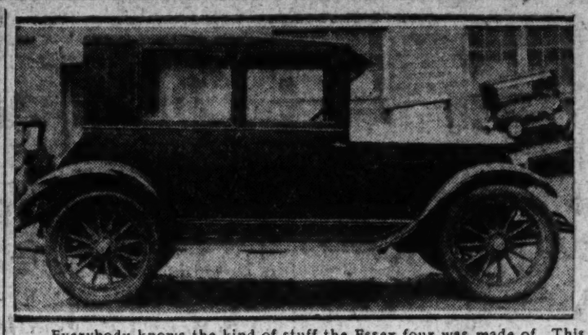

Alderman Claude Ashley, chairman of the water committee, will present a resolution asking city council to accept the bid of Buford, Hall & Smith company, of Atlanta, to install a new 40,000,000-gallon capacity daily pump at the Hemphill station. Cost of the new equipment is $73,600. It will be the largest pump in the waterworks service, all others being 30,000,000-gallon capacity.

"Ten Opportunities" Auctioning These Cars

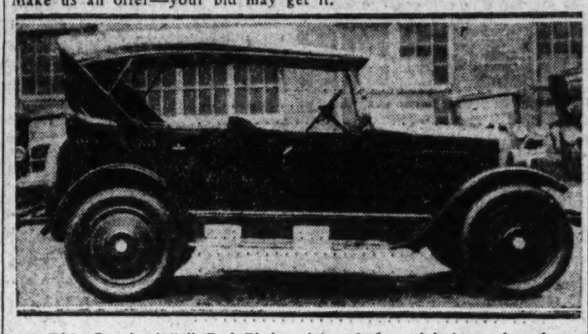

A late model Ford touring car in fair condition in every respect. A real buy if bought for less than $125.

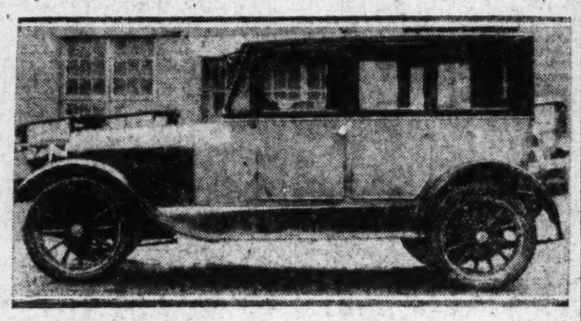

Everybody knows the kind of stuff the Essex four was made of. This one is in excellent mechanical condition, looks fairly well and has many miles of service left in it. A real pickup if bought for less than $150. Make us an offer—your bid may get it.

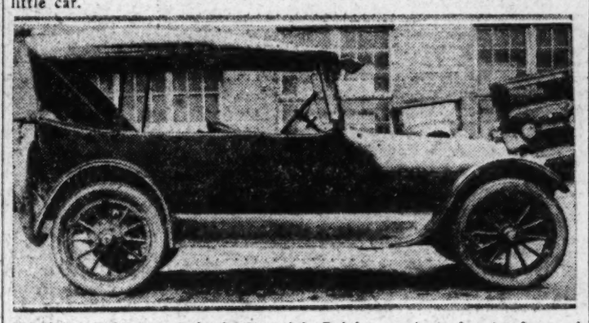

There's absolutely nothing wrong with this Apperson "8." Looks and runs well; the tires are practically new—a car easily worth $400 or more. It's truly a fine car. Someone will get a real bargain. Go see for yourself.

This Overland "4" Red Bird, a late 1925 model, has a brand-new maroon Duco paint job, new floor mats, in extra good running condition, disc wheels. The resale value of this car is actually around $200. The bids are way below that, so get busy. Your bid might get you this fine little car.

No better car was ever built in its price class than the Hanson "6" This sedan is all tuned up and ready to ride. Go see it and make us an offer.

Buicks' K-5, one of the best models Buick ever turned out. In good running condition. Rubber and paint fair. It has many useful miles left.

These automobiles are on display at the D. C. Black company, 326 Peachtree. Look them over and send or bring in your bid. If you are high bidder Tuesday night the car you bid on will be yours and every cent of the money you pay will go to The Constitution's "Ten Opportunities" fund, to be disbursed by the Atlanta Family Welfare society for the ten most worthy and needy families, the "Ten Opportunities" families.

INCREASE SHOWN IN TAX PAYMENTS

riod, which closed Thursday, is very small, Mr. Rose said.

His statement follows:

"If the payment of income taxes in Georgia, based on the net taxable incomes of individuals and corporations in the state of Georgia, is an index of the healthy condition of business in the state I would say that Georgia is in a splendid condition.

"We all know that the 1926 revenue act entirely eliminated capital stock taxes for corporations, that it increased exemptions on estate taxes from $50,000 to $100,000, it increased exemptions of single persons from $1,000 to $1,500, and married persons from $2,500 to $3,500, practically eliminated taxes on theater tickets, as well as the elimination of other taxes, and notwithstanding all that, there has been paid into this office for this fiscal year up to December 15 some more than was paid during the same period in 1926, and more than was paid in the same period in 1925. The collections for the first 15 days in December, this year, were $77,673.80 more than during the same period last year.

"This indicates to me a healthy profit condition in the state, and also ready money with which to make payments, for the delinquent list at the end of the fourth quarterly payment period for the year is very small."

Comparative figures show that income tax receipts for the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1927, were well above receipts for the previous fiscal year, in spite of many reductions and elimination of taxable items. The 1927 fiscal year receipts were $14,277,050.20, while those for 1926 were $14,231,497.01.

Georgia compares very favorably with other states in the income tax receipts for the past year, Mr. Rose said. For instance, Georgians paid $75,071.36 for amusement taxes, theater and concert admissions, as compared with the following states: Tennessee, $53,626.91; Alabama, $25,168.91, and North Carolina, $26,280.54. This indicates a healthy condition in Georgia, for people do not attend the theaters when business conditions are dull, he said.

EXTORTION LAID TO POLICEMAN

ing accepted $8 from Jack Smith, negro, of 140 Woodward avenue, an employee of the Atlanta Envelope company, in connection with a liquor charge.

Craig is said to have attempted to arrest a negro, who was carrying a package which on investigation proved to contain a gallon of corn liquor. Smith, it is claimed, called out to the other negro that a policeman was coming, and Craig then placed him under arrest, while the carrier of the liquor dropped his package and escaped. The officer carried the liquor to police station but made no case against Smith.

Officer Craig was located at his home Saturday night by Detective Lieutenant W. H. Andrews.

When both the negro and Craig appeared before Chief Beavers, the negro was asked to describe the bills he said he gave the officer. He replied, "I have him a $5 bill and three $1 bills, and one of the $1 bills was badly stained with tobacco juice." Chief Beavers ordered Craig to show what money he had on his person, and a $20 bill, a $5 bill and two $1 bills were produced. Upon examination one of the bills was found to be badly stained, it was stated.

Craig told the chief that he did not arrest the negro because he was not in possession of the liquor, because he pleaded he had no money to pay a fine, and because he agreed to report to him activities of negro bootleggers. He denied accepting any money.

Two other negroes who were listed as a witness to a part of the transaction, Dan C. Craft, of 142 Woodward avenue, and Roy Dobbs, of 143 Woodward, told Chief Beavers they saw Smith come back within a few minutes after he had been arrested. He told them that he had not been taken to police station and had not posted any bond.

Smith told Chief Beavers that he met Officer Craig at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at Hunter and King streets and paid him the $8.

Jones Says He Will Not Enter British Open This Year

Jackson High Wins Gridiron Championship

White Leads Terriers to 6-0 Victory Over Tampa Eleven.

Orlando, Fla., December 17.—(AP)—Earl Hirsh's seven-yard end-over-end dash for a touchdown in the earlier stages of the second quarter won for Andrew Jackson Tigers the 1927 Florida interscholastic football championship when the Jacksonville outfit defeated the Hillsborough Hill Terriers, of Tampa, 6 to 0, before 4,000 fans at Tinker field here today.

Jackson continually threatened in the first period and lost a touchdown on a forward pass when offside play called the ball back. At the opening of the second quarter the Tigers started a determined drive down the field that was climaxed with Hirsh's dash around left end for the touchdown. Dorsett's attempted placement for the point went wild.

The Terriers uncorked a powerful offensive in the second half that was a continual threat to the Tigers. In the third period the Tampans started a march down the field that carried them to the one-foot line, but there the Tiger forward wall braced and the ball went over on downs after two thrusts failed to gain the necessary yardage.

In yardage gained by straight football the Terriers excelled, marking up ten first downs to five for Jacksonville. Hillsborough attempted seven passes, completing one for an 18-yard gain. Jackson tossed four, completing two for gains of 20 and 4 yards, respectively.

Jimmy White, substitute in the backfield, led the Terrier offense that threatened to score in the latter stages of the game. He was easily the outstanding player of the game, while "Monkey" Brenan, crippled Tiger quarter, who was sent into the breach with the ball in the shadow of his team's goal posts, rallied his mates in defense and unleashed an offense that was hammering away far into Hillsborough territory as the game closed.

The lineup and summary:

JACKSON.	Pos.	TAMPA.
Grensway	l.e.	Dansby
Wolfson	l.t.	Kirkconnell
Schemer	l.g.	Ennis
Dyson	c.	Lovell

Pa Stribling Takes Charge of W. L.

Macon, Ga., December 17.—(AP)—The contract between W. L. Stribling, Sr., and Walk Miller, under which Miller has served during the past year as manager of Young Stribling and which expires December 31, will not be renewed, the elder Stribling announced here today.

"Effective January 1, I will serve as manager and trainer as in the past," Mr. Stribling said.

It was stated also that "Ma" Stribling, having fully recovered from an automobile accident of a year ago, would again form an important part of the Stribling trio, which hopes to acquire new laurels in the boxing profession during 1928.

Dazzy Vance, premier hurling ace of the Brooklyn Dodgers, turned his starring abilities to golf the other day when he won the amateur tournament which signalized opening of the golf course at Dunedin, Fla., for the winter season. Dazzy's winter home is in Dunedin.

Smithies Show Best Record Among Preps

Tech High Team Wins Seven Out of Ten Games During Season.

BY WHITNER CARY.

Many closely fought games, keen rivalry, good coaching, splendid material and exceptionally high standards of sportsmanship—no wonder the prep school football season among Atlanta schools will go down as one, if not the greatest in history.

While no state or southern championship banner floats over an Atlanta school as a result of the season's play, many a notable triumph over outside opposition graces the record of several of the local high schools.

A brief summary of the football activities of the five major high schools of Atlanta—Tech High, Boys High, Marist College, Georgia Military academy and University School for Boys—would not be out of place at this time.

Smithies Start Well.

Tech High, which counts among its notable triumphs a sensational 7-3 victory over Erie High, of Erie, Pa., started off the season as if not only the state but southern banner would fly from its masthead 'ere December brought the season to a close. For six straight times the Smithies charged through the ranks of the opposition. Among the casualty list on this mad canter was McCallie High, of Chattanooga, 21-0; Erie, Pa., Academy High, 7-3; Newnan High, 26-6; Cedartown High, 47-6; Lanier High, 26-0; and G. M. A., 22-0. After this wild gallop a slight let-down occurred and three defeats crept into the picture. Chattanooga High beat them, 6-0; Charlotte High followed with a 7-6 victory, and then Riverside made it three straight by sending them down at the short end of a 12-to-6 count. The season ended in a blaze of glory when Boys High was beaten, 39 to 0.

Boys High started off the season with a 13-6 victory over Decatur High. Its victories included Marist college, 13-0; Columbus High, 19-7; University School for Boys, 13-6, and Newnan High, 20-6. Its lost column shows defeats at the hands of Sidney Lanier, of Montgomery, 18-13; G. M. A., 7-6; Lanier High, of Macon, 19-0; Rome High, 12-0; Tech High, 39-0.

Cadets Have Good Year.

G. M. A. shows a slate with five wins, two defeats and one tie. Its victims include Columbus Industrial High school, 52-0; Locust Grove institute, 12-0; Boys' High, 7-6; Decatur High, 24-0, and Columbus High, 32-14. It lost to Monroe A. and M., 18-0, and to Tech High, 22-0. Rome High was played to a 6-6 tie.

Marist college broke even on the season. Out of seven games played, it won three, lost three and tied one. In the won column it can point to an impressive 35-0 victory over Robert E. Lee, a 26-6 won over Marietta High and a 25-14 decision over Carrollton. It took the count from Boys' High, 13-0; Darlington High, 20-0, and Newnan High, 6-2. A tie resulted in the Madison engagement.

Three wins and five defeats is the record of University School for Boys. The bright chapters in its record include a 13-7 victory over the Oglethorpe frosh, to 29-0 win over the Eight District A. and M., and a 13-0 triumph over Norman Park institute. Its lost column finds the following defeats: Louisville High, 19-7; Lanier High, 14-0; G. M. C., 13-12; Munroe A. and M., 22-7; Riverside, 31-0.

TECH AND GEORGIA PLAY FOR CONSTITUTION CUP IN NEXT THREE GAMES

If you look in the trophy room at Georgia Tech you will see a huge silver loving cup inscribed with the following epic words: "Permanently won by Georgia Tech, December 3, 1927: score 12-0."

In all probability there has been more talk about that game during the past two months than any other southern game in the history of football has ever received. And that handsome trophy, presented by The Constitution, played a big part in this talk.

Three years ago the two state institutions renewed athletic relations after a break of several years. The Constitution offered this trophy to be permanently won by the school taking two out of three games. Tech did that and now another great trophy will be offered by The Constitution for competition under the same rules.

Amicable Relations.

These first three years of renewed relations between the two institutions have proven beyond doubt that their athletic relations may be carried on without friction and it is an irrevocable fact that a trophy such as The Constitution offers adds much to this amicable spirit of sportsmanship.

Friday night at the Atlanta Athletic club Clark Howell, Sr., publisher of The Constitution, presented the old trophy to Captain Ed Crowley, who accepted it in behalf of Georgia Tech. At the same time he announced that The Constitution would offer a similar trophy for the next series of three games.

Joyful Announcement.

The announcement was received with considerable joy, for the cup has been a concrete expression of friendly rivalry between the colleges and the play for its possession during the past three years has been ideal from the standpoint of dramatic qualities. Tech won the first year by a 3-0 count. Georgia won last year by one point and then this year, with nearly all of the experts conceding Georgia a more than even chance to take it permanently, the Gold and White won its great victory and took the trophy home for keeps. History may repeat itself in the next three years and it may not but in any case there will be a Constitution trophy in play for those three games.

Good Year Looms for A. A. C.

Joe Bean is sitting in his office at the Atlanta Athletic club and rubbing his hands in contemplation of the basketball season to come. And well he may, for he is looking back over the history of the Athletic club team and seeing in the future as great a team as those of 1921 and 1924 when the club went undefeated through its schedules.

A glance back to 1921 recalls the great team which suffered no defeats until the semi-final round of the national tournament in Kansas City. On this team were such stars as Rufus Bass, the "old master" of the club team, and John Westmoreland at forwards; Louis Morrison and Tom Bryan at centers; Scrappy Sullivan, John Graves, John Oliver and Steve Hartney at guards.

This team, you will remember, if you are an old timer, went to the national tourney with a clean record and struggled through to the semi-finals only to lose by three points. It then played off for third place and won that honor.

Nearly the same team came back in 1922 and after losing but one game to the Birmingham Athletic club in that year again entered the national tournament and lost in an extra-period game in the second round. Those two teams marked the height of the club prosperity until the season of '24-'25 when the team was again undefeated through a schedule of 14 games.

The winter of '25 saw the club lose three games in a schedule of more than a dozen contests and four games were lost last year. The club supporters went through these two comparatively lean years with the hope that the scoring ability of the team would be bolstered with the coming of the 1927 season. It is still a bit early to prophesy that such a change has taken place but Joe Bean is seldom unduly optimistic and he is firmly convinced that the club prospects are as good this year as they have been at any time during his 17 years as mentor at the A. A. C.

On this year's squad he has at forwards three of the finest artists on the independent court today. In Pat Stephens he has a star basket shooter and the last of the 1926 season found Pat breaking away from his "long shot complex." He should be a great point getter this year.

D. Brewer is a fine artist on close work. With Stephens as a feeder this lad can work wonders in the "hole." He is an accurate and rapid passer. Johnson and Red Preas are wonderful forwards and as a matter of fact Red Preas is going to make the old timers step to keep their places this season.

Joe Bennett and Cy Bell, two of the best centers in the south, are ably backed by Eckford, another great pivot man. These three centers assure the club of at least one good pivot man for any and all occasions. Joe, however, must look to his laurels if he intends to keep Cy Bell from taking his place on the regular lineup.

For a time it looked like the guard positions might be weakened when Rufus Bass decided that he would "retire" but Ridgeway came along and with Joe McCrory to fill the other position, Coach Bean has ceased to worry. Rufus Bass is ready to play in case of necessity but the veteran desires to quit if he is not needed. He is now coaching the club reserves for their City League schedule.

This Ridgeway is a sweet guard and should be able to fill the shoes of the now famous Rufus very well. He was a member of the University of Kentucky team which won the conference championship on the first year that the Atlanta Athletic club staged its tourney at the auditorium.

Perhaps Joe Bean is too optimistic, and perhaps not, but even if his team loses every game the old master may be proud of a team that has lost but eight games in six years. That is a record for any of the independent teams to shoot at.

Player - Boss Role Harmful To Baseballer

Outfielders Can Carry Double Burden Okay, Others Can't—Moriarty.

BY GEORGE MORIARTY.

Manager of the Detroit Baseball Club.

(Copyright, 1927, in all Countries by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Bill McKechnie's return as a National league manager brings to light the odd situation which sends Bob O'Farrell, last year's pilot of the Cardinals, back into the ranks as a player, unencumbered by a title.

O'Farrell's demotion is all the more unusual because he requested it. Undoubtedly he decided that the responsibilities of being a manager detracted from his work as a catcher. O'Farrell learned the difficulties of a playing-manager in one season. In 1926 he was adjudged the most valuable player in the senior circuit, and the following year he found the hardships of the double role had robbed him of his class as a great catcher.

O'Farrell's toughtst blow while managing the Cardinals was the loss of Tommy Thevenow, sparkling shortstop. Thevenow broke his ankle early in the season and his backstop-boss found it impossible to fill his shoes. I have been told by many National leaguers that the Cardinals could have romped home with their second successive pennant if the gods of chance had spared Thevenow. In that case, O'Farrell probably could have continued his managerial career minus the cares that go with a loser.

Double Role a Detriment.

The return of the Cardinal catcher to single duties should answer the question whether the double role is a detriment. It certainly is. Of course when a team is playing snappy ball the playing-manager is likely to be at the top of his form also, but when the breaks go the other way, his work is bound to suffer.

It is also true that some types of the playing-manager can stand up under reverses better than others, but generally speaking I think their playing suffers or becomes high class according to the failure or success of their mates.

Of the type capable of playing top notch ball regardless of setbacks, Stanley Harris, of the Senators, takes a place in the front ranks. He is fortified by pluck and supreme confidence. Rogers Hornsby, This Speaker and Eddie Collins, as playing-managers, also played the same brilliant game day after day, whether the breaks were for or against them.

Backstop Too Busy.

However, it seems that the outfielder who is playing-manager faces less difficulty than the infielder or catcher who acts in the same capacity. The backstop is occupied with every pitched ball and is mixed up in various strenuous plays. The infielder is in much the same boat. But the outfielder is concerned only with his few chances, and therefore has ample time to weigh the situations that constantly arise.

Many critics thought it a mistake to burden Sisler with the managerial post in addition to his playing. Sisler's brilliance as a first baseman was second only to the standard set by Hal Chase, but the constant worries of bossing a losing club seemed to take the edge off his playing.

Perhaps Sam Breadon, the Cardinals' magnate, had the Sisler example in mind when he agreed to take the yoke off O'Farrell's shoulders. Now McKechnie can do the worrying for the club and O'Farrell can go blithely on his way catching great ball as one of the rank and file.

Brookhaven Club Locker Rooms Closed

During the process of moving to the new locker rooms at the Capital City Country club, the old locker rooms will be closed to members from Monday, December 19, to Friday, December 23.

Druid Hills Golf club and the East Lake Country club have generously offered the use of their courses to members of the Capital City club during this time without any charge for greens fees.

In building the new country club the locker rooms were built first and should be ready to begin moving into on Monday but it will take a few days to get the moving job done and it will be closed during those days.

Aids Red Sox

Purchase outright by the Boston Red Sox of Ken Williams, heavy-hitting outfielder of the St. Louis Browns, is expected to prove a boon to Boston.

Kansas Pilot Resigns.

Charles W. Bachman, football and track coach at the Kansas State Agricultural college has resigned because his wife's health necessitated an immediate change of climate.

Statement Bears Mark Of Finality

Atlanta Golf Wizard Will Confine Activities to Amateur and U. S. Open.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

If our English friends of the links—by Jove—wish to have a few more course records shattered during the coming summer it is certain that they must do the smashing themselves. The reason being that Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., who is very easy on the eye and very hard on course records, has definitely decided not to return to England to defend his title next summer.

This announcement will bring keen regret on both sides of the ocean. The Britons have learned to like a beating when it is administered by Mr. Jones and the golfing fans of our fair nation have learned to look for those beatings to be administered periodically.

But Robert says, "even golfers must work for a living sometimes and in order to make a living I must finish my studies at Emory university." Which statement sounds very logical to all of us who find it takes considerable time to make any living at all. And that statement by Bob carried a note of finality.

We say this announcement from Robert brings regret and we mean that thing. If you were to take a poll of golfers and fans in the United States regarding the possibility of Bob Jones again winning the British title you might pick up one "nay" if your poll was large enough but it would have to be large.

But with the British open scheduled for May this year and the school year not being finished until a month later, Bob's statement bears an air of finality which leaves little hope. Last season he did not intend to go abroad to defend the title which he won in 1926, but changed his plans at the last minute and the result of that trip is one of the boldest chapters in golfing history. His 285 over the difficult St. Andrews course set a competitive record which is likely to stand until he beats it himself or some other wizard comes up from the ranks.

Bob will play in the American open at Olympia Fields, Chicago, and also in the national amateur at Braeburn, West Newton, Mass. He may even enter the southern open which he won last spring if the event is repeated this season but that will be the sum total of his tournament play unless his plans are materially changed.

The definite statement from Bob brings regret but this feeling will be doubly felt if he should win the open at Chicago in June, because then he would have been able to hold all three of the major titles at once, again provided he had made a trip to England in May and won for the third consecutive year.

BOB PAYING ATTENTION TO STUDIES.

Bobby Jones' announcement that he will not enter the British golf cham-

Good Bouts Promised At Ringside Tuesday

Ted Goodrich Mixes With Wild Bill Morris in Headliner. Local Boys to Furnish Action.

Industrial rivalry will flare up, in the eight-round semi-windup of the weekly fight card at the Ringside club Tuesday night when Jack Garrett, the fighting motorman of the Georgia Power company, will be pitted against Young Carter, who is rated as the best scrapper among the electricians of the city.

Fighting is a side-line with Garrett, but it is the main business of Carter, who only works as an electrician between matches. Carter has made several appearance in Atlanta matches and impressed the fans with his ability at slinging gloves.

While the preliminaries may provoke considerable excitement the fans' chief interest is devoted to the ten-round main event, which will involve Ted Goodrich and Will Bill Morris.

Goodrich, who only recently went under the management of Walk Miller has impressed fans with his fighting spirit, punch and skill. He made quick work of Dixie Sullivan on the last card at the Ringside club and has promised to do just as well, or better by Morris, who is making his first appearance in an Atlanta ring.

Goodrich, who only recently graduated into the middleweight class, has a hard punch that in addition to laying several of his opponents low has scared away other fighters, who thought that they wanted to mix it with the local favorite.

Morris it seems has no such fears of the Atlanta youth. He has something of a record in his own right and believes that he can stop Goodrich, or at least pepper him for the referee's decision.

Morris scored several triumphs in Florida rings last summer and only last week defeated Spike Webb by knocking him into the care of the referee for the fatal count of ten.

In Florida decisions won by Morris were over such pugilists as Young Wallace, Ken Burrus, Cole Miller and others. One of the kayo victories scored by Morris was at the expense of Tut Seymour.

Tickets for the Tuesday night show will be available at Hack Eibel's billiard parlor Monday morning, Matchmaker Jimmy Mayson announced yesterday.

MIAMI CLUB LOSES, 31 TO 0, TO MILLSAPS

Coral Gables, Fla., December 17.—(AP)—Millsaps college, Jackson, Miss., today blasted the University of Miami Hurricane's hopes for a whirlwind season finish by scoring a crushing 31 to 0 victory. Miami, coming out of a slump to tie Georgetown, of Kentucky, last Saturday had hopes of victory today to begin the wind-up which is featured by games with Louisiana college Christmas and Furman on New Year's.

The locals, in the first quarter, played Millsaps off its feet with a rushing offensive and a stolid defense, but weakened in the middle of the second quarter. Fred Wignall, on the Millsaps 20-yard line, started through the line, fumbled and Boswell, huge tackle, lumbered out of the scrimmage and labored 80 yards for the first touchdown.

In the third quarter, Bilbo, quarterback, after a long Millsaps drive, crashed through guard for five yards and a counter, while Crawford broke through tackle from the Miami 20-yard line for another. In the fourth, Crawford scored twice, once off tackle and again around end, each play following a Millsaps drive. Crawford missed four attempts at placement for points and Millsaps scored only one such point, a pass, Crawford to Baxter.

Cliff Courtney, elected 1927 captain just before the game, was the only Miami player to combat Crawford, flashy back, successfully as the Millsaps star took things in his own hands to romp away with the victory. Time and again Courtney, as safety, succeeded in pulling down Crawford.

The Lineup and Summary.

MIAMI (0)	POS.	MILLSAPS (31)
Ashman	l.e.	Blount

Macon Bids For G.I.A.A. Tourney

Macon, Ga., December 17.—The Junior Chamber of Commerce is willing to sponsor the 1928 basketball tournament of the Georgia Interscholastic Athletic association, and has submitted a proposal to the officials of that organization to again hold the tournament here.

There is considerable expense attached to the tournament, but as Macon is one of the best basketball towns in the state the Jaycees have experienced no difficulty in financing the contests in other years.

J. P. C. Plays Piedmont Five Wednesday

Progressives Face Tough Aggregation in Outfit From Demorest.

Pursuant to its policy of getting the jump on the rest of the major outfits around the community, the Jewish Progressive club basketball team will whet its appetites with another practice game on Wednesday of this week.

To be very exact this game should not be referred to as a practice game for the J. P. C. outfit will meet the Piedmont college five and this outfit is one of the finest teams of that class in the state.

This Piedmont college outfit first came to serious notice when it was the only team to defeat the great Y. M. C. A. team of 1925. It has a remarkable record on its home court at Demorest but on the J. P. C. court will be at a slight disadvantage.

This will be the second game for the Hebrew outfit, its first being a victory last week over the Clemson college quintet. In that game it showed great possibilities though th gam needed a few finishing touches.

These early games will place the J. P. C. five in an enviable position when it gets ready to meet the A. A. C. outfit and other strong teams in January. These latter fives will be in the formative stage while the Progressives will have several games behind them and will be seasoned when the others start.

Record Holders In Florida Races

Miami, Fla., December 17.—(AP)—Boats from Jacksonville, Winter Haven and a number of other upstate cities will be entered with local craft in the outboard motor boat races to be held over the Mirimar course January 7 and 8, it was announced today by Dick Pope, president of the Florida Outboard Motor association.

Holders of most of the Florida records will compete, he said.

The three-mile course is triangular, each straightaway a full mile of clear, smooth water.

Loren Muchison Shows Improvement

Decatur, Ill., December 17.—(AP)—Loren Murchison continued to show some improvement today, according to a statement issued by the attending physician at noon from the famous sprinter's hospital room. A slight complication Friday night caused some worry, but it had cleared up today. Murchison has been ill for 10 days with cerebro-spinal menengitis.

Conqueror of Nurmi Here

Dr. Otto Peltzer, German middle distance runner who conquered Paavo Nurmi, has arrived in America to study athletic conditions here and possibly to compete in a limited number of meets in spite of the fact that the German athletic officials have prohibited him from any athletic competition here.

Shanks Signed As Indian Coach

Cleveland, Ohio, December 17.—(AP)—Howard Shanks, for 14 years an American league player, has been signed as coach of the Cleveland Indians baseball team, it was announced here tonight.

Shanks during his 11 years with Washington played in every position except in the box and behind the bat. He was then traded to the Boston Red Sox and later to the Yankees before drifting into the minor leagues. During the past season he was with Louisville and Rochester on a non-reserve contract.

Drake Signs Johnson.

Drake university has signed Franklin (Pitch) Johnson, assistant coach at the University of Illinois, to take charge of its track team next spring.

Ohio Judge Makes Fight Films Legal

Judge Enjoins Federal Authorities From Stopping Showing of Films.

Columbus, Ohio, December 17.—(AP)—Pictures of the Dempsey-Tunney fight, manufactured in Ohio from negatives which may have been brought into the state in violation of federal laws, are not subject to seizure by federal authorities, consequently may be exhibited in the state so far as the federal government is concerned, Federal District Judge Benson W. Hough ruled today. The decision was rendered in a suit brought by the Mid-Western Film Exchange, of Akron, and E. F. O'Donnell, of New York, to enjoin District Attorney Haveth Man and United States Marshal Stanley Borthwick from seizing films which had been made by a Columbus firm from prints that had been brought to Cleveland. Judge Hough dismissed the application for an injunction, holding the federal authorities had right only to seize pictures brought into the state illegally, and there was no evidence to show the films in question were illegally in the state, although they had been made from a negative that had been brought into the state illegally.

According to Stewart R. Bolin, attorney for the film exchange and O'Donnell, the pictures sought to be shown may be exhibited without fear of federal molestation, providing the state censor board now will censor the pictures and approve their showing.

2 Rookies Added To Sox' Roster

Chicago, December 17.—(AP)—Two players were added to the Chicago White Sox roster today and three were released. The new men are First Baseman Henry Schrump, of the Western State Teachers college, in Kalamazoo, Mich., and Shortstop Frank Cook, a semi-pro of Camden, N. J. Those released were Outfielder Art Veltman, Pitcher Frank Stewart and Infielder Bobby Way to the Springfield, Three-Eye League club. Stewart and Way were sent out on option while Veltman was released outright.

Moguls 'Snoot' Yanks, Giants at Conference

None of Outfits Anxious To Make Deals With New York Clubs—Great Year Seen for Cuyler.

BY ALAN J. GOULD,
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

New York, December 17.—(AP)—The Yankees and Giants may have one or two baseball deals in the fire but the evidence of the mid-winter baseball pow-wow just closed emphasizes the fact none of the other 14 major league outfits are anxious to do anything that might strengthen either of the powerful New York clubs.

It is significant that the Yankees and Giants are the only clubs that have failed so far to figure in the off-season trading.

The three-day parleys here developed some of the briskest activity by the baseball David Harums in years, but most of them showed a distinct tendency to avoid anything like negotiations with either John McGraw or Miller Huggins. The merest mention of giving the Yankees anything like a "break" provoked a shudder among at least a half dozen managers.

There is considerable foundation for this apprehension. In the last seven years the Yankees have collected five and the Giants four pennants out of the total of 14 distributed. The Senators, Cardinals and Pirates have been the only clubs to break up the metropolitan march.

McCarthy Likes Cuyler.

If Kiki Cuyler doesn't "burn up" the National league in his new Chicago uniform next season, Joe McCarthy, boss of the Cubs, will be sorely disappointed.

Cuyler, Joe holds, gives the Cubs the greatest outfield in the game with Hack Wilsoz and Riggs Stephenson to support the fleet ex-Pirate storm center. And Joe doesn't except the Ruth-Musel-Combs combination of the Yankees, Speaker-Goslin-Rice trio of the Senators, or the new Detroit combination of Heilman-Fothergill-Rice.

"Look 'em over," McCarthy invited while here. "Stephenson led the league last season in doubles and was inside the 'first five' leading hitters with a mark of .344. Wilson led in home runs and was right behind Paul Waner in runs batted in.

Cuyler Great Base Stealer.

"Cuyler was in the lead in stolen bases until he was injured and then kept out of the game. He will lead the league next year in that department and in most everything else. He's one of the greatest natural players in the game."

Cuyler, it may be vouchsafed, won't bat second in the Cub lineup. It was Kiki's superstition against that spot in the batting order that figured in his being benched by the Pirates. McCarthy intends to put Cuyler third, the outfielder's favorite position.

Jimmy Hamilton, now manager of Nashville in the Southern association, had Cuyler on his club in 1922 when he won the South Atlantic association pennant for Charleston, S. C. When he moved to Nashville he took Cuyler with him.

"This superstition of not being able to hit second is not new with Cuyler," said Hamilton, when he was in New York during the baseball meeting.

"He told me at Charleston that he could not hit in second place and I said, 'Well, if you can't hit second you can hit third.' So he did."

OGLETHORPE CAGE WORK POSTPONED

BY FRED M'EACHIN.

With the first term examinations under way and the commencement of the Christmas holidays next Thursday, the Oglethorpe university basketball squad will discontinue regular daily cage practices until January 2.

Thus far in their training program the Petrel basketeers have shown promising results in their practices under the direction of Harry Robertson and have ideal prospects for developing into a strong contender for the S. I. A. A. championship this season.

The initial game of the year for the Petrels will be with the strong A. A. C. quint on January 5. This game should prove to be an ideal test of the collegians' strength and if they are successful in repelling the attack of the Athletic club's flashy team they will have started the new year off right.

The remainder of the Oglethorpe cage schedule has not been completed by the athletic officials at the university but it is expected that a complete card will be released immediately following the holidays.

With practically all of last season's stars returning Robertson should be able to turn out a formidable five. The regulars who are sure to see action this year are Captain Clement, at guard; Cy Bell, star guard; Jack Massey and Sheridan, forwards, and Bass, center. In the reserves the Petrels have much substitute power to rely upon in the personages of Brookshire, a flashy forward who is likely to play much of the time, and Feinberg, a stocky guard. These two last named players come up from the freshman team of last season and will materially strengthen the varsity's reserve force.

Devormer Released.

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Al Devormer, veteran catcher of the New York Giants, has been released to the Toledo club, of the American association, Manager John McGraw announced today. Devormer played with the Yankees and Red Sox before the Giants acquired him late in 1926 from the Louisville team of the American association.

Secretary Davis May Intervene in Army-Navy Grid Row

1928 Game Is Seen As Impossible

Naval Academy Heads Taking No Steps Towards Securing Next Year's Tilt.

Annapolis, Md., December 17.—(AP) Traditional athletic relationship between West Point and the naval academy went by the board, at least temporarily, today with the announcement by Rear Admiral Louis M. Nulton, superintendent of the academy, that "the naval academy contemplates taking no further step towards an Army-Navy game for 1928."

Admiral Nulton's statement followed the decision of West Point authorities, speaking through Major General E. B. Williams, superintendent of the military academy, who asserted that the navy request for a three-year eligibility rule governing membership on athletic teams would not be complied with at the cadet school.

This was navy's year to write the contract for the annual gridiron classic between the two schools, and navy authorities had included a clause in the contract calling for the adoption of the three-year eligibility rule by the army. This rule, which became effective with the midshipmen last June, states that students who have participated in three years of varsity sport, either at the academy or at another collegiate institution, cannot continue to represent the middies in that sport.

Point Refuses to Change Rule.

Navy wanted West Point to adopt the same procedure, but Major General Winans, in a statement yesterday, said there would be no change in existing athletic rules at the military academy and forthwith mailed back the contract to the navy calling for a 1928 game.

Considerable doubt was expressed whether the army would change its opinion in the matter, while naval officials, by the statement today, refused to alter their first position regarding the eligibility rule. Whether official Washington will be forced to take action to bring about an agreement depends largely on whether Nulton and General Winans get together in an attempt to iron out the difficulty.

Secretary May Intervene.

At present the controversy is deadlocked and Secretary of War Davis expressed the opinion today that he had hoped the superintendents of the two schools would ultimately get their heads together to clear away the smoke of battle which has clouded the military and naval institutions.

In his statement today, Admiral Nulton expressed the opinion that the "mission of athletics at the naval academy in relation to the student body and the general service is identically the same as that of West Point, but the naval academy does not consider it essential in fulfilling this mission to play players six and seven years in the same sport, nor does it consider such a procedure in the best interest of the amateurs of sport."

EXECUTIVES PLAN FOR NEXT YEAR

MANY SPORTS EVENTS HELD IN FLORIDA

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRES.

Florida, "the land of sports," is now coming into its own for another winter athletic glory.

The "bugs" of golf, tennis, boxing, basketball, swimming, yachting, horseshoe pitching and perhaps even horse racing are "in" for a lively season there while a socre of lesser sports will claim their place before summer.

Here are a few of the more important events for Florida during the winter and spring:

International four-ball golf match at Miami.

West Florida open golf tournament.

Florida amateur golf tourney.

Palm Beach and Miami special tennis matches.

Gene Tunney's winter stay at Miami Beach.

International speed contests in attempt to break Major H. O. D. Segrave's automobile record at Daytona Beach.

National horseshoe tournament at St. Petersburg.

Miami tank swimming test for national women stars.

Palm Beach regatta.

Miami Beach regatta.

Miami Beach golf tourney.

Major league baseball training campaign.

Each of these events has become a fixture in the nation's sport calendar, all drawing the leading stars of their class.

The international four-ball match and the other links events annually attract the leading professionals of the golf world.

Tennis at Palm Beach and Miami will bring Tilden, Alonso and other international racquet figures south.

Maryland Makes Cage Schedule

College Park, Md., December 17.—(AP)—Eight games with Southern conference teams and a contest each with Pennsylvania and Navy are the feature events on the University of Maryland's basketball schedule of 17 games.

Eleven of the games will be played here.

The schedule:

December 19, Washington and Lee at College Park; January 13, Washington and Lee at Lexington; 14, V. M. I. at Lexington; 18, Gallaudet at College Park; 19, Kentucky at College Park; 20, Hopkins at Baltimore; 25, St. Johns at Annapolis; 27, Virginia; 30, Stevens, all at College Park.

February 4, Navy at Annapolis; North Carolina State at College Park; 13, Virginia at Charlottesville; 27, Washington College; 21, Hopkins; 23, Virginia Poly; 24, Western Maryland, all at College Park.

Marathon Entry

Fred Kamler, a life guard of Miami Beach, Fla., who sold his automobile to buy shoes, is in training for C. C. Pyle's Los Angeles to New York marathon run. He runs 35 miles each day. Shoes wear 300 miles. Kamler says he will run 60 miles a day in the marathon.

SCHNEIDER CUP RACES ABANDONED

London, December 17.—(United News.)—Possibility that there would be no Schneider cup seaplane race in 1928 was seen here in the announcement by the air ministry that the Italian and British governments had agreed not to participate in the classic if other competitors also would drop out.

The ministry said the two countries had agreed to support a project to amend the rules so that the Schneider cup would be held biennially hereafter, indicating that the next race would be held in 1929.

The United States, French and German authorities informally were consulted on the plan and are understood to have concurred in both proposals.

Agreement for non-participation in 1928 was based on the lack of time necessary for formal alteration of the rules, said General Balbo, Italian air under secretary, who took advantage of a London visit to discuss the Schneider cup questions with Sir Samuel Hoare, air minister.

"There is general agreement that an interval of one year is sufficient to allow for adequate progress between successive contests in technical design of marine aircraft, whose development was the express object of the Schneider trophy founder," General Balbo said.

Washington High Team Banqueted

Washington, Ga., December 17.—Coach Wilson and his Washington High School football team were the guests of honor at a unique banquet served Friday evening at the American Legion hall, at wnich the members of the city board of education were the hosts.

For a team which has met and conquered at home and abroad all contenders for the championship crown, it is quite the usual thing for the gridiron "heroes" to be feted by the some-town folk. But the Washington Hi eleven for 1927 can lay claim to no such distinction. In the season's schedule of games with neighboring towns of northeast Georgia they piled up no imposing scores. In only two games were they the victors and these were won by the narrowest sort of margin.

But for clean sportsmanship, fair play and playing the game with every ounce of energy till the last whistle was blown, even though the odds were overwhelmingly against them at the start, the representatives from Washington Hi for 1927 stand in a class by themselves. Appreciation of this fact led the members of the board of education to single them out for special recognition in this way.

At Friday's banquet S. H. Bennett, principal of the Washington High school, acted as toastmaster and splendid talks were made by C. B. Vaughn, editor of the Washington News-Reporter; F. H. Ficklen, leading banker; Dr. A. W. Simpson and Captain Marshall Guill.

Head Deplores Minors' Action

Sacramento, Cal., December 17.—(AP)—Action taken at the convention of minor leagues in Dallas, Texas, when the three class AA organizations—Pacific Coast, American association and International league—were ordered to discontinue the modified draft, saying that instead of it being Harry A. Williams, of the coast circuit.

Under the system either major league could send a player to the AA league, retaining the right to purchase him back at a specified price.

In a statement President Williams sketched the history of the modified draft, saying that instead of it being an intrument created and sought by the AA leagues, it was accepted by them as a matter of expediency.

Several years ago, Williams said, the three AA leagues rejected the draft, but later approved a ruling by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis pertaining to the repurchase rights at a stipulated figure of players sent from the majors to the double A leagues.

Williams said that both the class AA and major leagues had operated under the so-called modified draft to mutual advantage and with no objection, until this fall, from the smaller minors, who had accepted the complete draft.

Salary Plan For Boxers Looks Okay

Might Help in Bringing About Better Boxing, Entertainment, Says Edgren.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Boxing is to be handled like a chain of five and ten-cent stores if the "Six Hundred Hungry Millionaires" of Madison Square Garden and other up-to-date promoters can organize it the way they want to. The garden directors are mostly Wall street men and want to corner the entire boxing racket. They have been making only $1,000,000 a year out of the garden and they'd prefer to make three. The boxers are getting too much of the kale. The owner-promoters would like to put all boxers under salary and arrange a positive date schedule for their appearance in the ring; a schedule that couldn't be interfered with by small details like a sore thumb or a cold in the head. What night-watchman ever refused to go on duty because he had a sore thumb? The gents who are uplifting boxing for what there may be in it intend to put boxers in the night-watchman class, on a flat salary basis, if it can be done.

This is part of the ruction between Tex Rickard and the Six Hundred Hungry Millionaires. It appears that Tex showed a profit of only about $400,000 on the Chicago fight between Tunney and Dempsey, which was really financed and handled by the garden corporation, and the Six Hundred Hungry Millionaires were not at all satisfied when they compared that insignificant sum with what was paid the fighters. Why should 600 bankers, stock brokers, boss politicians and curb experts split up half as much as Rickard paid to "two bums"—especially two bums who have a habit of hanging onto their money and won't buy mining or oil stock with it? The whole situation is galling in the extreme to the financiers and they're growing fussy over it.

Rickard is too wise an owl to be hooted off his perch even by the Six Hundred Hungry Millionaires. He knows boxers and his public. He knows that the public will fall for the rottenest boxing match in the world, if there's enough talk about the big money paid the boxers and the big prices charged for ringside seats. The public figures that if two "bums" are to get $1,000,000 for fighting, the fight will be something marvelous. How could it be anything else, when it costs so much? Usually it is marvelous—marvelously rotten.

Money Makes Them Afraid.

The plain fact about these big-money matches is that big money, and the risk of being knocked out of the big-money class, brings out all the yellow in any boxer's composition. There's some yellow in everyone. Few fighters would have any fear at all of being punched on the jaw; or being knocked out, if it was in private and didn't affect their earning power in the ring. The punch on the jaw is nothing. But being knocked loose from a reputation that enables one to demand big money, and get it, is another thing entirely. It's boxing bankruptcy.

Gene Tunney isn't yellow. He's as game as anyone needs to be, even in the marines. But that September evening in Chicago whn Gene lay on his back at the edge of the ring, within a yard of me, I watched his eyes to see if there was any chance for him to get up, and I saw something that isn't seen from the bleacher seats.

Completely Dazed.

First Tunney was completely dazed, staring up at the overhead lights. There was no expression in his eyes. Then he raised his head a little and looked around toward his corner. He still seemed dazed and unintelligent. When nine or ten seconds had passed, and the referee had reached the count of four or five, Tunney's expression suddenly changed. He shifted his eyes to the referee, saw his arm rise and fall with the count, began to realize that he was down and time was flying—began to realize that he was being counted out of future million-dollar purses. His eyes bulged with an expression of terror. But he didn't move. He was still chained by the paralysis of the punch on the jaw that dropped him. The referee counted "nine" and stopped. Gene heaved himself up from the floor and began that famous flight that he prefers to refer to as a "strategic retreat." Through the rest of that round Tunney's face wore the expression of pop-eyed fear. He was like a house dog cornered by a wolf, leaping back but unable to get clear, and so snapping and running in the defence of desperation. Perhaps it was the reaction from this terror that made Tunney come back and fight furiously in the last round, when he felt he was safe from a knockout and must make a sensational finish to hold the money-making championship.

Tunney has plenty of courage. But he isn't known as an aggressive fighter. He has too keen an appreciation of what would happen if he was knocked out. It would ruin business for Tunney. Few men can face business ruin without fear. How many business men are there in the United States who wouldn't be startled—and scared—if they were confronted with a situation in which, within the next five minutes, they might be suddenly deprived of the ability to go on with their business—if their earning power was to come to an end right there?

To Have and to Hold.

That's the trouble with modern boxing. The star boxers show a yellow streak, either in demanding set-ups in the match-making, or a right to name a friendly referee, or a no-decision bout, or in going through their fights with no other ambition than to hold what they already have. For that reason most of the "big" fights are poor affairs. It is becoming a well known fact in many parts of the country that by far the best fights are to be seen in the smaller clubs, for moderate ticket prices, where the boxers are ambitious youngsters coming up, not veterans afraid of being pushed back.

Modern ring business methods may lead to that salary thing, in time. It might produce more entertainment. The 600 hungry millionaires could say to their boxer: "You're getting $100 a week now; show that you're on the job tonight and we'll raise you to $125." That would start something.

Match-Making Former Sport.

Modern match-making methods are purely business. There used to be some sport in matching fighters. For instance, there was Charlie Mitchell, freshly brought to this country by Billy Madden, who wanted Mitchell to beat John L. Sullivan for him. Sullivan looked at Mitchell and laughed at him, because he was a little man beside John L.

"Fight my friend, Mike Cleary," said Sullivan. "If Mike doesn't kill you I may give you a chance."

Mitchell fought Mike Cleary. He fairly murdered Mike. John L., in shirt sleeves and a silk hat, was in Cleary's corner. As he plastered the big Cleary around the ring Mitchell kept up a running fire of comment to Sullivan. "Come in here when I've licked your friend and I'll lick you too, you big bum," said Mitchell, who had a rough tongue. Mitchell knocked out Cleary in two rounds! By the time the fight was finished John L. was fairly frothing with rage over Mitchell's badinage. That was April 9, 1883. No time was lost in argument. Sullivan and Mitchell were matched immediately and they fought May 14. It didn't take six months to properly "ballyhoo" a fight in those days.

When Billy Brady wanted to match the youthful Jim Jeffies against Bob Fitzsimmons he wired Jeffries to come on from California, and sent a friend to talk to Fitz.

"Why Not Fight?"

"I hear you owe a lot of bills for theatrical posters," the friend remarked to Fitz. "Why don't you fight somebody? That's the quickest way to get money. I hear Billy Brady has brought that big bum Jeffries east. Why don't you take him before someone else gets him?"

"Send Brady over to see me?" said Fitz.

Brady went to see Fitzsimmons in Bob's Bensonhurst home. In half an hour they arranged a match, drew up articles and signed them. So informally was one of the most sensational and desperate of all world's championship fights arranged.

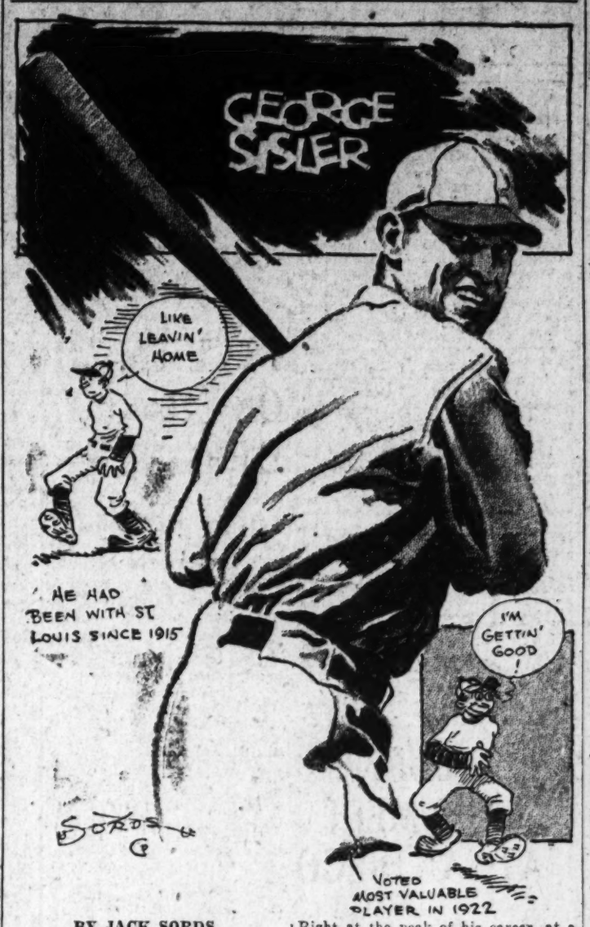

How It's Done.

Quite different from the way they do it now. First the promoter figures what a match might draw with six months of constant advertising. Then he approaches a champion and a challenger who will draw well. He spends a few months dickering with the coy champion and finally signs him. He "builds up" the challenger with an easy bout or two. Then he spends weeks dickering with the challenger, who realizes that he has been "built up" and is now a necessary part of the money-making scheme, and wants as big a share as he can force the promoter to give him. At last both are signed. A few months more fencing with boxing commissions, to find one that will be "friendly," then a month or two of building extra grandstands, handling a vast ticket sale so that favored parties with political or business pull will get the best seats. After that more ballyhoo to keep up the interest and sell out the bleachers. And then the fight, built up to a million, and worth, in real money, a tenth of that sum.

It's a grand game. Especially for the 600 hungry millionaires. Even when they get only $400,000 for letting Tex Rickard do the work.

SENATORS GET BARGAIN

BY JACK SORDS.

Only $15,000 for a player who had been a first-base sensation for years; who hit .327 last year and led his league in base stealing and only a few years ago topped the league in batting. That is the reported price paid by Washington for George Sisler, and it sounds like a mighty small figure to pay for a player who shows up so well in the records. But Sisler's usefulness as a player may end at any time. It is feared that his eyes, which kept him idle in 1923, are likely to handicap him again in the near future.

Fate indeed was unkind to Sisler. Right at the peak of his career, at a time when he was hailed as a first-base sensation, finishing a season with a batting average of .420 and voted the most valuable player to his team, he was rendered useless for a whole year with eye trouble. He came back in 1924 and has played good ball since. But there is always that uncertainty surrounding him.

Sisler came to St. Louis as a left-handed pitcher back in 1915, and for two years played, also, in the outfield and at first base. He has always been a heavy hitter and at first base ranked with Hal Chase as a finished workman.

Star End Sets Endurance Mark

Fort Worth, Texas, December 17.—(AP)—After playing every second of nine full games this season, Raymond ("Rags") Matthews, Texas Christian university end, is believed to be the holder of a new national endurance record. The challenge of his coach, Madison Bell, to the football world to produce a player who also put in 540 minutes of steady fighting on the gridiron remains unchallenged.

Matthews did not spare himself, and he went through the final game with a pair of cracked ribs. He was one of the most patched men in the Southwestern conference. Opposing teams assigned two and sometimes three men to stop him. His fire and speed won him a berth on the all-American second team as named by The Associated Press.

"Rags" is of rangy build more than six feet tall and 173 pounds in weight. It is said he has been asked to attend West Point next year.

The Texas "iron man" still has another game to play this year, as he is listed as a probable member of the western team for the international all-star game at San Francisco, December 26.

Power League

Gas and Electric and Operatives teams still maintain their 1.000 per cent in the standing column of Georgia Power league. These two teams have far outclassed the teams they have played so far on the schedule, and from present indications will continue their streak of winning until they meet each other January 3. Between them they have beaten every team in th league except in the "B" division team, and they have not won either of their two starts, although they are rather strong when they have all of their men present.

Gas and Electric	2	0	1.000
Operatives	2	0	1.000
"C" Division	1	1	.500
"D" Division	1	1	.500
"B" Division	0	2	.000
"A" Division	0	2	.000

Power league, Tuesday, December 20, at Power club gymnasium.

"A" division vs. "D" division.

"B" division vs. Gas and Electric.

"C" division vs. Operatives.

Tod Morgan Retains Title On Low Blow

Referee Stops Bout in 14th Round After Chick Fouls Champ.

BY FRANK GETTY,
United News Sports Editor.

Madison Square Garden, New York, December 17.—After as flagrant an exhibition of foul fighting as has been permitted in a New York ring in many a month, Joe Glick, of Brooklyn, was quite properly disqualified and Tod Morgan, of Seattle, retained the junior lightweight championship of the world.

It was not until the fourteenth round of the championship bout that Eddie Forbes, the referee, found occasion to throw Glick out of the ring, although at least half a dozen times previously he had struck the Pacific coast boy low.

Morgan was outclassed by the rugged Brooklyn Hebrew, and if Glick had only fought fairly, he would have won the 130-pound championship without dissenting voice.

Glick dropped Morgan once in the second round and twice in the fifth, and on each occasion the game little champion, while giving every evidence of having been severely fouled by low body blows, got up and fought back.

Outside of the low blows, hitting on the break and butting with his head, Glick was clearly the better man of the two.

Morgan is about through as a champion, and Glick may succeed him, for Joe certainly is a better fighter than Tod. But it will never be by the route which he tried to take tonight.

Glick jumped into the lead in the first three rounds and was ahead by a wide margin, despite his foul tactics, at the end of the tenth.

In the fourteenth, he was outfighting Morgan when he suddenly drove a low left hook to Tod's groin. The champion went down in distress, but the referee made no attempt to continue the count.

Glick had struck a low blow too many.

Without hesitation, Eddie Forbes waved Glick to his corner. The championship remained with Morgan.

"I'm sorry it had to end this way," Tod said after the bout. "But I don't know what the referee could have called those first blows which dropped me in the early rounds. These were just as foul as the one which finally ended things.

Glick protested that he had not struck low.

"I'll never pull on a glove again if that blow was low," he said.

Harvard Holds Edge Over Yale

Cambridge, Mass., December 17.—(AP)—John A. Blanchard, Harvard '91, has come forward with an article in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin seeking to refute "a feeling which seems to have arisen that Harvard has for a long time more or less filled the role of an athletic doormat for Yale teams in all forms of sport."

Taking as a basis for his review Harvard-Yale athletic relations from 1908 to 1927, Blanchard discovered that of Harvard-Yale championships in the five major sports during this period, Harvard has won 47 and Yale 43.

Harvard has a slight lead in minor sports.

In contests since 1875, when athletic relations began, Yale leads in every major sport except hockey.

Cup Dates Conflict With Olympics

France Says Date Will Not Be Changed

Challenge Round Scheduled To Be Played at Paris During July.

BY FRANK GETTY.
United News Sports Editor.

New York, December 17.—The dates set by the French tennis federation for the challenge round of Davis cup play conflict with the opening of the Olympic track and field games at Amsterdam.

A year ago, The Netherlands Olympic committee decided to have the opening ceremonies July 28, the track and field events, which are the outstanding feature of an olympiad, to follow during the next 10 days.

The French tennis federation decided upon July 27, 28 and 29 for the Davis cup challenge round, in which, it is quite properly anticipated, the United States will meet France.

This conflict of dates means that hundreds of American sportsmen and sportswomen must miss one or another of the two principal sporting events of 1928.

It means that foreign attendance at the ninth olympiad at Amsterdam will be decreased materially.

Overlapping.

It means that readers of the sports pages of American newspapers will find the two big sport thrills of the summer from abroad sandwiched and overlapping.

Since the Olympic dates had been fixed long before the French won the Davis cup, much less arranged for its defense in 1928, the United News inquired of the French tennis federation the reason for its choice which brought about the conflict.

M. Canet, president of the federation, replied:

"The Davis cup challenge round is just as important an event as the Olympic track and field games, which draw an entirely different sort of crowd from that which attends tennis matches.

Dates Unchangeable.

"We cannot change our dates, even though they conflict with the Amsterdam fixture has been brought to our attention. There are too many reasons which oblige us to hold the challenge round in July.

"The principal one is that we have decided to hold the final matches at Paris rather than at Deauville or some other seaside resort.

"Therefore, we must, of course, have the challenge round at a time when Parisians are not taking their annual vacations away from the city."

Paris usually is spoken of as "empty" during September, the customary vacation month—as well as the customary Davis cup challenge round month.

Attendance First.

In choosing July, M. Canet explained, the matter of attendance was given first consideration, since it would be most inconvenient for Parisians to break into their vacations to attend the matches.

The order of European tennis fixtures for next summer, therefore, will be the French national championships, the Olympic tennis at Amsterdam early in June, the all-comers' championships at Wimbledon, the interzone Davis cup finals and the challenge round.

Scott League

Four games are on the program of the Trammell Scott league for the coming week, and with a decent break from the weatherman capacity crowds should be present to see them. Two league leaders meet two other league leaders, and two tail enders meet two other teams of the same class. There is bound to be a shakeup in the standing of the league after this week's series of games.

Atlanta & Lowry has looked the best for two weeks now, and on Wednesday will meet a team that will really test their strength, in the Southern railway five. Southern railway is coached by Scrappy Sullivan and has been showing steady improvement since it first took the floor.

Martin Nash will meet the Governor's Horse Guards in the other headliner. The Nash team has the full support of the Martin Nash organization and they always turn out in good numbers to root for their team. The Guards will have hard going to beat them.

The other two games will find the New York Life lined up against the Pullman company, and Jessup & Antrim and Cluett Peabody playing each other. Two of these teams will have to get off of the bottom unless the games result in ties that are not played off.

THE STANDING:

Atlanta & Lowry Bank	2	0	1.000
Southern Railway	2	0	1.000
Martin Nash	2	0	1.000
Governor's Horse Guards	2	0	1.000
Jessup & Antrim	0	2	.000

BILLY BURKE LEADS MEET AT SAN DIEGO

San Diego, Calif., December 17.—(AP)—Uncorking a brilliant 69, Billy Burke, Florida professional, took the lead over an array of golfing stars in the preliminary 18-hole round of the $2,500 San Diego open tournament here today.

Burke's fine display of shot-making netted him a two-stroke advantage over his closest competitor, Bobby Cruickshank, the "wee Scot" who had a 71.

California players crowded some nationally known players in the preliminary play. Among the first 32 finishers were Al Espinosa, Chicago, 72; Dewey Weber, 72; E. G. Martin, San Diego, 72; Larry Nabholtz, Cleveland, 73; Jack Kearns, 73; Larry Staley, Coronada, Calif. 74; Arthur Clarkson, 74; Dick Linares, Los Angeles, 75; Lewis Scott, Los Angeles, 75.

Cruickshank early in January of 1927 lifted the $10,000 Los Angeles open.

Miller Huggins Confident

Miller Huggins, boss of the New York Yankees, is confident that his team again will win the American league pennant and world's series next year. Huggins also expressed the opinion that it would be at least three years before any other team in the circuit would relegate the Yanks to the runner-up berth.

DOPE STAGES COMEBACK AND RUNS TRUE TO FORM IN GOOD YEAR 1927

BY WHITNER CARY.

When Father Time tucked his long silver locks under his hat and made the fatal gesture that buried the year 1926, there was much howling, wailing and gnashing of teeth among the so-called form chart boys, that particular species who follow the dope sheets of sport. On close inspection it was found that the boys who worship at the altar of form had a good kick coming for that particular 12 months had given them many a jolt, had wilted many a bankroll and had dethroned many a champion. So great was the carnage dealt that Fate, Destiny or whatever factor handles the steering wheel of the athletic world, became rather conscience-stricken and decided to make amends in the following year.

All who survived that 1926 year, which might be termed the year of the great upsets, can vividly recall some of the leading heartaches during that mad span of form reversals or whatever you might call them.

From a hazy memory one can recall with many a pang that it was that year that saw Jack Dempsey, a 3-to-1 favorite over Gene Tunney in the betting, emerge from that misty night at the Sesquicentennial minus his heavyweight crown, minus much glory and minus considerable pugilistic standing.

Tilden Drops.

It was that year that saw the Tilden tennis star start from its exalted place in the sport firmament toward the horizon where dwell only the buried memories of a great past. That was the year when Rene LaCoste, slightly assisted by Tilden's trick knee, that went on a temperamental jag during the heated moments of a Davis cup singles encounter, took the measure of the tall Philadelphian. One week later, on the turf of the West Side Tennis club, the handwriting that appeared at Germantown gave its final edict against the mighty Philadelphian and his tennis crown was gently but firmly removed in a match against that other great Frenchman—Henri Cochet. Cochet later lost, as it will be recalled that LaCoste won the title.

During that same week and not many miles from the scene of the decapitating of Large William, heartbreaking drama was unfolding in another theater of sport. For, on the plains of Balsurol, George Von Elm, in a match that will go down in history as a golfing classic, was toppling from the amateur throne, the one and only Bobby Jones. Tilden and Jones, each a leader in his line, on Monday relegated to the ranks of the also rans when the shadows of Saturday clothed the land. It will be many a week before two such blows hit the sport world.

Lesser Upsets.

There were many more lesser upsets during that memorable year, 1926, but the defeat of Dempsey, Tilden and Jones are enough to make it an outstanding 12 months.

With such havoc wrought, the talent was ready to either commit suicide or take the pledge. But along came 1927 and the salve and balm was applied in copious quantities.

This year saw things travel along in the even tenor of their ways with little to cause undue palpatation of the heart or deflating of the pocketbook.

In April Bobby Jones started off his most brilliant golf year by showing the cream of the professional talent just how easy he can make the East Lake course look. A margin of eight strokes between this young wizard and his nearest competitor in the event emphasized this fact and also gave him the southern open championship.

A few months later he wandered over to England and ran true to form to cop the British open. He topped off the season by giving the form players a treat at Minikhada by trimming the best field ever assembled in the amateur.

Walter Hagen, the same old reliable, who yearly makes the other pros pay tribute to his prowess in the P. G. A. tournament, found the Dallas course to his liking and again it was the name Hagen which was flashed as the winner. The only major upset in the golf dope during the year was the showing Bobby Jones made in the American open when he finished further down the list than at any time during the past five years. In three major golfing fixtures the form ran true which, when one considers what a tricky and unreasonable game golf is, will be hailed as quite a feat.

Tunney Retains Crown.

The year 1927 saw no toppling of the heavyweight boxing champion. Gene Tunney defended his crown without being forced to follow in the footsteps of Dempsey at the Sesqui. Of course there will always be much talk of the long count. But they don't pay off on talk and so Gene still stands in the vanguard of the heavies as 1927 bids us farewell.

In baseball, another sport where luck and the breaks can play havoc, the dope ran surprisingly true to form. The Yankees, hailed as one of the greatest teams of all time, met the Pittsburgh Pirates in the world series. The Yanks were tremendous favorites. Here was a great setting for the old dope to get a body blow. But again the form ran true and not only a Yankee victory was recorded, but a Yankee victory achieved by taking four straight games. Verily the form boys were having a great inning.

Lacoste, doped by many to come through in the American tennis championship, did not disappoint and again the Tilden colors were lowered. Old 1927 was furnished a chance to stage a tennis encore to 1926, but refused to heed the invitation.

And just to make it a complete form year and to show that nothing could upset the sport equilibrium, the old dope actually stood up in that most hazardous of all sports, racing. That is, stood up in the blue ribbon event of the turf world—the historic Kentucky Derby. The Whitney entry, of Bostonian and Whiskery, was the popular choice in the wagering among the vast throng that crowded every inch of space at Churchill Downs on that May afternoon. And it was Whiskery who flashed past the judges' stand first at the end of that mile and a quarter jaunt.

So taking all things into consideration the boys who wailed the loudest in 1926 should offer up the strongest chant of blessing when 1927 folds its tent in the misty vapors of the night of December 31 and steals away.

FIVE SMITHIES ON CHARLOTTE OPPONENT 11

Charlotte, N. C., December 17.—Five Tech High, Atlanta, players; two Central High, Washington; one Blue Ridge school, Hendersonville; one Shelby High, Shelby; one Columbia High, Columbia, S. C., and one Winston-Salem High, Winston-Salem player, opponents of Charlotte High school during the past season, in which the local school annexed the southern title, have been placed on the mythical all-opponent team for 1927.

Tech's great battlers, said to be the most talented ever to play in Charlotte, fully won their places on the eleven by great play on a great team. They are Vess, end; Williams, guard; Henderson, tackle; Mott, half, and Hadley, fullback.

Central's quarterback, Simmons, and tackle, Dinken, were the best that the gents faced this season, although "Heavy" Hammond, Tech signal master, ran Simmons a race for honors, as did Mullens, Tech tackle.

Beam, Shelby fullback, is placed at end since he performed equally well on the flank during the many times he was used as such.

Columbia's High Captain Gilmore was easily the best center that faced the locals.

Chester Martin, captain of the Blue Rangers, has been placed at a guard berth and hard was it to leave off Bob Coob, strong halfback. Anderson, Monroe High half, also was a great player, but "Kid" Brewer, of Winston-Salem, and Mott easily outdistanced these boys in the race for stardom.

The official all-opponent team of the 1927 southern interscholastic grid champions:

PLAYER.	Position.	SCHOOL.
Vess	End	Tech High
Henderson	Tackle	Tech High
Williams	Guard	Tech High
Gilmore	Center	Columbia High
Martin	Guard	Blue Ridge
Dinken	Tackle	Wash. Central
Beam	End	Shelby High
Simmons	Quarterback	Wash. Central
Brewer	Halfback	Winston-Salem
Mott	Halfback	Tech High
Hadley	Fullback	Tech High

Owners Ask Waivers.

At the annual minor baseball league convention held recently at Dallas, Texas, almost every American association owner asked and secured waivers on the majority of their players in order to be in a position to make any deals desired before the start of spring training.

City League

After two rounds of activities only two basketball teams in the City league remain undefeated. The Gulf and the Atlanta Athletic club "Reds" have won both of their games. The Southern Bell and Avondale teams each have one victory and one defeat, while the Knights of Columbus and the Atlanta Joint Terminal lost both starts.

Avondale showed a big improvement and has registered two good players who will participate in the next game with the Gulf. Horse Harris, formerly of Georgia, and Frank Armstead, formerly of Tech, will considerably strengthen Avondale. McDade, former captain of Southern Bell, has been registered and will soon be in action. The Knights of Columbus have missed the services of such old stars as Steve Harney and Tom Bryant.

The schedule for Thursday is as follows:

Avondale vs. Gulf Refining company at 7:30.
Southern Bell vs. A. A. C. Reds at 8:20.
Atlanta Joint Terminal vs. Knights of Columbus at 9:10.

THE STANDING:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
A. A. C. Reds	2	0	1.000

STAN HARRIS, PECK MATCH WITS IN 1928

BY ALAN J. GOULD.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Little more than three years ago three men put their heads and arms together to form a combination that was chiefly responsible for one of the most spectacular baseball triumphs of all time.

The three were Stanley (Bucky) Harris, Roger Peckinpaugh and Walter (Barney) Johnson. The boy manager, the veteran shortstop and the old pitching master were the heroes of Washington's first American league pennant victory in 1924 and the subsequent dime novel triumph over the New York Giants in the world's series.

The fortunes of baseball have scattered these three musketeers, each controlling the playing destinies of his own club for 1928.

It is an odd turn that now finds "Peck" selected to pilot the Cleveland Indians, where he will be matching wits a good share of the time with Harris. Johnson, out of the big show for the first time in over a score of years, will capitalize his long experience and popularity as manager of the Newark Internationals.

Great 1924 Victory.

The picture of these three, as they fought and won their greatest victory in 1924, lingers.

Harris, fiery and aggressive, was directing his first major league campaign, the youngest pilot in the majors, but a seasoned campaigner for all that, matching wits and at least holding his own with the "master mind," John McGraw.

Johnson, after one of his greatest campaigns, twice was beaten by the Giants, only to come back out of the shadows in the last game to stand off the New Yorkers. There was Peck, with an injured leg, playing most of the time on his nerve.

"Two of the greatest players that ever put on a spiked shoe"—that was what Harris thought of Peck and "Barney."

Pulled Together.

"They were not alone great because of their individual ability," Harris once said. "Johnson and Peck forgot about themselves in the fight to pull the team through. That was the secret of our success."

Harris and Peckinpaugh probably will be in the thick of baseball's powwows here this week, looking for material to strengthen their clubs.

Although rivals, they have one common aim at least, a desire to prevent the Yankees from making another runaway race of the American league pennant hunt.

It was Washington that overthrew the first Yankee reign. It was Cleveland that gave the New Yorkers a scare in 1926. Together they may muster sufficient strength in 1928 at least to harass the clan of Huggins and make it more of a battle than this year.

Oxford Students On Rowdy 'Rag'

London, December 17.—(AP)—One of the rowdiest "rags" the west end of London ever witnessed followed the annual football match between Oxford and Cambridge, which was played at Twickenham, near London. The undergraduates and their supporters invaded several theaters. They sprayed each other with fire apparatus, ruining many women's dresses. They compelled the stoppage of two performances and the dismissal of the audiences then surged into the streets and commandeered taxicabs and omnibuses, wrecked saloon bars, fought the police and created pandemonium generally.

Syracuse Drops Minor Sports

Syracuse, N. Y., December 17.—(AP)—The athletic governing board of Syracuse university has voted to drop boxing, golf, hockey, rifle, tennis, wrestling, soccer and fencing as intercollegiate sports. This sweeping change in the conduct of athletics was made in favor of a system of intermural athletics.

"Too small a proportion of the men students of the university enjoy the benefits of organized sports under skilled coaching," said a resolution adopted by the board.

Navy Basketeers Trounce W-M, 48-20

Annapolis, Md., December 17.—(AP) The Naval academy basketball team completely outclassed the William and Mary college cagers in a one-sided game here today, winning 48 to 20.

The navy used three teams throughout the game and though held to a 19-to-14 score at the end of the first period, had no difficulty in scoring in the second half.

Golfer Makes Strange Shot for Hole-in-One

Asheville, N. C., December 17.—(AP) William C. McConnell, Jr., of Asheville, joined the hole-in-one club here when his tee shot on the 17th hole at the Asheville Golf and Country club course, landed in the cup without a bounce. The hole is 124 yards in length. The ball didn't land on the green and roll into the cup but hit inside and stuck there.

FAMOUS FOOTPRINTS ON THE SPORT SANDS OF 1927

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

RECOGNIZE any of these famous "dogs?" They have carried their owners to fame in the sport world the past year—if not in preceding ones. Babe Ruth's do their stuff when he tells them to get a toe hold for one of his home runs. He set a new world's record last summer. Bobby Jones' perfect stance is based on his feet, of course. Rene La Coste wore Big Bill Tilden down with his endurance and skill behind the net. Gene Tunney's dogs ought to get some notice for keeping him away from Dempsey after that seventh round count and thereby keeping the heavyweight title for him. The dainty footsies of Mrs. Meriam Burns Horn helped carry her to the national women's golf championship. Edvin Wide, Swedish middle distance runner and Nurmi's conqueror, showed Rmerica a neat pair of heels in his tour. And the polo pony that Tommy Hitchcock, star of the American polo team, rode through part of the matches against the invading Britishers, played a part in America's victory with his twinkling hoofs, the front ones being shown above.

Local Five Scores Early To Win Game

Georgians Stage Comeback in Second Half, But Unable to Overcome Lead.

BY BOB SHERROD.

Athens, Ga., December 17.—(Special.)—In downing the Georgia Bulldogs, 30 to 16, Saturday night the Gulf Refining company quintet, of Atlanta, displayed a remarkable mid-season form. The defeat came as quite a surprise to most Georgia supporters who had not expected such a superior brand of basketball so early in the season.

The superior ability of the Gulf team was quite evident. The Atlanta team held a 20-to-2 edge at the half and continued to retain their lead throughout the game. They caught the Georgia team on the run at the very beginning of the game and did not let up perceptibly, although slightly outplayed during the last half.

The guarding of the oil men was an exhibition well worth watching. The Georgia forwards were not able to penetrate such a defense with any success whatever, most of their points coming from long shots.

Bynum Stars for Gulf.

The guarding of Bynum, aggressive Gulf defensive ace, was one of the best exhibitions seen in Woodruff hall in a long while.

Wilder, Nichols and Brock presented an offensive formation which broke through the guarding of the Georgians very often, especially during the first half. The Georgians seemed to have much difficulty in getting under way. After the first half they regained their shooting eyes and began in such an aggressive fashion that the Gulfers were outscored, although not by a great margin.

Eighteen points down in the first half proved too much, especially as the Atlantans showed no tendency to let up. The Bulldogs' form was quite a reversal of that shown in their first game last week when they defeated the Southern Bell forces by an overwhelming score.

Captain Florence came back in the second half to lead his team in a futile effort to overcome an overwhelming lead. Babe led the Georgians in scoring, getting two field goals and three foul shots. While the Gulf team did not make a substitution, the Georgians rushed new men into the fray regularly.

Lineup and Summary:

GULF (30)	Pos.	GA. (16)
Wilder (10)	r.f.	Keen (2)
Brock (5)	l.f.	Florence (7)

Operation Today For O'Farrell

St. Louis, December 17.—(AP)—Catcher Bob O'Farrell, of the St. Louis Cardinals, will undergo an operation here tomorrow for the removal of a piece of bone from the thumb on his right hand.

The thumb was broken in a game with Cincinnati last September and healed improperly. If not corrected physicians estimated it would hinder the Card backstop both in throwing and catching.

BOBBY'S GOLF TUTOR RETURNS TO SCOTLAND

BY HORACE RENEGAR,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Stewart Maiden, known as "Kiltie, the King Maker" of golf because of his development of Bobby Jones, Alexa Stirling Fraser and other links stars, has ended his 24-year reign as professional of the East Lake Cocuntry club here and is going back to Scotland in hopes of recovering his health.

He has turned over the task of developing other players to follow in the footsteps of Bobby, in the years to come, to Frank Ball, English professional, who in 1924 was runner-up to Walter Hagen in the British open.

Because of the modest and retiring way in which Maiden went about his work, only a few persons knew he had been seriously ill several months until announcement of his resignation came.

Succeeds Brother.

In 1907, hardly a year after he left his old home at Carnoustie, Scotland, Stewart succeeded his brother, James, at East Lake. He served here continuously until 1918, when he went to St. Louis, only to return in 1921.

Bobby and Alexa, his star pupils, between them have won ten national championships and numberless lesser crowns, and to the 45-year-old Scot they admittedly owe their orthodox style which carried them to the heights. "Kiltie," however, never would take the credit.

As a matter of fact, Bobby began cultivating his game when only a boy of 6 by watching Maiden play at East Lake. Today he is the master stylist. As an illustration of the similarity of their games Bobby's father recalls that once when his son, in his early 'teens, was winning state championships they were at Birmingham, Ala.

"Big Bob" was talking to a friend. "When did 'Kiltie' arrive?" the companion asked.

"Why, he isn't here," replied Jones. "Don't tell me, I just saw him drive off the tenth tee."

"Oh, no! That was my son Rob," Jones had to explain.

Maiden, perhaps, is the only golf professional who refuses to be photographed. He even sidesteps attempts to obtain his picture by having him pose with Bobby and during his long stay in Atlanta the number of photographs of Maiden could be counted on the fingers of one hand. When Bobby started on his British invasion this year, after having lost the United States open, Stewart was along to help him with errors in his game. A New York reporter discovered the professional far in the rear of the party and at that could get no comments from him.

Are Unseparable.

Then when the usual celebration was held here as Bobby returned victorious the regular banquet took place at the East Lake Country club. "Kiltie" found himself a place at the far end of the table. He and Bobby are inseparable until a crowd appears. Then even Bobby's efforts fail to keep the Scot from retiring.

Maiden never talks of the methods he employs in imparting golf knowledge but an example of his effectiveness in starting pupils with their game may be found in the story of a famous society woman who came here for instruction.

She met "Kiltie" at the club and the ball was teed up for the first drive. She listened for the mystic words that were to mean "open sesame" to her in the world of golf. Maiden, without hesitating, instructed:

"Get up there, Madame, and knock h— out of it!"

Changes Are Made In Rifle Meets

Northfield, Vt., December 17.—(AP) Too many perfect scores fired by collegiate sharpshooters have led to three changes in the rules governing college rifle matches, Captain Louis S. Lorenzo, of the championship Norwich university cadet team, was notified today by the National Rifle association at Washington.

The bulls eye has been reduced from .25 of an inch to .15 of an inch, the sitting position for firing, considered the easiest of all postures for high scoring, has been eliminated, and the use of telescopic sights will not be allowed in future competition. From now on college riflemen will fire over open iron sights at a bulls eye about half the size of the old one from prone, kneeling and standing positions only.

Hens Reduce Pay Roll.

The Toledo Mud Hens, American association champions, have reduced the size of their pay roll by releasing two high-priced veterans—Everett Scott, dependable shortstop, and Joe Bush, former speed ball pitcher.

Turf Body Fails To Fill Program

Chicago, December 17.—(AP)—Directors of the Illinois Turf association failed to complete their program for next summer's racing dates at the five Chicago tracks, and adjourned today until January 15, to resume their sessions. Under the tentative program, Aurora would be allotted the opening month of May, followed by a meeting at Hawthorne. Lincoln fields, organized by Colonel Matt J. Winn, of Churchill Downs, and Arlington Heights would draw the July and August dates, and each track would then be awarded a short season for the fall months.

"Sunday Manager."

Burt Shotton, who succeeds "Stuffy" McInnis as manager of the Phillies, gained his first experience as a pilot under the direction of Branch Rickey while with the St. Louis American league club. Rickey's religious scruples prevented him from playing Sunday ball and Shotton was Rickey's choice for the role of "Sunday manager."

PONIES HAD THEIR DAY IN MAY.

MAY, being derby month, the thoroughbred had his day. And the coveted honor of winning the blue ribbon event of the turf world went to Whiskery, owned by H. P. Whitney. The victory was a surprise to turf followers. E. H. Bradley's entries were favored. Scapa Flow, War Eagle and half a dozen others as well were considered good bets. Whitney's Bostonion, stablemate of Whiskery, had won the Preakness and its $65,000 prize the week preceding, which made the month a banner one for the easterner.

George Souders, Lafayette (Ind.) youth and former Purdue university student, startled the auto world by winning the blue ribbon event of the year at Indianapolis, Memorial day, with the remarkable speed of 97.54 miles per hour. He stopped but twice in the 500 miles.

The British amateur golf championship, won by Jesse Sweetser in 1926, went to Dr. W. Tweddell, a British physician. Sweetser did not defend his title. The few Americans were eliminated early.

Abe Mitchell won the British pro championship, taking the lead in the final round with a 25-yard putt.

Chicago had another one of those fights, Bud Taylor getting a doubtful decision over Abe Attell Goldstein in what was supposed to be a bantam championship battle.

Baseball furnished little of interest. The pitching in the American league became a rout. As a result the daily game scores read like cricket totals.

The month also saw another heavyweight elimination bout which sent Jack Sharkey into his famous "final" bout with Dempsey. Boston Jack met Jimmy Maloney, the other winner in the preceding battles, and knocked out Maloney in the fifth round of a hectic battle without claiming foul.

It also saw Bill Tilden rise to the heights abroad and gave hope for a while that America would retain the Davis cup against France's challengers later on. In the Franco-American tourney at St. Cloud, France, Tilden not only defeated Rene Lacoste, French ace, but triumphed in straight sets, 6-4, 7-5. Experts declared his play to be the finest he had ever exhibited abroad. Continuing his marvelous play, he then defeated Jean Borotra. The French team, however, won the tourney, Francis Hunter losing both singles matches and Borotra and Jules Brugnon winning the doubles.

Sabin Carr, Yale pole vaulter, continued to draw the limelight in track athletics by setting a new world's record for the pole vault outdoors in clearing the bar at exactly 14 feet in the intercollegiate meet at Philadelphia. Stanford university won the meet, Penn State finished second, Yale third and the University of Southern California fourth.

NORMAN PARK AWARDED GRID CHAMPIONSHIP

Waycross, Ga., December 17.—The football championship of the Georgia Athletic conference, embracing south Georgia prep schools and junior colleges, has been awarded to Norman institute of Norman Park, it was announced by G. B. Connell, Waycross, president of the conference. This award settles a controversy which, during the past several weeks has involved Piedmont institute of Waycross; Georgia Normal of Statesboro, and Norman institute. The argument narrowed to Georgia Normal and Norman, when Piedmont was eliminated in the final game of the season.

Statesboro claimed the honor, as did Norman, but at a meeting of conference officials in Douglas a harmonious decision was reached, the president's cup, named in honor of G. B. Connell, coach of the Piedmont institute Hilltoppers, being presented to Norman Park.

The organization of the Georgia Athletic conference has been strengthened considerably in recent weeks, changes in the constitution having been made at the Douglas meeting. Arrangements were started for the forthcoming conference basketball tournament. J. M. Thrash, of the Douglas A. & M. school, announced that he will offer a trophy for the basketball winner.

Plan Five-Game Series.

Although the first contest will not be played until 1930, athletic officials of Chicago and Michigan universities have completed arrangements for a five-game football series. The new schedule takes the place of the four-game arrangements which was cancelled to permit Iowa and Minnesota, to card more Big Ten games.

COTTONSTATES TOURNEY SET FOR FEB. 16

Auburn, Ala., December 17.—(Special.)—The seventh annual Cotton States Interscholastic Basketball tournament will be held at Auburn, February 16, 17 and 18, according to announcement made today by the Auburn Athletic association. Coach Wilbur Hutsell will, as in past years, have charge of the arrangements in staging the big high school basketball carnival. As the arrangements go forward for the high school get-together, considerable interest is already being manifest throughout the cotton belt, from where the teams enter the embroglio for the cotton states championship.

Last year five states—Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee and Alabama—sent their representative teams to compete for the premier honors of the meet. Unofficial, but authentically considered, information points to teams making their entry from Louisiana, North and South Carolina this year in addition to the five states that tried for the cotton states trophy in 1927.

The meet is an invitation event. Sixteen teams, adjudged as being representative of the section or state they represent, based on records of the season, ar chosen to try for the championship. The invitations are extended to the teams during the week prior to the tournament. This has been the custom since the cotton states meet was inaugurated in 1922.

The 1927 tournament championship was won by Vienna High school of Vienna, Ga. Later this team won high honors in Stagg's National Interscholastic Basketball tournament, held in Chicago, last spring. Peggy Campbell, captain of the champion Vienna aggregation, was chosen as an all-American interscholastic forward at this meet.

PASSING ON

William T. Tilden (lett) and Francis T. Hunter (right), United States Davis cup veterans, say they are going to play in individual tournaments abroad this summer, leaving the task of beating the Japanese and other strong American zone teams to younger players. "Big Bill" and his partner will be waiting in Paris to join them against the French defenders if they get that far.

BY F. G. VOSBURGH.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Boston, Mass., December 17.—Can the United States Davis cup tennis forces sacrifice the services of their two most experienced players, as it appears they must, and still beat such American zone teams as the Canadian and Japenese?

The answer rests with the "bright young men" of the American court—the Lotts, Hennesseys, Doegs, Joneses and Van Ryns.

All hope of help in the preliminary rounds from "Big Bill" Tilden and Frank Hunter, his inseperable tennis companion, was lost when they announced they would be fighting a private war in Europe while their countrymen are starting the long campaign necessary to win back the trophy lost to the French.

Before the United States players can qualify to meet the French again, they must beat out the Japs, Canadians, Mexicans and Cubans in their own American zone and the winner of a similar free-for-all among European contenders.

This arduous task of qualifying—a task in which an off day means defeat and Davis cup oblivion for the year—has not been undertaken since 1920, when "Big Bill" Tilden and "Little Bill" Johnston sailed away to far-off Auckland, New Zealand, and carried the cup into a Babylonian captivity that lasted until the coming of Lacoste and company in 1927.

Now "Little Bill" has faded from the picture, losing bravely to the French last year at Germantown, and Tilden, piqued at the action of the United States Lawn Tennis association, in deciding to challenge in its own American zone instead of in the European, is going across anyway, taking Hunter with him. These three comprised the veteran team that lost the cup to the French last September.

While absence of Tilden and Hunter undoubtedly will endanger United States chances of emerging on top in the American section, it may permit a subtle stroke of strategy, it matters little whether intentional or not.

Tilden and Hunter, touring abroad and taking in the major French and English tournaments, will become acclimated and conditioned. If the challenge round with the French defenders is reached they could add considerable power to the American attack at Paris where it is needed most.

Bobby Jones Out of Open

pionship next year comes when the brilliant golfer and law student is paying more attention to his books than his mashies and brassies. At this time last year he had no intention of defending the British golf title he held and decided almost overnight to hurry to St. Andrews to hit his booming shots in defense of the open championship. His friends hope he may change his mind again, despite law school tasks, when the warm winds of spring replace the chill blasts of winter.

Bobby loves his golf much more in May than he does in December.

If he remains firm in his determination not to try to win the British open three times in succession he has left a mark for those who follow.

Hickey Sees No Split With Major Loops

Final Major-Minor Adjustment Expected at Meeting of Clubs January 1.

Chicago, December 17.—(AP)—There will be no break between the major leagues and the minor leagues, as far as the American association is concerned, President Thomas J. Hickey said today on his return from New York. Mr. Hickey attended the meeting at which the committee of three representing the minors, laid before Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis and the two major leagues, a resolution passed at the recent Dallas meeting of the National association (the minor leagues), in which they were instructed to confer with the "proper" big league representatives for "the purpose of determining the date of the termination" of the present major-minor agreement.

The action of the minor leagues at Dallas in adopting their resolution is not in accord with the wishes or best interests of the three class AA clubs and the Western and Three Eye leagues, Mr. Hickey said. He declared that the five leagues were well satisfied with the "modified draft" as in force at present, and desire to continue their working agreement with the major leagues.

Final adjustment is expected at a meeting of the National association, which will be held between January 1 and 10, in some middlewest city, Mr. Hickey said.

'INTERVIEWED WHEN READY,' SAYS TILDEN

Boston, December 17.—(AP)—When William T. Tilden II invades England in the near future, the American tennis ace is going to write and be interviewed as he pleases, despite the latest edict of the British Lawn Tennis association.

"It was resolved that no amateur could receive money or a monetary equivalent for writing identifiable articles about tennis competition in which the player is to be engaged; permit himself to be interviewed, or to broadcast talks."

"I believe the latter part of this paragraph has not been wholly quoted," said Tilden. "I believe the British rule is the same as the one in vogue here; namely, that an amateur cannot be interviewed or quoted for a monetary consideration. Otherwise, how foolish the whole thing would be.

"How can they stop me from being interviewed? If a newspaperman wants to interview me and I am willing to be interviewed, what can the governing body do about it? If I am willing to be interviewed I am willing to be quoted. What harm is there in the procedure? Especially what harm is done if I am not being paid for the interview?"

Cornell Crews Swinging Oars

Ithaca, N. Y., December 17.—(AP)—Husky crew men under Coach Jim Wray are getting an early start this year in a campaign to regain the rowing glory that was once Cornell's.

In the crew room of the old armory, 50 men are bending their backs in daily practice on a rowing machine which in imagination sends them spinning down the lake, although actually remaining stationary on the wooden floor.

No actual call for candidates has been issued as yet and the men now working out are ambitious volunteers who like their rowing all year round. Coach Wray and his son, "Young Jim," who is helping him, take their enthusiasm as a good augury.

This will be Coach Wray's second season at Cornell. He made a good start last year and this season has rounded up a number of tall, rangy muscular youths—some with no experience but with the requisite build. More than half of the candidates already out are six feet tall and most of them weigh more than 170 pounds, with some tipping the beam around 180 pounds.

The season's campaign this spring will include a dual race with Syracuse on Cayuga lake, the first meeting between the crews of these upstate rivals for 25 years. The main objective of the season as in other years is the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie late in June—with the Olympics as another major consideration.

Black Gold in Training.

After three years' absence from the tracks, Black Gold, winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1924, has been placed in training for an attempted comeback next year.

In winning the championship in 1927 he scored 285 for the 72 holes over the classic Saint Andrews course, cutting six strokes from the record for the event, shared previously with James Braid by the hard-hitting Bobby himself.

Bobby has two titles to look after on this side of the water. He is amateur champion of the United States for the third time, although not in straight years, and he is southern open champion.

Dr. Otto Peltzer Arrives at Chicago

Chicago, December 16.—(AP)—Dr. Otto Peltzer, Germany's champion middle distance runner, arrived here tonight to study athletic conditions and methods at the University of Chicago. He expressed disappointment because A. A. Stagg, 64-year-old director of athletics at Chicago, is in the south on a vacation. Dr. Peltzer will leave tomorrow night for St. Louis.

Jimmy Poole Released.

Jimmy Poole, first baseman of the Philadelphia American league club, has been released with two other players. James Keesey and Joe Mellano, reserve infielders, were sent to Portland on option and Poole went to the Atlanta club of the Southern association.

Non-Scouting Plan Dropped By Harvard

Crimson Officials Find Rule Wanting and Decide To Drop It.

Cambridge, Mass., December 17.—(AP)—Football non-scouting has been tried and found wanting by Harvard and the Crimson definitely has decided to abandon the gridiron "honor system" with all future opponents, according to an unsigned article in today's H. A. A. News, official mouthpiece of the Harvard Athletic association.

Harvard entered a non-scouting agreement with Yale and one or two other opponents this year, hoping to find the system's advertised benefits of better sportsmanship and greater player-initiative, the article stated. Instead, the Crimson found its original objection to the idea had been sustained and that suspicion crept in "which was bound to work in a detrimental rather than a helpful way."

Declaring that openness is the aim of all Harvard athletic policies and taking the stand that "any prohibitory rule causes suspicion," the News went on to point out "concrete examples of suspicion which arose at Yale, Harvard and Pennsylvania" under this year's non-scouting pact.

"Stories had it that Knox, our second team coach, was scouting Yale at the Yale-Princeton game, when as a matter of fact he was sitting with Rockne, Struhldreher, et al., at the Army-Notre Dame game; our freshman coach was said to have been seen in New Haven the day of the Yale-Princeton freshman game, when he was at Pennsylvania with the varsity, and a coach of one of our non-scouting opponents called one of our graduates on the telephone to find out the details of the play of one of our mutual opponents."

Sport Ritticisms

by BILL RITT

The New Jersey deer season is on. The Red Cross probably will be on the job as usual.

One of the warnings given hunters is never to aim at a moving brush. It may be one of the boys who needs a shave.

Hunters are urged to wear red hats and coats. The deer will then know they are hunters, and not become alarmed for fear of being hit.

Another warning is not to shoot until you see the horns of a buck deer. And then, nine times out of ten, it turns out to be a cow.

Hunters are urged not to carry liquor. The deer are law abiding citizens and it may offend their good taste.

No shooting is permitted on Sunday, as the fellows at the hospitals like to have a day off, too.

Always make sure that the object you are aiming at isn't another hunter. Ammunition is costly and should not be wasted.

Girls' Cage Loop Holds Meeting

The December business meeting of the girls' division of the Y-Church Athletic association was held Saturday night and plans for the future development of athletics were discussed.

Miss J. Bowie, teacher of the Bowie Bible class of St. Luke Episcopal, was elected to the board of control for the coming six months.

The managers of the basketball teams of the girls' league selected Mr. Collins and Mr. Hammonds as referees for the rest of the season.

Another meeting of this division will be held at Taft Hall Thursday, December 22, at 6 o'clock.

Penn To Battle California

The University of Pennsylvania will battle the California Bears at Berkeley, Cal., in a post-season football contest, December 31.

Play [illegible]zles Gehrig.

Lou Gehrig, slugging first baseman of the New York Yankees, says that the most puzzling play in baseball frequently faces the first-sacker on an infield hit. Whether to make the out unassisted or let the pitcher cover the base must be decided instantly and Lou believes that more mental errors are made on this play than on any other.

Heilmann To Lose Crown.

Statistics indicate that Harry Heilmann, Detroit's hard-hitting outfielder, will lose the American league batting crown next season. Heilmann has never captured the honor in two consecutive years, although he finished on top three times. He won the title in 1923, slumped the following year, finished on top again in 1925 and failed to repeat in 1926 before copping honors for the third time this year.

Michigan Card Complete.

The University of Michigan football schedule for 1928 has been completed with six home games and two contests on the road constituting the program. The Wolverines will play Ohio State at Columbus and Navy at Baltimore in the only tilts on the road.

PUNCHES RUINED THEM

Foreign Ring Invasion Over, Thinks Edgren

There will be no foreign invasion of the American ring for some time, judging by recent bouts described in the ballyhoo as "international contests." Tex Rickard tried his best to ballyhoo Paolino into another Firpo, and to match Paolino into fame and popularity that could be cashed in at the gate. Paolino was given a couple of decisions that were pure charity. Even with Mr. Fugazy's kind assistance, Tex fell down. The Spanish woodchopper was imported for Mr. Rickard's use. Finding that he wasn't shoved right into a world's championship bout, which would have suited his idea of his importance and ability better than being matched against the local heavyweight chorusmen, Paolino grew temperamental and hopped over the fence to play in Mr. Fugazy's back yard.

It was a lucky hop for Paolino, for he knocked out the aged and dilapidated Harry Wills, stuffed scarecrow of the heavyweight class for several years. In fact, Paolino knocked out Harry Wills so easily and completely that he looked very much like a fighter.

On the strength of that obliteration of the dark menace; which entirely outclassed the obliteration of the dark menace earlier in the season by Jack Sharkey, Paolino was almost accepted as "a dangerous contender."

Unfortunate Idea.

But, unfortunately, some one figured that the woodchopper might knock out any rough, rugged fighter who'd rush him, and that Risko could be relied upon to rush. There has been a notion extant that Risko lacks the keen intelligence that is now recognized as the most important asset for any fighter next to fast legs and skill in circling backward.

Several times Risko had shown that he didn't know how to gallop in reverse. Unknown, matched against the walloping Berlenbach just to give "Punch 'Em Paul" a good workout, Risko, in the dumbest manner imaginable, ran straight at Berlenbach without showing any symptom of being intelligent enough to circle or beat a strategic retreat and try to point his man while in full flight.

He knocked Berlenbach on his ear in the first round; nearly knocked him out, and gave him a beating that softened him and started Paul down the "chute the chutes," and out of the championship. Risko went after the clever fellows in the same dumb way, diving in headlong and using no defense.

None Kayoed Him.

He lost decisions to Jack Delaney, Young Stribling, Mike McTigue, Tommy Loughran, Harry Persons and George Manley, all last year, but nobody knocked him out. Tex figured that if Risko could lose so many decisions and still not be knocked out, Paolino couldn't possibly fail to beat him; and by being first to knock Risko out, Paolino would become another Firpo, because Firpo used to knock out these dumb eggs, too.

But it didn't work. Risko went diving into the Woodchoper, just as the business director of the Six Hundred Hungry Millionaires of Madison Square Garden expected him to.

But Paolino didn't hit Risko on the chin.

Risko hit Paolino on the chin seven thousand times in 30 minutes. Even the referee saw it and gave Johnny the decision, eliminating permanently and effectively Mr. Paolino as a prospective gate attraction. And when a fighter is eliminated as a gate attraction, he is eliminated with Mr. Rickard. Our old friend, Tex, will keep sticking them in, win or lose, as long as they can draw, but the first axiom of the promotion business is that if they can't draw, they can't fight.

Imported Heavy.

Next, long advertised successor of Luis Firpo as a "foreign menace," was Phil Scott, heavyweight champion of England, noted among English champions of recent years by his tendency to avoid assuming a horizontal position. Scott was no Joe Beckett. He was handed a soft one to start with—Knute Hansen, the elongated Dane.

Hansen was popularly supposed to have fighting ability, but no heart. He had boxed the well-known rings around Paolino and had tamely invited an unfavorable decision by letting Paolino make the flurry in the last round, although he must have known that Paolino, and not Hansen, was to be ballyhooed as a foreign menace.

Hansen wasn't eligible as a foreign menace, having been born in Minnesota, and somebody having tipped Tex off that Minnesota is in the United States. Hansen was absent-minded the evening he met Scott. He forgot all about not having a fighting heart: forgot he was slated as a clever, but not at all dangerous, boxer and, to his own intense surprise, knocked Scott kicking in the first round.

Phil Scott has come back part way by stopping Monte Munn, the eminent Nebraska legislator, in the last ten seconds of the tenth round of their recent fight. It was something of a feat to knock Munn out. But even though he made a new altitude record to hit Munn on the chin, Mr. Scott is not yet taken seriously in our best and highest pugilistic circles. Gene Tunney hasn't invited him to a bridge party over the week-end and Tex Rickard has choked off the ballyhoo.

Foreign Invasion Defunct.

That foreign invasion is more or less defunct. The latest by Jack Humbeck, the Belgian behemoth, brought here by Tommy Burns, former world's heavyweight champion, is also a flop.

Tommy sent letters ahead telling the waiting press that he found Humbeck in Belgium, as much out of place as a tiger in a canary bird shop, and was bringing him to America to flatten each and everyone who could be hired to get into a ring with him. Tommy ought to know a fighter. He used to be pretty fair himself. But fighters are the poorest judges of fighters in the world. Anyway, we ought to have known about Tommy. He once developed a chick known as Jack Lester, to whip Jack Johnson and Lester couldn't get by even in Australia, where Tommy sent him to get experience.

Humbeck was mauled out of his first decision, very completely mauled, by Arthur de Kuh. Why comment any further on that?

However, this time Rickard doesn't wear the mourning band on his hat. He didn't import Humbeck. It wasn't his ballyhoo that flopped.

The funny part;

Pleasing Thought

Washington, December 17.—(AP) Commenting today on the break in football relations between the Army and Navy, Chairman Butler of the house naval committee, said:

"I have but one fear: They may resume them again."

Farrell Has Best Record Among Pros

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Of the long string of professional golfers the south will get a chance to see during the winter and spring, Johnny Farrell, the New Yorker, seems to have the best average for the year 1927.

Farrell, for 76 rounds of play, is shown to have turned in an average of 73 7-16 strokes a round.

Walter Hagen is right with him at 73 4-5 a round, although the "mighty Hnig" only competed in 40 rounds.

Based on the year's average medal play, the ratings for the first ten professionals in America is reported as follows:

	Rounds.	Strokes.	Average.
Johnny Farrell	76	5,555	73 7-16
Walter Hagen	40	2,952	73 4-5
Harry Cooper	48	3,392	73 17-22
Bob Cruickshank	92	6,126	73 67-83
Leo Diegel	62	4,588	74
Al Espinosa	54	4,003	74 7-54
Gene Sarazen	54	4,009	74 13-54
John Golden	74	5,494	74-9-37
Tommy Armour	86	6,391	74 23-86
Bill Mehlhorn	90	6,692	74 16-45

These figures were compiled from records of the various tournaments in which the leading professionals competed.

Within a few weeks these players will be in Florida competing in the annual winter feature events of that state before beginning their trek to Pinehurst.

Plans are now being formed to hold a tournament at Birmingham, another at Chattanooga and a third at Atlanta to attract the stars of the links between the Florida border and Pinehurst.

Gruelling Fights Have Ruined Many Battlers

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

The slump that has overtaken those two famous punching champions, Paul Berlenbach and Jack Delaney, brings up an interesting situation. Berlenbach and Delaney, the two hardest hitters in the light-heavyweight class, practically ruined each other for future fighting. A lot has been written about how Berlenbach slumped after the terrific gruelling he took from Delaney, when Delaney won the championship from Berlenbach on points, in 15 rounds, July 16, 1926. But nothing has been written about what happened to Delaney. Yet it is an undoubted fact that neither Berlenbach nor Delaney has shown any of his former fighting ability during the past year.

Berlenbach was beaten by Mickey Walker, middleweight, who wouldn't have lasted three rounds with Puncher Paul at his best. Delaney won a couple of fights from decrepit oldtimers after taking that decision over Berlenbach, but when he tried to go up among the heavyweights he didn't show a thing in the world. He was even beaten by Maloney, which was an awful thing to happen to a young man building up a reputation and hoping to become another Bob Fitzsimmons and collect an assortment of championships. Maloney was knocked out in succession, thereafter, by Jack Sharkey and several other heavyweights, each of whom cut down the time needed to flatten the Boston fighter until it became merely a matter of a slap and a count. Perhaps something happened to Maloney. He may have been "ruined" by the socking Sharkey gave him. Or even by the punches Delaney landed.

I saw Berlenbach and Delaney fight that 15 rounds to a decision. Both were in perfect condition, at the peak of fighting form. Paul looked a winner until after the seventh round. In the seventh he had Delaney staggering from the effect of terrific blows over the heart. It seemed certain Delaney would be knocked out. Then Delaney caught Paul one punch over the heart that stopped his rushing attack, clouted him heavily in body and on jaw and in the last couple of rounds had Paul reeling all over the ring. What happened to Delaney in the earlier rounds is forgotten. But neither has done any fighting worth a whoop since they met.

The history of the ring is full of similar instances, in which great fighters were suddenly shoved back, by some beating, among the has-beens and beef-and-beaners.

Sharkey's Waterloo.

The most famous instance was Tom Sharkey, a marvel of fighting fury and endurance until he fought Jeffries for the championship at Coney Island in 1899. In that fight Jeffries tried to stop the rugged sailor's rushes by meeting him with hard-driven right hand punches to the ribs over the heart. For the first time Sharkey was seen to wince. But he still rushed. Jeffries won the decision. Sharkey claimed that he had been robbed by the referee. But it was noted that while Jeffries went on fighting as well as ever Sharkey suddenly went into a slump, was unable to take punches, and was knocked out quickly by Bob Fitzsimmons and Gus Ruhlin. It was known that Sharkey was unable to leave his room for several days after fighting Jeffries, and it was rumored that he had a couple of ribs broken. Tom wouldn't admit this for several years. But one day when he was all through we were talking over his fights.

"I beat Jeffries and deserved the decision," said Sharkey.

"But you never could fight afterward," I said.

"He broke three of me ribs over the heart," admitted Tom. "Those heart punches of his were awful. But I beat him that night, anyhow," he said stubbornly.

Jeffries Finished Corbett.

Jeffries finished Jim Corbett's fighting career at San Francisco, when he knocked Jim out with right and left hooks at the edge of the ribs near the heart. Corbett always said those were the hardest punches he ever felt. His body was sore for a year afterward, and he still carries a bony lump at the edge of the ribs over the heart as a souvenir of Jeff's left hook. Jeffries, because of his phenomenal strength and tremendous frame, was the nearest thing to punch-proof I've ever seen. As Bob Fitzsimmons said after their second fight: "I 'ad 'im cut to ribbons on the outside, but inside he was as good as ever." Jeffries put several other fighters permanently out of the running as heavyweight contenders. Van Buskirk, a bigger man than Jeffries, was so smashed up by a single body punch that he never fought again. Gus Ruhlin handled by the famous Billy Madden, who developed John L. Sullivan and then Charlie Mitchell, was knocked out by Jeff's terrific body punches, and never was dangerous again.

Bob Fitzsimmons finished many men with punches that practically ended their fighting careers. He knocked out Ruhlin and Sharkey within two weeks, when he was 38. Both told me afterward that they wouldn't fight Fitzsimmons again for $1,000,000. And they were all through except to be brought out now and then to fight some novice.

McGovern Ruined Many.

Terry McGovern, the hardest hitting little man the ring ever saw, finished the careers of many fighters. He hung Eddie Hanlon, a promising lightweight of his day, on the ropes at Philadelphia and Hanlon never did any more good fighting. He knocked out Frank Erne, the cleverest of all lightweight champions in the past 30 years. Erne had to make 126 pounds for McGovern, and was weak. The knockout set him back. Not long afterward he fought Rube Ferns, welterweight champion, and was knocked out again, and then Britt knocked him out and he was through. But Terry McGovern's furious punches ruined Erne.

A curious sequence of knockouts that spoiled good fighters happened in New York in 1912. One Round Davis, of Buffalo, showed signs of becoming another Peter Maher. He had an awful wallop and won his fights in the first round, as his nickname indicates. Having cleaned up in his part of the country he went to New York and fought Soldier Kearns. This Kearns was a physical marvel, built like Tom Sharkey and weighing 210 pounds stripped. In the first round Kearns hit Davis on the chin so hard that Davis turned a backward somersault and hit the floor on the top of his head, his neck bending so that his head was under him as he rolled over and spread out. Everyone thought his neck was broken by that blow. But in half an hour he was apparently all right. That one punch gave Davis such a "glass jaw" that anyone could knock him out, and he soon quit the ring. Soldier Kearns, looking like a coming world's champion, was immediately matched against Jess Willard, the big cow puncher. The fight went along on even terms until the seventh round. Then Kearns hit Jess an awful hook in the body and stepped back to let him fall. Because of his great size and fine condition Willard was nearly punch proof at the time. The punch hurt him and made him mad. He let go a right that traveled about seven feet before it landed on Kearns' chin. Kearns turned a somersault, just as Davis did a few nights before, and struck the floor on the back of his neck. He was counted out. And he had a "glass jaw" from that day on. Willard's one punch ruined a fine championship prospect.

The Strange Case of Mr. Willard.

Jess Willard was battered to pieces at Toledo. Later he trained hard and fought Floyd Johnson, a promising youngster. This was another case of a good fighting man ruined by taking a pounding.

AND — IN THIS CORNER

by BEN COTHRAN

It would seem that, unless Secretary of War Davis or congress steps in, West Point and Annapolis will give a rehash of the Princeton-Harvard scrap of last year and sever relations.

In fact, athletic relations between the two are practically severed now. Army has returned, unsigned, the contract for the 1928 Army-Navy game, and Navy is making no move towards securing the game for next year.

The entire thing was brought about by that bug-bear of colleg athletics—eligibility. Navy made a rule, effective this year, that any man who has played three years of varsity football at any college is not eligible for play on the midshipman eleven. Or if the man has played two years at another college, he may play only one year of varsity football at the academy.

Having made this rule, and put it into force, the Annapolis heads undertook to force the same thing at West Point. The result was, or seems to be, that there won't be any more Army-Navy games, the most colorful of the nation's pigskin dramas enacted every fall.

It's a deplorable situation, and will become even more so if government authorities are forced to step in and take both institutions by the scruff of the neck, so to speak, and administer a stiff shaking and bring them together again.

But the Army-Navy row is only an outstanding example of what is continually happening in collegiate circles the country over. Take for instance, the rumpus kicked up by Ole Miss at the southern conference meeting in Louisville recently when a break between the conference and the S. I. A. A. was imminent.

Then there was the case of Bruce Caldwell, taken off the Yale eleven at the height of a brilliant grid career when an overzealous journalist discovered that Caldwell had played on the Brown freshman team some years back.

Of course, there are rulings of the various conferences on eligibility, but these apply only to schools banded together in various sections of the country.

Football, although it is an amateur sport, has become a big business. And no big business can be successfully conducted without the proper regulations. Ask Tex Rickard.

Football, as it were, is the beneficent Santa Claus of other collegiate sports. It provides the wherewithal to build gigantic stadia. It supports other sports, such as baseball, track, lacrosse, tennis, golf and the myriad forms of athletics now prevalent at all colleges.

You never heard of 50,000 people attending a college tennis match with a gate well over $100,000. But that's a common occurrence in football. The fall sport has become a money making proposition, at the same time keeping all of its old-time glamour and romance, with annual classics, grid feuds and all the rest.

But with occurrences such as this Army-Navy row popping up every year, the business will be harmed, and therefore it would seem that the business needs a regulator.

So why not have a football czar, such as baseball's Judge Landis? Or a national football association or board of arbitration to iron out all eligibility rows and possibly determine a national champion that will be officially recognized?

Therefore, a football czar or board of arbitration taking in the entire country, with a definite set of rules on eligibility and otherwise, would help football a great deal. And it could be established.

Akins Anxious To Fight Here

The Ringside club has been established for some weeks now and seems to have become a regular thing. At any rate, it is attracting boxers from over the country. The latest is Battling Akins, who has been fighting in and around New York and the New England states for the past four years.

Akins is an Atlanta boy and believes that he will make this city his headquarters. While fighting in New England he defeated such boys as Joe Lewis, Joe Burns, Jim Moore, Eddie Gray and Young Gans, a promising negro scrapper. Akins, who was managed by Captain Bob Roper, now gone in the movies, is a lightweight, his fighting weight being around 136 pounds, and he hopes to appear shortly on a Ringside card.

Short Punting And Passing Session Held

Squad Entrains at 10:20 and Is Now on Flying Trip to Coast.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., December 17.—(AP)—Nineteen southern football players, seniors in southern conference universities, met here today and under the tutelege of Coaches Wade, of Alabama; Alexander, of Georgia Tech, and McGugin, of Vanderbilt, ran through the formations they expect to use against the all-Star Pacific coast eleven in their Christmas engagement at Los Angeles.

The football stars arrived shortly after noon and after a short talk by the coaches donned moleskins and engaged in an earnest session of running the ball, punting and line smashing.

Signal practice, punting and passing was stressed by the three mentors. McGugin took active charge of the offensive work, Wade handled the line and Alexander guided the ends and backs. All of the men reported for the workout except Menville, of Tulane, who will join the squad when it arrives in New Orleans tomorrow morning.

New addition to the squad were Dodson, Tennessee, fullback, and Spotts, Washington and Lee end, who will fill one of the places vacated by Shiver and Nash, of Georgia, who were unable to make the trip because of examinations.

The squad left Tuscaloosa at 10:20 o'clock tonight via the Alabama and Great Southern railway. Their first stop will be at New Orleans.

Coach Wade said today that the squad will make a "flying trip" to the coast without stopovers en route for practice.

Open formations were the menu for the greater part of the practice. It was explained that the formations covered those used by all the schools represented by the players and that no one certain style was employed. Coach Wade concentrated his efforts on the forward pass. While under his tutorship, Bill Spears, of Vanderbilt, Estes, of Georgia, and McDowell, of North Carolina State, assumed the task of tossing the pigskin. Middlekauff, of Florida, Brown of Alabama, Hood of Georgia Tech and Spears of Vanderbilt gave their punting toes a good workout. The forward pass defense was taken up by Coaches Alexander and McGugin.

In the signal running practices for the afternoon the three coaches had the following men running: Creson of Vandy and Crowley of Georgia Tech, ends; Hood of Georgia and Pickard of Alabama, tackles; Bowdoin of Alabama and Barnhill of Tennessee, guards; Sharp of Vandy, center; Spears of Vandy at quarterback; Brown of Alabama, Cohen of Mississippi university and Middlekauff of Florida, halfback, and Estes of Georgia, fullback.

Table Served By Famous Boys

Little Rock, Ark., December 17.—A ball player tried out by the Little Rock club five years ago and rejected has been bought by the local club for next year's team. He is Bob Gillespie, an outfielder whose purchase from the Missions club of the Pacific Coast league, was announced today by R. G. Allen, owner of the Travelers. Gillespie has played considerable ball since he was here before and has made good as a hitter. A year ago in the Pacific Coast league he hit .308 and the year before that he hit .355 in the Three-Eye league, while the season before he batted .314 for Wichita in the Western league. He was bought outright from the Missions club. The local club owner also announced the signing of Earl Grace, a young catcher, of Muskogee, and Clarence Loving, a big left handed pitcher of Asheville, N. C.

Grid Star With Waco.

The Waco club of the Texas league, announced recently that "Bo" McMolenda, former star fullback of the University of Michigan eleven, would play with the team next season.

Joesting Joins Team.

Herb Joesting, all-American fullback of the Minnesota eleven this fall, has agreed to play with Coach Andy Kerr's all-Eastern team December 26 at San Francisco against a combination of Pacific coast stars. Gate receipts of the game will be devoted to charity.

Rivals Pancho Villa.

Mitt fans in the east, who have seen Ignacio Fernandez, Philippine featherweight, in action, are of the opinion that he is the best fighter from the islands since Pancho Villa invaded the United States.

Allen May Be Deposed.

Nick Allen may be deposed as manager of the St. Paul American association team. His absence from the minor league convention at Dallas and President Connery's refusal to comment on the situation form the basis of rumors that Allen already has been refused a contract for next year.

West Point, N. Y., December 17. (AP)—The Army athletic council has renewed its contract with Frank Wandle, trainer of athletes, for a period of three more years. Wandle has handled the training of the army football squad and other West Point athletic teams for the past five years.

Red's Mate

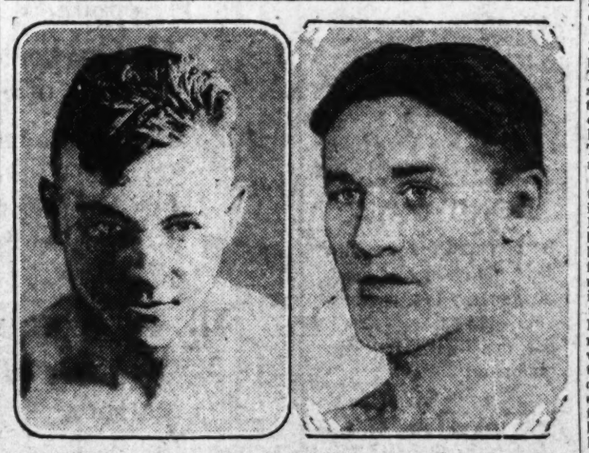

RUSSELL DOUGHERITY.

Houston, Texas. — (AP) — Russell ("Pug") Dougherity, former football teammate of "Red" Grange at Illinois, has just become coach of basketball at Rice institute here.

Dougherity made a name for himself in football as well as basketball at Illinois where he was graduated last June as a bachelor of science in physical education. As a backfield running mate of Grange, Dougherity did some of the blocking and interfering that cleared the path for Grange's sensational dashes. In 1926 he scooped up a fumble and ran 85 yards to defeat Chicago by 7 to 6.

In basketball Dougherity led the Big Ten in scoring and was unanimous choice for all-western conference forward.

LOUGHRAN TO FIGHT

As fast as matchmakers can line them up, Tommy Loughran (right) takes them on. Winning his light-heavyweight crown in October, he defended it in December against Jimmy Slattery and January 6 bears it into the Madison Square Garden ring with rugged Leo Lomski (left).

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Tommy Loughran is out to gain a name as the "fightinest" champion these modern days of few fights and big purses have produced.

When Loughran takes on Leo Lomski at Madison Square Garden, January 6, he will have set something of a record as well as a good example for his fellow pugilists in winning a title and defending it twice against logical contenders, all in the space of three months.

Loughran won his light heavyweight crown—then somewhat synthetic—by beating Ould Michael McTigue, on whose head the New York fistic officials set it when Jack Delaney gave it up to hunt among the heavyweights.

That championship scrap took place October 7 and just a little more than two months later—December 12—Loughran was making good his claim by out-pointing Jimmy Slattery, the pretender to the throne who was backed by the National Boxing association.

Between those fights, Loughran found time to polish off Pat McCarthy, of Boston, in ten rounds, but didn't even bother to count that.

Next on the list is Lomski, one of the hardest-hitting boys the Pacific coast has sent back east in recent years. With youthful confidence, Loughran booked the Aberdeen, Wash., scrapper several weeks before he met Slattery.

It was understood the Lomski bout should go to the winner, but Loughran looked upon it as his fight from the start.

"I'll fight Lomski 15 rounds as champion," he told Jess McMahon, matchmaker for Tex Rickard. After the Slattery fight he repeated the remark.

If he can get past Lomski, who, with Slatttery, was looked upon as the pick of the contenders, Loughran hopes for a bout with Gene Tunney. They met when Loughran, now 25 years old, was a rising youngster, and Tunney was comparatively little known. Gene won on points after scoring a knockdown.

Sportraits

Helen Wills, American and British tennis champion, is going on a tour of Europe and is planning to play matches in France, Germany, England and Belgium. Her trip to Europe in 1926 ended almost disastrously when she became severely indisposed while playing in the French hard court championships. After being rushed to the American hospital at Neuilly it was found an operation for appendicitis was necessary. Because of the operation she was unable to take part in any of the major tournaments for some time.

BUICK SERVICE MEN ATTEND 4-DAY CLINIC

Eighty Buick service managers and shop foremen from Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina points completed an instructive and interesting four-day service clinic Saturday at the Buick Atlanta branch, 512 Spring street.

The latest approved Buick service methods were brought to the Buick service men by C. W. Jacobs, general service manager of the Buick Motor company, assisted by J. H. Sage, Glen Drake and R. J. Carrier, of the Buick factory service department, and R. C. Diehl, of the Marvel Carburetor company. The Buick service clinic is an annual affair held at the branch house cities by the Buick Motor company to instruct dealers' service managers in the latest developments and best methods connected with their work of servicing Buick automobiles.

Demonstrations of shop equipment and tools were given by representatives of the Alexander-Sewald company, Weaver Manufacturing company, Van Dorn Electric Tool company, Du Pont, Devilbiss Manufacturing company, General Tool and Equipment company, and Foster-Johnson Reamer company.

SHIPS FLEE GALE RAGING IN ATLANTIC

Plymouth, England, December 17.—(AP)—Many vessels have taken shelter in the harbor here from a gale raging in the channel and on the Atlantic.

The American Shipper, due in Plymouth from New York with Christmas mail, is reported considerably delayed.

Negro Butlers on Georgia Campus Form Fraternity

:: Recognition of Higher Colored Social Order Is Aim ::

BY BOB SHERROD.

Athens, Ga., December 17.—An organization, one of the chief functions of which is the recognition of a higher social order among the colored gentry in Athens, is gaining quite a reputation here. The organization, composed of negro butlers, valets and bodyguards of some of the fraternities on the University of Georgia campus, is known as the Sigma King fraternity.

The fraternity is purely local, having no connection with any outside or national organization. The name of the lodge once presented quite a problem, but the members decided to call it Sigma King. The butler for the University of Georgia chapter of A. T. O. is president of Sigma King. He is Harrison Edwards, a young negro who has been servitor at the table of Alpha Taus for several years and when off duty dresses in a manner to vie with the best of the young collegiates upon whom he waits. Other members of Sigma King are: John Banks, butler at the S. A. E. chapter house; Boston Edwards, Harrison's brother, who serves at the Kappa Delta sorority house; Tarsaint Chrysler, the K. A.'s contribution; Bill Irwin, Delta Tau Delta "valet," and Babe Davis, butler at the Tau Epsilon Phi house.

Social Rank.

The members must keep their social ranking in Athens; they must attend all football and baseball games in Athens and rent a "U-Drive-It" to go to the Tech-Georgia game each year. They must dress in a manner befitting the "fraternity man."

The question of a proper pin is a poser, or rather it was. Finally the solution came when it was decided to wear any kind of pin that might be obtained. The president has several pins and often wears them all. He has a pin with the words "Allentown High School, Class of '24" on it. The others are similar in nature, but the inscription varies.

Dues amount to 25 cents a month, ain't that enough dues! But there are other ways of collecting money. Some two or three weeks before a special event is to come off, say the annual Tech-Georgia football game, each Sigma King puts up a cigar box in his chapter house with the sign "Send your butler to Atlanta" posted upon it. Contributions flow in and by leaving time the box contains $10 to $20.

Blackballed.

If a member is not financially able to attend a football or baseball game then a note of the negro bleacher gatekeeper, signed by a player, will usually gain him entrance.

According to the president of the Sigma Kings, it is plenty hard for an outsider to gain admission. The butler of a certain well-known fraternity has been blackballed several times because he "does not rate." Membership is strictly limited.

The social functions of Sigma Kings are elaborate. During certain seasons of the year a dance is given every Friday night. These dances are the acme of social activity among Athens' colored. Sometimes the members attend the negro theater in Athens in a body and in full regalia.

A fraternity butler is not merely a butler. His duties extend much further. He must also act as valet, pressing shop, errand boy, bootblack, washlady, fire builder and man-of-all-work. The aspiration of each negro in Athens is, apparently, to be the servitor of a group of young men such as stay at the fraternity houses. Many applications are received during the year but those already holding the position see to it that the job is not lost. All Sigma Kings are loyal to "their boys." Each believes faithfully that he works for the best fraternity at Georgia.

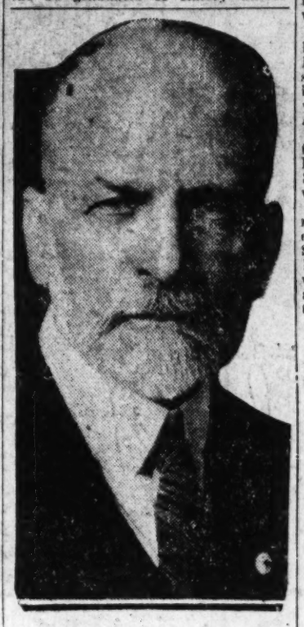

"Let Him Shoot You."

It is said that S. A. E.'s from time immemorial remember "Doctor" Banks, who has held his butlership at the Georgia chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon for many years.

This story of fraternal love is told of two Sigma Kings. It seems that one of the members of that select group was having a little trouble one night, having become engaged in a quarrel. The battle had reached it highest verbal pitch. A gun had been drawn on the Sigma King by his opponent. Then up walked another Sigma King. Seeing the trouble his brother was in, he shouted, "Let him shoot you, I'll kill him."

Randolph-Macon Head to Address Grads at Emory

Robert Emory Blackwell, president of Randolph-Macon college and prominent educator of the south, will deliver the baccalaureate address to the 13 graduates of Emory university at the fall term convocation to be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Pal of Doty Tells Vivid Story of Desert Adventure

:: ESCAPE FROM LEGION HARROWING EVENT ::

Paris, December 17. — (United News.)—The harrowing experiences of Bennet J. Doty, of Biloxi, Miss., from the time he deserted the French Foreign Legion until he was recaptured have been recounted for the first time by his comrade on that adventure.

John Harvey, a Britisher, just released from Clairvaux prison, where Doty also spent some time, told his story to the United Press tonight. He is en route to rejoin the legion, after which he will be pardoned, as the American adventurer was.

"We made a two-night march through the rebel Druses' country," Harvey said, telling of their escape in Syria. "Every second was fraught with the danger of death.

"We decided we must make a day march. On the morning of the third day we started, fearful for our lives. Shortly thereafter a squadron of French planes flew over us. We were spotted; we were bombed. Doty and I hid beneath some rocks until the planes passed.

"On the fifth day we came in sight of a small village. A white-bearded Bedouin, armed with a musket, spotted us. He gestured his friendliness, but our experience told us he was a bandit.

"I handed Doty a rifle, telling him to cover the Bedouin and watch him very closely. Suddenly the Bedouin made a move toward Doty and me. I shouted to Doty 'Shoot, shoot' but the suffering in the desert had so swelled our tongues that, while shouting, our voices were merely a whisper.

"Doty didn't hear me. He moved back, tripped over an unseen rock and fell. He dropped his rifle, but I recovered it in the nick of time. I shot the Bedouin dead.

"Later we saw some more bandits, both on foot and mounted. They chased us and we dashed toward the left. We were running on hilly ground. When we reached the summit we saw mounted Syrian gendarmes.

"When the bandits saw the gendarmes they fled. The men surrounded us and demanded that we surrender. We refused. Then they asked us many questions and finally we surrendered.

"I asked, 'How far is the British territory?'

"A Syrian corporal pointed to the right. 'Four hundred yards that way,' he said. I saw the Union Jack at one of the frontier posts.

"What rotten luck. Had we turned to the right instead of to the left when those bandits chased us I would now be free and Doty never would have had those troubles with the court-martial and prison."

BILOXI PLANS WARM WELCOME.

Biloxi, Miss., December 17.—(AP)—Citizens of Biloxi are planning to take a day off from work in order to give a rousing welcome to Bennet J. Doty when he arrives home after a spectacular career with the French Foreign Legion.

Plans announced today call for a welcoming committee at the train, headed by Mayor John J. Kennedy; display of flags along the streets and appropriate music by a 40-piece band.

Doty, who has been released from the foreign legion after being court-martialed for deserting, is expected in New York Tuesday on the steamer Majestic.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Doty, will meet him in New York and return home with him immediately.

North Georgia will enjoy fair weather and continued cold temperature, over the week-end, according to the forecast by officials of the governmental station in Atlanta. For the southern portion of the state, warmer climatic conditions and probable rains is the prediction today.

A mean temperature of 31 degrees was witnessed in Atlanta Saturday, with the lowest point registered on the thermometer 24.6 degrees. Approximately the same range is scheduled to accompany the clear skies in Atlanta today.

Forsyth Jurist Has Commision 121 Years Old

Juliette, Ga., December 17.—Judge J. Ponder Carson, of Forsyth, has in his possession a sheriff's commission, issued by Governor John Milledge in 1806 to Adam Carson, great-grandfather of Judge Carson. It follows:

"State of Georgia: By His Excellency, John Milledge, governor and commander-in-chief of the army and navy of this state and the militia thereof—To Adam Carson, Esq., greeting: Whereas, you were elected on the fourteenth day of July sheriff of the county of Baldwin. I do, by virtue of the power and authority in me vested by law, hereby commissionate you, the said Adam Carson, sheriff as aforesaid. You are, therefore, hereby authorized to do and perform all and singular the duties incumbent on you as sheriff aforesaid, according to law and the trust reposed in you.

"Given under my hand and seal, at the statehouse in Louisville, the eighteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand, eight hundred and six, and in the thirty-first year of American independence.

(Signed) "JOHN MILLEDGE.

"By the governor, Ben Chaires, for Harolia Marbury, secretary of the state."

Activities of the Week in Atlanta's Schools

EDITED by RICHARD CLARK

Seminary Students Active Throughout Past Week In Christmas Charities

Huge Christmas Tree for Kindergarten Kiddies at School Friday Afternoon.

All holidays bring happiness to the seminary girls, but Christmas brings them more joy than all the others together, because they get so much pleasure out of their Christmas activities. For many years the schoolgirls have had a Christmas tree for some little tots who otherwise would have had no gifts. The tree has always been beautifully decorated and surrounded by stockings bulging with good things. Last Friday the children from a very poor kindergarten were brought out to Washington seminary by the Salvation Army. At the sight of the huge, brightly-lighted Christmas tree the dear little ones seemed on the verge of bursting with joy. At once the little boys began to exercise their lungs by blowing thier horns for all they were worth, while their hands and eyes explored the contents of their stockings. Most of the little girls were so excited over their prettily-dressed dolls at first that they did not have any eyes for their stockings full of surprises and their horns. Some stockings and gifts were sent home to the little children's brothers and sisters who couldn't come to see the tree. It was really hard to tell who had the most fun, the seminary girls or their guests.

In addition to this small attempt at spreading Christmas cheer, each of the upper classes are remembering their own charity. The seniors are busy buying gifts, which they are going to pack in one large box and send to Elizabeth Thomas, the little girl whom they are sending to Vashti. The members of the junior class are planning to play Santa Claus for the children's ward at Grady hospital. Two little girls at the Home for incurables are going to be made very happy Christmas morning by the sophomores, who will present them with clothing amounting to almost $50. The freshmen have not decided upon their charity for the year, but they wouldn't enjoy the holidays if they didn't help somebody in some way, so they are going to see that some poor family doesn't suffer on the day which we consider the greatest of the year. The eighth grade, the seventh grade and the lower classes are going to play their parts of cheerful givers, too, by helping different unfortunate families. Every girl at Washington wishes everybody everywhere to have the happiest Christmas of his life this year!

Last Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Scott and Miss Scott entertained the faculty and resident p pils at a beautiful Christmas dinner.

This dinner, which is an annual affair, is always looked forward to with pleasure by everyone. The spacious dining room with its walls of deep red made a wonderful setting for the gay Christmas decorations. All the guests were seated at one table, which was lighted with unshaded red candles.

The girls came down the wide winding stairs singing Christmas carols. They wore their prettiest evening frocks, and carried small red candles. It was indeed an inspiring sight. They sung between the courses. Just before the last course was served a huge pie, filled with all kinds of fascinating mementoes, was handed around. These caused much laughter and pleasure. During the evening Miss Battle sang and Mrs. Hutchinson read a Christmas story.

Another excellent recital has been rendered by the girls in the music and expression departments. Those taking part were: Mary Anne Spence, Jane Root, Laura Maddox, Helen Cornwall, Mary Wyatt Scott, Dorothy Collier, Betty Matthews, Emily Mathews, Lucy Furman, Sybil Speer, Virginia Cleveland, Bessie Mercer, Constance Hanum, Mary McCord and Helen Thomas, piano; Elizabeth Woodward and Jane Kops, violin; Elizabeth Whitten, Julianna Brooks and Myrtis Adler, voice; Mary Anne Haley and Elizabeth Price, readings, and Jo Beth Apperson, harp.

Miss Julia Oliver Eckford entertained her piano class Saturday afternoon, December 17, at her residence, 749 Peachtree street.

Heart dice was the game enjoyed, the prize for the winner being a box of French stationery.

A novel feature of the party was the appearance of Miss Epsie Dallas, representing Miss Cooper, who arrived with a bag of beautiful presents brought, from France by Miss Eckford. Each girl drew a favor from the bag. Miss Octavia Riley acted as hostess. Later in the afternoon frozen charlotte and cake were served. The guests included Epsie Dallas, Octavia Riley, Marian Calhoun, Betty Huff, Lillie Pace, Virginia Cleveland, Elizabeth Everett, Mary Lee Donovan, Willie Stubbs, Laura Maddox, Joan Root, May Bernie Alston, Emily Mathews, Helen Cornwall and Rela Raidall.

J. C. HARRIS PLANS CHRISTMAS PLAY

Our school was given a splendid picture of Joel Chandler Harris recently and last Friday when we celebrated his birthday, Mrs. Spinks, our P.-T. A. president, presented it to the lower grades in their own classrooms and to the upper grades in the auditorium. It has been framed and will be hung in the library.

The daddies' meeting of the P.-T. A. was held on Tuesday night. The program was a delightful one, a group of songs by Miss Irene Landon and several piano selections by Mrs. Harry McCowan. The speaker for the evening was Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools, and everyone enjoyed his talk so much. After this an informal reception was held.

Mr. Sutton visited the school last week, and it was such a pleasure for us to have him with us.

Another visitor to the school was Mrs. Martin, of Decatur, who gave a most interesting talk on Africa, especially so as that is the subject the sixth grades have been studying.

The mothers and the P.-T. A. members gave the low kindergarten some Patty Hill blocks and they are having such a good time making houses and wagons with them.

All of the first grade children are preparing for Christmas, decorating their rooms and making presents for their parents. The second grade children are making safety rules to "keep Christmas safe."

The high fifth grade is preparing a Christmas play, as is low six two.

The pupils of high six are working hard so they can go to the Joe Brown Junior High the beginning of the next semester.

Low six one is going to have a Christmas play, everyone enjoys practicing for it very much.

—HARRIET MOORE.

NARCISSUS BULBS IN SPRING SIXTH

Marguerite Roddy and Elizabeth Blackshear of six-one brought the class some narcissus bulbs.

Low six-two is very glad to have Billy Inman and Charles Jones back to the class. They have been sick.

Low five-one has made a Christmas tree on the blackboard, and all those who make 100 in arithmetic have their name pasted on it.

Low four and low five are decorating their room for Christmas.

Low four is enjoying the study of coffee.

High two and high three have 100 per cent in perfect teeth and banking.

Low three has a beautiful Christmas border, also some attractive decorations for the room.

Low two has a Chrismas sand table.

Low one is enjoying learning a song about Santa Claus.

JOE BROWN STUDY IS 'TREASURE ISLAND'

Joe Brown pupils are no longer answering "present" to morning roll call, instead you hear "one," "three," "four" in response to the call of each name. This is our way of reporting how many glasses of milk each pupil is drinking a day.

Our weighing campaign is nearly complete and we are already trying to make up our deficiencies in weight. All of us are drinking milk and eating or leaving off whatever will help us to reach normal.

The ninth grade pupils are studying "Treasure Island." From the maps, booklets and posters turned in describing the island, most of our ninth graders expect to be pirates some day.

COLQUITT COUNTY SEES ALL FARMS TENANTED IN 1928

Moultrie, Ga., December 17.—There will not be an idle farm in Colquitt county next year, in the opinion of agriculturists here. They state that the demand for farms this fall, especially for rent, is said to have been the greatest ever known. Good crops were produced in Colquitt this year and conditions on the farms in the Moultrie territory are said to be better than they have been since the war period. The improved situation is attributed to the system of mixed farming, which was inaugurated here under the leadership of the local banks following the failure of the 1923 cotton crop.

MOULTRIE TO VOTE ON $70,000 SCHOOL BONDS JANUARY 23

Moultrie, Ga., December 17.—A $100,000 bond issue will be submitted to the voters of Moultrie on January 23. If the bonds are authorized $70,000 of the proceeds from their sale will be used in providing a new school building. The remaining $30,000 will be used to extend the city's sewerage system. Bond advocates state that there is practically no opposition to the issue. The need for both improvements is said to be pressing.

HARRY ROBERTS HURT IN MISHAP NEAR JONESBORO

Harry Roberts, 154 Simpson street, former city councilman, was in an Atlanta hospital Saturday night with a broken leg as a result of an auto crash near Jonesboro Saturday afternoon.

Roberts was brought to Atlanta by a J. Austin Dillon ambulance. The name of the driver of the other auto was not learned.

Roberts is employed by The Constitution as a linotype operator.

COMPOSER TO GET LAND IN VIENNA FOR HIS SERVICES

Vienna, December 17.—(AP)—Richard Strauss, noted composer, will be given a large plot of government land in Vienna in return for his conducting gratituously twenty operas each season for the next five years and as a tribute to his genius.

A special act of parliament to this effect has been adopted, making the composer the first individual to acquire government owned property in Vienna in Austria's history.

Camp Fire Girls Help Santa Claus

Superintendent Urges Safety for Holidays.

My Dear Boys and Girls: I sincerely trust that you will not forget the letter I wrote you last week with reference to the proper observation of Christmas. This week I wish to call especial attention to the very great need of observing all the safety rules during the holiday season.

In the first place, let us be safe in our homes. Fires are required at Christmas time, and often the weather is extremely cold. Our homes should be thoroughly protected from the fire hazard. High school boys will render a great assistance by seeing that leaves have not accumulated on the eaves of houses, and by removing all rubbish that might be a source of fires. So many accidents are occurring in the homes. Many of them are connected with electricity and others with water and gas systems. With the training which our high school boys and girls possess, they should be able to find where dangers lurk and to call the gas or electric workers and have such hazards removed.

Another great source of accident is the "unloaded gun or pistol," which often proves to be a deadly weapon. Let our boys and girls beware of handling carelessly any type of firearms. The toy pistol itself is often the means of bringing about serious sickness, or death. Let us always be careful of the use of gasoline or other combustibles. Let us make this a Christmas season in which no accident occurs in the home.

In the second place, I wish to call attention again to the fact that we should exercise every diligence as we drive and as we walk in the streets of our city. So often we are exhilarated with the thought of Christmas and we drive furiously around the corner or forget to stop at the sign, or exceed the speed limit. We not only endanger our own lives and property, but place the lives and property of others in jeopardy. We must not only be careful with driving, but we must be careful with walking. Let us not take any risks by crossing streets other than at the corner or by running into the street where automobiles and trucks are likely to pass. When we must cross the streets, let us observe all the laws and use our eyes and our ears. Many boys and girls will be given skates or other toys as Christmas presents, but if one boy or girl should use these in the street and be killed as a result, it would mar the pleasure and happiness of our whole Christmas season. Too many of our students are willing to stand in the streets and beg rides or to jump upon trucks or ride on bumpers. Let us remember that these things are dangerous, and at least during the Christmas season refrain from them.

In the third place, we must keep our bodies well and strong and vigorous. This above all else is the type of safety which every child needs. If we eat the proper food in the right quantities and take the right exercise and use our holidays right, we and all those around us will have an enjoyable season. But if we eat as gluttons, or disobey the rules and regulations of society, we shall suffer ourselves and cause our mothers and fathers to lose their Christmas time.

But above all there is another type of safety, and that is the safety of doing right. Christmas is the season of peace and good will. Let us make it a genuine season of righteousness and service. Instead of disturbing others or destroying property, let us remember to do good to all, and to preserve the peace and good will of our city. Would it not be an awful thing if some boys and girls should break the law or injure property in such a way that they must be brought into court? They would then bring disgrace upon themselves and ruin the happiness of others. Let us make this a safe Christmas!

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Fulton High Entertains Ga. School Superintendents

The school superintendents of Georgia were entertained by Superintendent Jere A. Wells with a luncheon at Fulton High school last Friday. An address of welcome was given by Annie Mae Walker, one of the students. Miss Walker told of the courses of study offered at Fulton High. During the luncheon, which was served by the Junior Home Economics girls, selections were given on the violin by Hermine Baum with Barclay Jackson accompanying on the piano. Afterwards the guests were shown over the school.

The senior girls were entertained at a tea by the alumnae of Wesley colcele, Friday, December 2, at the Druid Hills Golf club. Music was enjoyed throughout the afternoon. Delicious refreshments were served.

The Girl Reserves gave a program for the P.-T. A. last Thursday afternoon. It was a short skit showing the mental, moral and physical development of the Girl Reserve triangle.

The Home Economics club met Wednesday afternoon in the school auditorium. Since Saturday, December 3, was the birthday of Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, a pioneer in home economics work, Ellen H. Richards day was observed. A very interesting program was given by groups 1 and 3. Refreshments were served.

The staff of the Fulton Forum, Fulton's annual, has been selected. Those chosen are: Editor in chief, Annie May Walker; business manager, Earl Quillian; art editor, Joe Roberts; literary editors, Gertrude Mathis and Estelle King; circulation manager, Jackson Davis; assistants, John D. Humphries and Barclay Jackson; joke editor, Johnnie Lee Brown. J. E. White and Miss Sallie Shannon are the faculty advisors. Work on the annual will start immediately.

The alumnae of Agnes Scott college entertained the senior girls with a tea last Friday afternoon at the Anna Young Alumnae house. During the afternoon the girls visited the gymnasium where they watched a very interesting game of water polo. The Georgia Tech quartet rendered several selections, which were enjoyed by everyone.

Since Friday, December 9, was the birthday of Joel Chandler Harris, a program was given Friday afternoon in the school auditorium. Miss Baker and Mr. Jackson had charge of the program. Olin Lee gave a short sketch of the life of Uncle Remus and unveiled a picture of him. A flute solo was given by Harry Payne and Miss Baker read two of the Uncle Remus stories. Everyone enjoyed the program and learned a great deal about this illustrious son of Georgia.

The basketball teams were chosen last week. The girls' team plays College Park Thursday and the boys' team plays the Epworth League Stars Saturday night. The teams have been having good practices and they are expected to represent the school well in all the forthcoming games.

SNYDER-GRAY HEARING PROBABLY NEXT WEEK

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Albany, N. Y., December 17.—Edgar F. Hazelton, counsel for Ruth Snyder, awaiting death in Sing Sing the week of January 12, today sent a request to Governor Alfred E. Smith for a hearing, at which he will ask commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment.

Edward G. Griffin, counsel to the governor, to whom the request came, said the governor would set a date later. It is expected it will be some time during the last week of this month in order to have it disposed of before the 1928 legislature convenes.

Hazelton's letter was brief and perfunctory. It made the request in the shortest possible language and gave no indication of the grounds on which the plea for execuive clemency will be made.

No similar request has yet been received with regard to Henry Judd Gray, Ruth's former paramour, awaiting execution on the same date. Griffin said, however, that unquestionably the two cases would be heard jointly by the governor.

LEESBURG STUDENTS WIN FARM AWARD

Leesburg, Ga., December 17.—(Special.)—Boys and girls of the Leesburg High school won the radio prize offered for the highest number of points made by any competing school in agricultural club activities.

Leesburg scored 87.31 points; Elmodel school of Baker county 80.9 points and Bethany school of Baker county 78.38 points. Smithville school of Lee county was also in the contest.

MANY VISITORS AT GEORGIA AVE.

Georgia Avenue school had the great pleasure last week of having three visitors. Mr. Ashley came back and delighted us with some of his interesting stories. He is so generous about making us happy and we appreciate his kindness to us very much. Friday was such a cold day outside, but Miss Smith, our drawing director, came with her smiles and made a nice day after all. We were all glad to show her our art work.

Miss Massengale, the primary supervisor, visited our little people on Monday and they were glad to see her.

The whole school is improving in banking as more of the grades are getting 100 per cent in savings.

High six enjoyed a visit from Miss Smith, our drawing supervisor. We are making our Christmas pads.

Low six had 100 per cent in banking last week and won a gold star on the banking poster.

They have had 100 per cent in banking for the last five weeks.

High five had their pictures taken Monday.

Low five is making Christmas cards, and Miss Smith came and was pleased with their drawings.

High four had an Uncle Remus program Friday and the whole school was invited, and everybody enjoyed it. They also won three prizes and the P.-T. A. meeting and are getting ready for Christmas and made Uncle Remus posters.

High three is going to send the toys that they have made and painted to a mountain school.

High two pupils have planted a potato and are watching it grow.

High one is now studying about the shepherds.

Low one pupils are looking forward to decorating their Christmas tree.

The ungraded class has a new boy in their room, Jack Carter.

LEE SECOND GRADE DRAMATIZES STORY

This school observed Uncle Remus' birthday December 9 with a program. Each room contributed two numbers for the program. High six and high four gave the story of Mr. Harris' life. The other grades dramatized some of his stories. Low six dramatized "The Awful Fate of Mr. Wolf," and low two dramatized "The Tar Baby."

High one had 26 children within two pounds of normal weight, and seven that were perfect.

High two has a beautiful Christmas tree and border. High three's border represents Christmas in other lands, as well as our own country.

High five has had 100 per cent in attendance two days this week.

The ungraded class had their P.-T. A. sale last Tuesday. At the last P.-T. A. meeting the two fourth grades had a Christmas program. This was followed by an interesting address by Dr. Will Houghton on "The Training of the Child."

CALHOUN HEALTH BOARD TO BEGIN FUNCTIONS SOON

Arlington, Ga., December 17.—Two important laws go into effect in this county following their recommendation by the December grand jury, which is the second required grand jury to so recommend.

One of these laws is the Australian ballot system or "An act to provide for the secret and private ballot at all elections held in this state." The law is in effect in practically all other counties of the state, and it is believed that it will be a big improvement over the former law in Calhoun county.

The Ellis health law provides for the chairman of the board of county commissioners, the county school superintendent and a physician named by the grand jury to compose a board of health for the county. Dr. C. K. Sharp, of Arlington, was named by the body to serve with Chairman C. A. Manry, of the county board, and County School Superintendent H. T. Singleton to compose the body and put the law into operation.

Moore Elected.

Dahlonega, Ga., December 17.—(Special.)—A vigorous campaign waged for mayor of Dahlonega ended today with the reelection of Hughes Moore over his opponent, G. C. Dugas. The following councilmen were elected: Frank Fitts, Fred Jones and R. C. Meaders.

FAITH STUDENTS PLAN PROGRAMS

Low kindergarten had a happy time last week making Christmas presents for their fathers.

Low one is getting ready for Christmas. The pupils have already made their mothers' presents.

We are working on our Christmas program in high one. Lunnie Parker, from group one; Marvin Farmer, from group two, and Sylvia Beck, from group three, read best last week.

High and low two are very much interested in the real Christmas story and have made two posters, one of the wise men, the other of the shepherds. We are planning to have a Christmas tree. We are going to invite guests.

Low three showed a big improvement in arithmetic on the last test. We were sorry to lose Dempsey Clotfelter from our class, but we know he will make a fine pupil wherever he goes.

Low four has won the savings banner for four weeks and hopes to keep it longer.

We children in high four hope to reach 100 per cent in Red Cross membership.

Low five surely did enjoy hearing Miss Romer tell so many nice stories about Uncle Remus Friday.

We enjoyed a visit from Miss Harralson in high five Thursday. She let us have our rhythmic work in several new ways and we had such a good time with her. She liked the Santa Claus heads Ruby Durham had made to use for notes.

Low six is having a good time singing Christmas carols and thinking of the orphans we are going to invite to our Christmas tree. We feel sure we can make someone happy this Christmas.

The ungraded low pupils have their room decorated so in case Santa comes to see us then he will know we are glad he has come to our city again.

Ungrade high welcomed as their guest Friday Miss Hobgood's grade, which enjoyed the Christmas carols played on the Victrola.

O'KEEFE SELECTS DEBATE WINNERS

The semi-finals in the debating contest were held at the assemblies on Monday and Tuesday. For the seventh grade, Arch Fitzpatrick, Hal Clarke and Thad Johnson were the winners. Those making the best speeches in the eighth and ninth grades were Remington McConnell, Mabel Carroll and Martha Pound, eighth grade; Ross Cheshire, Frances McCollum and Tommy McCullom, of the ninth grade.

Mr. Phitts, of the national health commission, spoke to the seventh and eighth grade assembly on "Health."

Hurrah! O'Keefe is again on top. The school is 100 per cent in Red Cross activities, giving to the Red Cross $85, which means that every child in school contributed toward the fund.

At the banquet held Wednesday night for the football team the players were presented Os and sweaters for their prowess on the squad. All the boys proved themselves good enters as well as good players.

MARCIA BAKER.

ORMEWOOD MAKES SANTA CLAUS BOOK

The fourth grade was sorry that their teacher, Miss Fountain, was absent Monday and Tuesday on account of illness.

The pupils of low first are enjoying getting ready for Christmas.

De Lora Wellborn, of the high 2d, had the honor of riding in the sleigh with Santa Claus. They are very much interested in the Christmas tree they are planning to have.

High and low have finished Christmas presents for their mothers and fathers. They have an attractive Christmas border. The sixth grade children are writing Christmas plays. The best one is going to be dramatized by the class.

The high 1 children are very much interested in making a Santa Claus book.

The second grade is glad to have Mary Power and Georgia Wood back in school. They are all trying to be good so Santa Claus will come to see them.

The low kindergarten is very proud of again winning the dollar for having the largest percentage of mothers present at the last P.-T. A. meeting. As a consequence, a new baby doll has come to live in the kindergarten.

The pre-school circle has presented the kindergarten with six reindeer reins and some new pegs which the children enjoy very much.

EVICTION LOOMS FOR OHIO MINERS BY COURT ORDER

Columbus, Ohio, December 17.—(AP) More than 100 union miners' families in Belmont and Jefferson counties will have to move from the companies' houses next April 1, according to a decision of Federal Judge Benson W. Hough, who, in federal court here today granted an eviction order asked by the companies.

The eviction order affects all miners sought to be evicted by the companies except those living in company houses at the No. 2 mine of the Clarkston Coal Mining company. The court refused to order there, because the mine is not operating and there appeared to be no immediate need by the company for the houses to shelter non-union workers.

WASHINGTON KIWANIS CLUB NAMES HEADS

Washington, Ga., December 17.—At the regular luncheon of the Kiwanis club of Washington this week officers and directors were elected for the ensuing year as follows: Alfred S. Holcomb, president; Rochford R. Johnson, vice president; I. W. Jones, treasurer; Statham Quinn, trustee; Dr. C. L. Smith, secretary. Directors: J. M. Pitner, J. D. Ellington, F. H. Ficklen, Charles H. Calhoun, T. W. Miller, Dr. C. E. Wills and C. Howard Orr.

Atlanta Schools Plant Dogwoods on Arbor Day

STUDENTS SET OUT 1964 TREES

Almost two thousand dogwood trees have been planted by Atlanta school children during the last week or two, as a feature of Arbor day activities held throughout the city school system this month, according to Miss Hattie Rainwater, science supervisor of the Atlanta schools. The actual number of trees that have been planted is 1,964, with the James L. Key school leading in quantity with 498 trees to its credit. Other schools are close behind; Joel Chandler Harris school is second with 277 trees, and Georgia Avenue school is close on its trail with 250 trees.

Milton Avenue school planted 180 trees; Highland, 164; Lee Street, 139, and Kirkwood, 114. A number of other schools have reported the planting of between 75 and 100 trees.

Miss Hattie Rainwater is the city supervisor of science in the schools, and it is through her untiring efforts that the remarkable results in science of the Atlanta schools have been possible. Continued reports are coming in to her, and it is expected that before long the number of dogwoods planted will well overtop the 2,000 mark.

Tech High Student Cabinet Appointed by President

Last Friday night the Sutton Literary society gave a very enjoyable affair in the form of an informal dance. The dance was given to celebrate the first anniversary of the society, it being founded in December, 1926.

Frank "Pap" Terrell, president of the student body, and George F. "Droopy" Carnes, vice president, will be formally inaugurated Monday by Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, of Georgia's supreme court. President Terrell has picked his cabinet which is composed of the following: Secretary of state, Tom Sanders; secretary of treasury, Winston Grubbs; secretary of war, Hollis Whitman; secretary of navy, Joe Stearns; secretary of aviation, Harold Dobbins; secretary of commerce, Neville Everett; secretary of sanitation, Norman Mott; secretary of athletics, Gladstone Hammond.

The ambassadors include: Girls' High, Joe Candler; Fulton High, Willis Beavers; Boys' High, Bill Horne; Commercial High, Henry Maddox; Decatur High, Hunter Ellis; Washington Seminary, Tom Wells; North Avenue Presbyterian, Reuben Gunnell; Woodberry Hall, John Cooper; University School for Boys, Jimmy Borom; Peacock School, Dan Knox; Bass Junior High, Clifford Dennis; Brown Junior High, Bill Hutt; Smith Junior High, Lloyd Thaxon; O'Keefe Junior High, Jeff MacMillan; Decatur Junior High, LaMarr Mullins; and Mussolini (dictator), Richard Altobellis.

Since the announcement of sponsors of last week the Tau Delta Tau fraternity has selected Miss Margaret Underwood for their sponsor for the school year 1927-1928.

The Tehisean, Tech High's annual publication of the senior class, reports that the first fifty pages have already been sent to the engravers. J. B. Sojourner is now putting forth his third successful annual at Tech High and the students wish to congratulate him on his splendid work.

Last Tuesday the inter-class basketball champions, T. W. Alexander's first period class, were given a very enjoyable banquet at the Daffodil. This tournament is held annually and the winners are awarded a banquet.

The minstrel, after such a splendid showing Tuesday night, December 7, journeyed to Nelson, Ga., last night and put on another performance at the Nelson Community House. T. L. Smith should be thanked again and again, and congratulated on such a fine show.

Every one at Tech High is striving with an extra effort to get all their work up passed the seventy per cent mark by Christmas, for there will be awarded to each boy, at that time, who is passing all of his work, a merit card. This card states that the student, who's name appears on the card, is passing all of his subjects and is a member in good standing of the Tech High Merit club. It also has a very attractive Christmas border in the colors of Purple and Gold. This card was designed and printed by Tech High students.

H. Reid Hunter has awarded Tech High a holiday for defeating our bitter rivals, Boys' High. This holiday was to have come last Tuesday, the day after the game, but after Mr. Cheney had spoken to several classes, it was finally decided that we would take the Friday before Christmas and thus get out on Thursday, December twenty-second.

Tech High had a very successful football season, which was brought to a close last Friday when the Smithies buried Boys' High, 39 to 0. Tech High lost three out of ten games and scored two hundred points to her opponents 40. A banquet will be held shortly and sweaters awarded the Smithie eleven.

Candle Lighting Service Features N.A.R.S. Program

One of the most beautiful of the Christmas programs came Friday afternoon in the candle lighting service of the North Avenue Presbyterian school, celebrated at the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

Assembled in the church auditorium the whole school took part in this beloved traditional service, made even more beautiful than usual by the assistance of two members of the North Avenue church choir, Ed Werner and Miss Margaret Battle.

The service opened with the lovely music of Handel's "Come Unto Me Ye Weary," sung by the high school girls, followed by the procession of candle lighters, white dressed, serious eyed girls, happy in the much sought honor of being a part of the tree lighting service. And then in the soft glow of the candles the story of the Savior's birth was told and sung in Scripture story, in carol and hymn. The service is dear to the heart of every North Avenue lover, for it expresses the ideal of the school.

Girls' High Activities Present P.-T. A. Program

The December meeting of the Girls' High P.-T. A. was held in the Girls' High auditorium on Tuesday, December 13, at 8 o'clock. The meeting was held at night so that both fathers and mothers might attend, and a surprisingly large gathering composed of parents, teachers, students and their friends and relatives were present. The meeting was called to order by the president of the association, Mrs. Waynes S. Kell, and under her direction the business of the evening was attended to and committee reports were given. After the regular business a program was given by the students, demonstrating several of the foremost extra-curricula activities. The first number was a musical group presented by the Mandolin club, of which Virginia Hall is the president. Then came a short speech by Sarah White, president of the Girls' High chapter of Cum Laude, who explained Cum Laude and introduced the new members of the chapter. This was followed by a short entertainment under the auspices of the High Times, the Girls' High student paper, Vernon Ogletree, editor-in-chief, made a short talk of the work of High Times and several types of writing, which had been published in the paper, were read. The last number on the program was a musical group presented by the Glee club, under the direction of Miss Whitmore. Their entertainment consisted of several songs from "O Hara San," and a Japanese dance by four of the girls. At the conclusion of the program all adjourned to the cafeteria where coffee, cocoa and cakes were served by the entertainment committee.

On Thursday, December 15, the Glee and Mandolin clubs presented a delightful little program over WSB at their regular public school radio hour. The program was similar to that presented at the P.-T. A. meeting with a few changes in the Glee club numbers. They sang a "Japanese Love Song," the "Barcarolle" from "Tales of Hoffman," and some Christmas carols, among which was the "Cantique de Noel," sung in French by a selected group of French students.

ROBINSON, BLOUNT GIVEN PROMOTIONS, BY CENTRAL ROAD

Savannah, Ga., December 17.—(AP) Frederick J. Robinson, now general passenger agent of the Central of Georgia railway, is to be promoted to the office of executive general agent with headquarters in Atlanta, January 1. He will be succeeded by John W. Blount, of Savannah, as general passenger agent.

Robinson was city passenger agent in Atlanta for several years and also was traveling passenger agent. He was made assistant general passenger agent at Savannah in 1901 and general passenger agent in 1916.

Blount started as clerk at Macon in 1890 and was made assistant general passenger agent 11 years ago.

ARGENTINA TO JOIN LEAGUE OF NATIONS AS RESULT OF MEET

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and the Chicago Tribune.)

London, December 17.—Argentina is going at last to join the League of Nations. This is the result of a conference yesterday between Foreign Minister Gallardo, of Argentina, who is now visiting England, and Foreign Secretary Sir Austen Chamberlin, at which the Briton urged his guest to join.

The position now is that while Argentina has paid all its dues in the league, it has never formally become a member because the Argentine congress never approved it and never sent delegates.

NO DECISION REACHED IN TRIAL OF FAISON

Richmond, Va., December 17.—(AP) After considering for 40 minutes the case of John W. Faison, former Hermitage club secretary, charged with the murder of Mrs. Elsie Holt Snipes in her apartment here last November, the jury reported to Judge Kirk Mathews in Hustings court at 11:50 o'clock tonight that it had not reached a verdict.

The court ordered the jury locked up until 10 o'clock Monday morning, at which time it will return to the juryroom to consider the case which was given it at 11:10 o'clock following six hours of argument by counsel for the commonwealth and defense, and a charge by Judge Mathews.

NEWTON L. HALL, 68, DIES IN FORSYTH

Forsyth, Ga., December 17.—Newton L. Hall, age 68, native of Washington county, died suddenly here Saturday morning from heart trouble. He was a former resident of this city where he made many warm friends. At the time of his death he was visiting the family of J. C. Rushin.

Hall is survived by his little granddaughter, Ethel Hall Parker, of Millen, and two brothers, Zack Hall and Lorin Hall, of Sandersville, Ga.; a sister-in-law, Miss Minnie Rushin, resides here. The funeral will be held from the Sandersville Methodist church Sunday afternoon.

JOSEPH C. JOHNSON BURIED IN AMERICUS

Americus, Ga., December 17.—Many friends attended funeral services held here Friday for Joseph Calvin Johnson, who died Thursday at his home on Spring street, following a lengthy illness. Rev. Leland Moore, pastor of First Methodist church, officiated and interment was in Oak Grove cemetery. Johnson was 61 years of age and had resided in Americus about a year. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna Johnson; three sons, C. B. Johnson, William Johnson and Joseph Johnson and two daughters, Miss Mary Anna Johnson and Miss Elizabeth Johnson, all residents of this community. One sister, Mrs. Nan Hill, of Alabama, and a brother, Hosie Johnson, of Natural Bridge, Ala., also survive him.

MISS FLORA FITE DIES IN ATLANTA

Miss Flora Fite, 36, member of one of Cartersville's best-known families, died in a local hospital Saturday.

For the past 10 years Miss Fite had been a teacher in Cartersville elementary school. During the war she served in the war department in Washington.

Miss Fite was prominently connected. She was the daughter of the late Judge A. W. Fite. Her brother is Commander W. Conyers Fite, of the United States navy.

The body was taken to Cartersville Saturday night. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Miss Fite is survived by her mother, a sister, Miss Sara Fite, of Cartersville, and three brothers, Lindsey Fite, of Tampa, Fla., and Joel Fite, of Miami, and Commander W. Conyers Fite.

LAST HONORS PAID EDMUND MARTIN

Final tribute to the life of loyalty and service of Edmund W. Martin, 73, veteran Atlanta attorney and a leader in church, civic and fraternal circles of the city for many years, was paid Saturday afternoon by hundreds of friends and admirers at funeral services held at the Trinity Avenue Methodist church.

Last rites were conducted by the Rev. S. R. Belk, pastor of Grace Methodist church, who was Mr. Martin's former pastor at the Trinity Avenue Methodist church, and the Rev. Wallace Rogers, present pastor of the church. Interment was in West View cemetery.

The spacious church was crowded by leaders of the city and state who were associated with Mr. Martin in his various activities.

Beautiful floral offerings covered the gray casket as it lay before the pulpit of the church which was heavily banked with flowers in token of the esteem in which Mr. Martin was held in the community and state.

Former Governor John M. Slaton, George S. Lowndes, Sr., Dr. J. L. Campbell, W. C. Mansfield, A. L. Waldo, John A. Manget, Will L. Hancock, F. A. Quillian and A. J. Shropshire acted as pallbearers.

An honorary escort was formed by members of the Old Guard, the board of stewards of Trinity Avenue Methodist church, Atlanta alumni of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, Atlanta Bar association, Atlanta Lawyers' club and other organizations of which he was an honored member.

Representatives of the Atlanta Lawyers' club were Robert C. Alston, Lowry Arnold, John A. Boykin, Judge Shepard Bryan, Frank A. Hooper, Sr., Albert Howell, Jr., Joseph W. Humphries, Judge E. C. Kontz, James L. Mayson, Eugene Mitchell, Walter McElreath, Jack J. Spalding, John L. Tye, Sr., James T. Wright and W. D. Thompson.

The following were appointed by T. A. Hammond, president of the Atlanta Bar association, to serve as the honorary escort for that organization: Reuben Arnold, James W. Austin, R. B. Blackburn, John A. Boykin, Edgar Craighead, Willis M. Everett, Sr., W. A. Fuller, W. W. Gaines, Arthur Heyman, Linton C. Hopkins, Joseph W. Humphries, Don K. Johnston, Walter McElreath, James L. Mayson, Eugene M. Mitchell, Edgar A. Neely, H. C. Peeples, Alex Smith, Hughes Spalding, W. D. Thomson, Edgar Watkins and George Westmoreland.

Governor John W. Martin, of Florida, a nephew of Edmund Martin, arrived in Atlanta Saturday morning and attended the services.

All divisions of Fulton superior court were declared in recess Saturday out of respect to the memory of the noted attorney and civic leader.

MRS. J. T. JOHNSON DIES IN GRIFFIN

Griffin, Ga., December 17.—Mrs. J. T. Johnson, widow of the late general superintendent of the Central of Georgia railroad, died Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. W. T. Bennett, whom she was visiting. Mrs. Johnson was at the breakfast table when she suddenly toppled over onto the floor, dying almost instantly.

She had been making her home in Savannah recently, but spent much of each year in Griffin. She was formerly Miss Elizabeth Lou Mountcastle and she was born in Virginia in 1865. After her marriage she moved to Savannah with her husband.

They bought a farm near Griffin and lived here part of each year. After death of her husband Mrs. Johnson brought her two sons, Thomas Marion Johnson and Henry Bradley Johnson, to Griffin to make their home on the farm. After the boys were graduated from the University of Georgia they returned to Savannah and Mrs. Johnson had been spending most of the time with them there.

The body was carried to Columbus for interment Sunday.

MRS. C. W. HUBNER, LOCAL POET'S WIFE, TO BE BURIED TODAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Charles W. Hubner, 89, wife of the well-known Georgia poet, who died Saturday morning at the residence, 735 Catherine street, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Central Presbyterian church. The Rev. Richard Orme Flynn will officiate and interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

Mrs. Hubner was born in Chillicothe, Mo., but moved to Atlanta at an early age. She was the last living charter member of the Central Presbyterian church.

She is survived by her husband; two sons, William Whitney and Carl Whitney, of San Francisco, Calif.; a daughter, Rose Whitney, and four grandchildren, Frances, Robert, May and Rose Whitney. Awtry & Lowndes will be in charge of arrangements.

New York, December 17.—(AP)—The Civic Forum medal of honor was presented to Elihu Root in recognition of distinguished public service by Chairman George W. Wickersham, former United States attorney general, in Town Hall tonight.

U. S. CHAMBER URGES FLOOD CONTROL IN U. S.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Full federal responsibility for controlling the Mississippi river floods will be recommended to congress by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Lewis E. Pierson, president of the chamber, said tonight that as a result of a referendum vote just concluded among its membership the chamber would recommend to congress the following Mississippi flood control program:

1. The federal government should hereafter pay the entire cost of constructing and maintaining works necessary to control floods of the lower Mississippi river.

2. The federal government should assume sole responsibility for locating, constructing and maintaining such work.

3. There should be adequate appropriation to insure efficient, continuous and economic work, the funds to be made available as needed.

4. Flood control of the Mississippi should be dealt with in legislation and administration on its own merits, separate and distinct from any other undertaking.

WOMAN ASKS DIVORCE SO SHE CAN JOIN CHURCH

Little Rock, Ark., December 17—(AP) A complaint for divorce in which she charges her husband, among other things, with restraining her "from joining the church of her choice or any church," has been filed in chancery court here by Mrs. Ella J. Lang, against the Rev. E. J. Lang, associate director of Near East relief work in Georgia and Florida.

Workers Smooth and Paint Haynes Manor House Trim

Many Visitors Inspect Construction of Paper's Second Residence in Better Building Campaign; Innovations To Be Installed for Beauty and Comfort.

BY ERNEST RUBIN.

While workers added the last few bricks to the exterior of The Constitution's model home in Haynes Manor and adjusted the corner tile on the roof, a crew of expert interior decorators were busy on the inside, finishing the woodwork.

In following the home-building demonstrations, on the second of which The Constitution is now engaged, up to this point you have seen that the greatest effort was made in selecting lumber and mill work for the model residence, being erected by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company in Haynes Manor, to make this phase of the undertaking a valuable object lesson. The finest standard lumber materials, noted for their enduring beauty, and hence ultimate economy, were chosen.

Perfect Finish.

On your inspection trip this past week you saw the same care being taken to give the mill work furnished by Willingham Tift Lumber company a perfect finish. Perhaps, that was why the engrossed decorators did not turn to repeat the cordial welcome, that is extended the home-interested public to inspect the model house while under construction, when you passed by this time. But he and his fellows were glad to have you watch; and you saw them hand-rubbing all the interior trim with sand paper. In other parts of the house the painting had already been started.

Upstairs you went to see what progress had been made in the two bathrooms that you noticed on your earlier visits were so large and well-lighted and yet fitted so snugly into this compact dwelling. There you found the surprise of your life. The Lowry company had just sent in the two bath tubs, one tinted in green and the other in brown—the latest thing in bathroom fixtures—but the tubs were still in their packing. They were to be installed, however, before the end of the week. Next week you are to get a full description of the fashionable bathroom fittings.

Ideal Size Home.

There are many more surprise innovations in store for those following the construction of the second model home, which is being built in the better homes campaign, sponsored here by The Constitution in cooperation with the Home Owners' institute. You and the other visitors have wondered how so much as the plans called for could be neatly worked into a home so small and ideal in size. That is part of the demonstration. To the average home-builders compactness in design and construction is of great importance.

The second model home is showing how this can be obtained without sacrificing any of the beauty or conveniences of a home. Along with the paramount lesson of showing the economic advantage of building with standard materials suited to the type of architecture, the Haynes Manor home will illustrate how the dwelling of small exterior dimensions can be laid out to contain the following well-appointed rooms: A large living room, opening into a dining room on one side and music room on the other side, kitchen, pantry and breakfast room, three bedrooms, two baths, extra lavatory, numerous closets, a side porch, back porch and porte-cochere, as well as a large cemented basement. Added to this will be the many home conveniences, that it is sometimes thought can be installed only in the largest residences.

Keep in touch with the building developments and visit the Haynes Manor site.

GOLDMAN HANDLES LEASE FOR EWING

Lease of space at 109 Peachtree street for a jewelry store to Nalpe, Inc., at an aggregate rental of $60,000 over a period of years was announced Saturday by J. H. Ewing and Sons, through Moe Goldman, manager of the business leasing department, who acted as agent in the transaction. The deal was one of the largest of the week and carries particular significance in being consummated during the pre-Christmas lull.

The space leased constitutes part of the Peachtree store, which will be divided and remodeled. The Nalpe jewelry store will occupy the north division after improvements have been made. Nalpe, Inc., has been in Atlanta on Peachtree street for a number of years. Their removal to their new location marks a notable trend in the local jewelry trade.

In announcing the deal Mr. Goldman called attention to the favorable sign of continued activity through the holiday season and pointed to it as a harbinger of enhanced real estate prosperity with the coming of 1928. In addition to his active lease work in varied business fields during the past year, Mr. Goldman is recognized as one of the leading chain store lease men in the south.

HUGE TAX SLASH SEEN BY SIMMONS

Washington, December 17.—(United News.)—A democratic plan for a $400,000,000 tax reduction was announced confidently by Senator Simmons, North Carolina, senate minority tax leader, today, just as the senate received and referred to its finance committee the $290,000,000 tax reduction bill passed by the house.

Senator Simmons called at the white house today, and after seeing President Coolidge, laughed aside suggestions that a $400,000,000 tax reduction bill would be vetoed.

Simmons advocated repeal of all admission, club and other so-called "nuisance" taxes, abolition of the federal estate tax and further reduction of the corporation tax.

Republican leaders were quick to reply. Representative Tilson, Connecticut, house floor leader, blamed the democrats and the United States Chamber of Commerce for the house's action in increasing the bill's revenue slash from $233,000,000, as proposed by the ways and means committee, to $290,000,000.

The "propaganda" of the chamber with the aid of the democrats won enough republican votes to make the changes, Tilson said in a statement.

PRESIDENT GETS DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION MEASURE.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—The first appropriation bill of the session—a deficiency measure carrying $200,936,000 to meet additional expenses for the current fiscal year—was sent to the white house today by congress.

The bill carries $940,000 for elevation of guns on the battleships Oklahoma and Nevada if the president should determine that this would not be a violation of the Washington arms treaty.

Observing Gents Discover Girls Do Not Roll 'Em

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution.)

Chicago, December 17.—Observing gents here have discovered that girls are not rolling their stockings now, either above or below the knees. Investigation discloses that the fad has passed out with the Charleston, the fluffy-bob and floppy galoshes.

"It's not a matter of cold weather," said the head of one of the largest exclusive hosiery stores. "They haven't been rolling them for some time. Cold weather never made girls give up anything they were as determined about as they once were about rolling their stockings.

"Rolled stockings were the natural result of the freedom from corsets, young women did not want any kind of constriction about their waists and tight garters above the knees bring on varicose veins, so they rolled their stockings. Now they are wearing girdles with supporters attached—little bodices of satin and rubber.

"I would not be surprised if the next generation swings back to heavfled boned corsets. Styles have to go one way or the other. They can't remain still in this country."

STEEL WORKERS REJECT AWARD IN ARBITRATION

Duesseldorf, Germany, December 17.—(AP)—The Rhenish and Westphalian iron and steel industrialists have rejected the award by the official arbitrator in the steel and iron tie-up.

Minister of labor, Dr. Heinrich Brauns, who served as official arbitrator in the industrial dispute, proposed a compromise by the employers and workers providing for the general introduction of the eight-hour day in the course of the coming year and a temporary small reduction in wages.

CHURCH DEPENDS ON BISHOPS TO AID PRAYER BOOK FIGHT

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, December 17.—"It is now up to the bishops to give the church leadership in the most critical period in its existence," is the almost unanimous declaration of the Angelican church leaders, who are waiting anxiously for the results of the bishops' meeting at Lambeth palace Monday to consider the situation created by the rejection of the new prayer book by the house of commons.

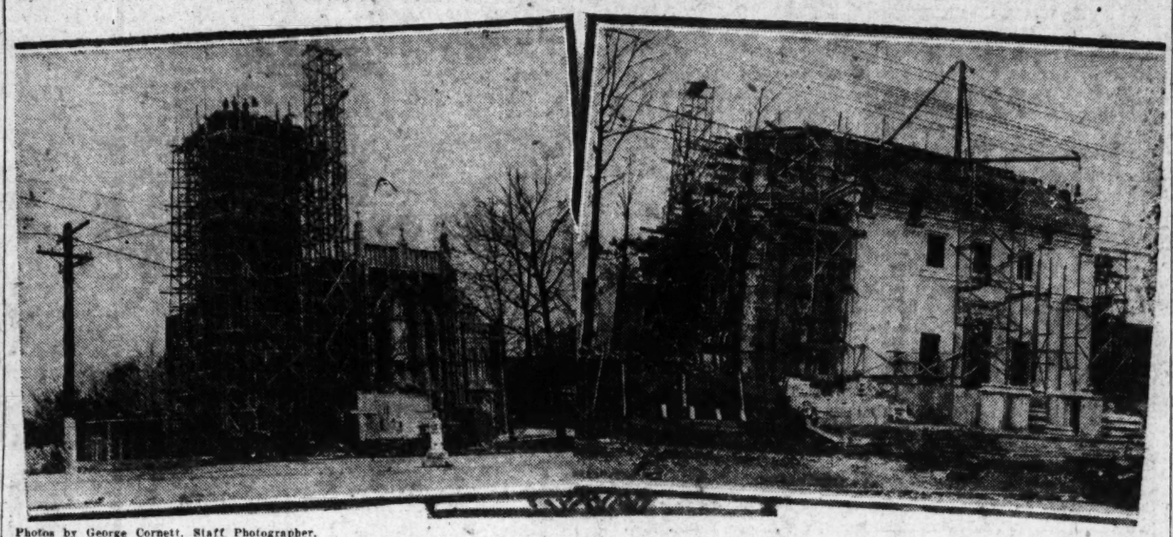

The seriousness of the situation is shown by the fact that a large party in the church today is urging the bishops to call a convocation, give canonical approval of the new book and order the bishops to enforce it on the clergy, thus defying parliament.

G. M. A. CADETS ARE GIVEN WELCOME AT CUBAN PALACE

Havana, December 17.—(AP)—Fifty cadets of Georgia Military academy were received at the Cuban National palace today by Commandant Gali Mendez, who welcomed them in the name of President Machado.

The cadets who arrived here yesterday, aboard a Cuban cruiser, were accompanied by their band and basketball team, which has a game scheduled here for tomorrow night.

Architectural Beauty Being Added To City By Church Edifices Now Nearing Completion

Two new church edifices nearing completion, which will help to enhance Atlanta's structural beauty. To the left is the huge Peachtree Christian church, on Peachtree street, at the Spring street intersection. It is of Gothic architectural lines and will be another show-place of Atlanta. On the right is the massive Druid Hills Baptist church structure, on the southeast corner of Ponce de Leon and Highland avenues. The edifice approaches the Byzantine style and will be a center of beauty in this important residential neighborhood.

T. C. Erwin, Jr., Connects With Adams-Cates Co.

T. C. ERWIN, JR.

T. C. Erwin, Jr., who recently returned from New York, where he was in the real estate business, has joined the firm of Adams-Cates company to continue his work in this field in Atlanta. Mr. Erwin, who lived in Atlanta until going east, is a popular member of the younger set here and is the son of the vice president of trust officers of the Citizens & Southern bank, Thomas C. Erwin.

Mr. Erwin's five years of experience in New York has prepared him with valuable experience for his affiliation with the large local real estate concern. In New York he handled real estate activities with the firms of Douglas L. Ellam & Co. and later A. G. Walker & Co. Another important asset in his work with Adam-Cates company is to be seen in his wide acquaintance in Atlanta and familiarity with conditions in the local market, having witnessed its development from his earliest days.

Mr. Erwin formed a large circle of friends during his educational activities, which included graduation from Tech High school, two years spent at the United States Naval academy and, later, courses taken at Georgia Tech. He was initiated into the Kappa Alpha fraternity at Georgia Tech.

He will be directly associated with the insurance department of Adams-Cates, but will handle other phases of the work there, particularly real estate sales and leases and loans. In this manner Mr. Erwin will devote his energy to all branches of the fast-growing real estate organization.

The new connection has been marked by many congratulations from friends of Mr. Erwin as well as those of Adams-Cates company, while the connection has elicited expressions of mutual gratification from officials of the firm and Mr. Erwin.

MANY BURGLARIES REPORTED IN CITY

With the Christmas season on, Atlanta's police force was kept unusually busy Saturday answering calls from victims of burglaries, holdups and pickpocket activities. Hold ups of two grocery stores featured the new wave of crime.

A negro burglar was frightened away from the home of Mrs. H. H. Green, at 778 Barnett street, early Saturday night, as he was attempting to climb into a window, which he had jimmied open. He was discovered by Mrs. Green's daughter, who screamed for her parents. They ran into the room in time to see the negro escape.

Apartment Entered.

An apartment of F. R. Neese, at 411 North Jackson street, was entered by a negro early Saturday night, but nothing was taken, as the negro was seen by members of the family and frightened away. The negro was discovered when he turned on a light in the bedroom of Mrs. Neese.

Mrs. O. E. Hickman, of 895 Capitol avenue, reported that her purse containing $4 was taken from her home during the day.

Mrs. G. C. Hoffman, of 178 Ponce de Leon avenue, reported the theft of a quantity of clothing and jewelry.

The home of Mrs. J. Freeman, 824 Washington street, was entered by burglars early Saturday night and $45 and a quantity of clothing was taken.

Police were told that burglars entered 726 Brookline street and escaped with a quantity of clothing early Saturday night.

Grocery Stores Robbed.

Sam Pecher, who operates a grocery at 300 Houston street, was held up in his store by two negroes and robbed of $30 early Saturday night. Call Officers S. B. McGarity and E. W. Ginn were furnished a description of the bandit.

A white bandit entered a Piggly Wiggly grocery store at 836 Juniper street early Saturday night held up Manager C. W. Pitner, of 1009 Lawton avenue, and his helper, Marion Coleman, of 846 Juniper street, and robbed them of $25. Officers Wallace and Holland, who investigated, were given a complete description of the bandit.

Bill Smith, negro, 397 West Mitchell street, was arrested early Saturday night at Broad and Alabama streets by Patrolman J. B. Quinn on the charge of picking one man's pocket and attempting to pick others. Officer Quinn told detectives that he noticed the negro walking suspiciously behind various persons and apparently attempting to rifle their pockets. He succeeded in lifting one pocketbook, he said, and then was taken into custody. The name of the man whose pocketbook was taken was not learned.

MISS EVA W. HILLYER DIES AT RESIDENCE

Miss Eva Walton Hillyer, 71, sister of the late Judge George Hillyer, died late Saturday afternoon at her home, 510 East Howard avenue, Decatur, following an extended illness.

She is survived by three nieces, Mrs. J. D. Cromer, Mrs. Bernard Wolff and Mrs. Alfred C. Newell and two nephews, George Hillyer, Jr., and William H. Hillyer.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by A. S. Turner, in charge.

DECATUR PLANS ORGANIZATION OF MOTOR CLUB

Decatur, Ga., December 17.—An active motor club, with full service both for local members and for passing tourists, is in process of organization in Decatur, following a meeting of prominent automobile owners of DeKalb county at the Hotel Candler on Friday evening. The projected organization will be affiliated both with the American Automobile association and the Georgia State Automobile association.

County Commissioner L. Y. P. Nash, of DeKalb county, presided at the meeting. The principal address was delivered by Leland J. Henderson, of the Atlanta Motor club, who spoke of the service of a motor club.

A committee was named to obtain information relative to the proposed organization to take preliminary steps towards completing the necessity membership, whose minimum was placed at 50, and to report back to a later meeting a suggested place for the central office and information bureau and a list of service stations which might be approved as official. This meeting will be called and final organization perfected as soon as the committee has time to act.

ADAIR'S REPORTS $95,000 IN LEASES

Eight commercial leases of an important character, consummated within the last 60 days by the Adair Realty and Loan company, were announced Saturday by Robin Adair, vice president. The deals aggregate $95,000 in annual rentals and show the maintenance of steadily increasing volume in this branch of the Adair activities.

The transactions announced are as follows:

Leased for J. B. Stewart to the Mavis Bottling Company of America, 271-9 Houston street, bottling plant for chocolate drinks, headquarters Baltimore, Md.

For estate James L. Dickey to the Atlanta Furniture company, four-story and basement building, 87 Broad street, S. W.

For A. L. Curtis to J. M. Cline company, 90 Forsyth street, S. W., wholesale barber and beauty supplies. These are newcomers with home office in Savannah.

For A. D. Schulte, Inc., to M. F. Fried, 2 Walton street, jewelry business.

For R. and L. Arnold to Frank Smith, 76-8 Edgewood avenue, corner Ivy, restaurant.

For Investment Properties, Inc., to Keischian and Albert, 280 Peachtree street, retail rug store.

For John D. Little to Jones & Stewart, 147 Marietta street, body and fender repair shop.

For Rice and Hutchings, to Dr. L. N. Huff, 65-A Peachtree street, optical shop.

TEXAS GIRL BANDIT APPEALS DECISION

La Grange, Texas, December 17. (United News.)—Unless motions for appeal are successful, Rebecca Bradley Rogers—Texas' first co-ed bank robber—must spend the next 14 years in jail.

Five minutes after a jury decided she was guilty today and fixed her penalty at 14 years in prison, her husband, who acted as chief counsel in her defense, announced that a motion for a new trial would be filed and if that is unsuccessful, he would appeal the decision to the supreme court.

Becky, as she was known on the University of Texas campus, took the jury's verdict with poise. She stiffened ever so slightly in her chair when the world "guilty" was read. Then she turned to her husband-lawyer and smiled a faint, forced smile.

"You will be able to change this verdict," she seemed to say in that glance of confidence.

And her husband, who married Becky after accepting the responsibility of defending her, said in reassurance:

"I am confident—both as husband and attorney—the case will be reversed. She never will go to the penitentiary."

Otis Rogers—her husband-counsel—had pleaded with the jury to give her the death penalty or to set her free.

PEACHTREE ARCADE GETS NEW CONCERN

The location of another out-of-town concern in Atlanta featured yesterday's announcement of real estate activities.

M. P. Elliott, of Gainesville, Ga., a distributing agent, has opened quarters at 40 Arcade building, on the lower level. Mr. Elliott was prompted in his move by the distributive facilities of Atlanta.

J. D. Tindall, the attorney, has leased an office at 416 Arcade building, which he will occupy on January 1.

EUGENE V. HAYNES REPORTS HOUSE SALE

In line with continued home sales in the south side of Atlanta is a recent sale announced by Eugene V. Haynes, the owner, to H. Gernazian, of a house and lot at 515 Lakewood avenue for $2,850.

PHYSICIAN DENIES PART IN PETITION TO KENTUCKY CHIEF

Ashland, Ky., December 17.—(AP)—Dr. T. D. Goodman mentioned in associated dispatches from Frankfort as the man who presented the petition to Governor William J. Fields on which a pardon was issued to S. G. Adkins for the alleged murder of Nathan Deusch here on September 22, in a formal statement today denied he sent the petition to the governor or had anything to do with it whatsoever. This denial was corroborated by a statement issued and signed by Mr. Fields today.

In Dr. Goodman's statement he said that the first he knew of the petition was when it was shown to him by Adkins and J. J. Porter on December 2.

Adams-Cates Sales Total $1,800,000 for This Year

Real estate sales transactions that account for a significant portion of activities in that branch of Atlanta's property market during the year now drawing to a close were apparent with announcement Saturday of sales aggregating approximately $1,800,000 handled by the Adams-Cates company during 1927.

That the past year was notable primarily for the number of large transactions consummated is another factor which coincides with an analysis of Adams-Cates company sales activity. Evidence that this company, which has grown to be one of the foremost brokerages in Atlanta, has been prominent among those setting the pace in this aspect of the 1927 real estate market is seen in its role in the sale of the Walton building, sale of the Chevrolet plant site, the Studebaker building, the corner of Williams and Cain streets and other important deals.

At the same time the company's large volume of smaller sales and residential sales demands an important position in this phase of the 1927 market of Atlanta's entire metropolitan area. In spite of the fact that Adams-Cates' residential sales department has been in operation slightly more than one year, its volume of activities for this year carry it into the van. Under guidance of Earle Greene, sales manager, supported by the staff members, Rudolph Geissler, W. T. Johnson, Roger F. Stuart and W. Hoke Blair, the department has struck a stride during its initial year that insures its prominent position for the future.

That activities in the residential sales department during the year have reached a plane of prosperity that can be depended upon with confidence by officials of the company and one calling for natural expansion, already in need, is suggested in Mr. Greene's statement that two salesmen will be added to the department shortly after the first of the new year.

"The increased demands for residential property, evident even during the conditions peculiar to the pre-Christmas period, make these additions to the department advisable," Mr. Greene pointed out. "While, when we view the fresh prosperity that it is conceded will be ushered in with 1928 in all lines of business, this expansion becomes a necessity." In predicting the highly favorable conditions for the coming year, Mr. Greene turned to his figures for a sound basis. He noted the steady trend of increased sales volume in the residential department.

In reviewing this sales list a few of the outstanding residential sales of the year were recalled, including the following:

Handsome residence on Brookhaven drive, from T. L. Stokes to J. E. Warren; 37 Palisades road, from Stoney Drake to Charles A. Rawson; large dwelling on Habersham road, from W. H. S. Hamilton to Chris A. Rawshenberg; 992 Oakdale road, in Druid Hills, from U. B. Burkett to W. M. Morris; Peachtree road residence, from Rogers Realty company to Fred Geisler; 1152 Oxford road, from Mrs. A. B. Springer to Mrs. Ralph Herzog; 3 Fairview road, from B. E. Yancey to Benjamin Elsas; 14 Vernon drive, from L. C. Dulaney to Hugh Hodgson; 1002 Lullwater road, from R. H. Potter to G. H. Schoen; residence belonging to the Austell estate, to Mrs. Frank Boykin; 971 Ponce de Leon avenue, for estate of K. H. Gumm to Dr. DeLos Hill; 1230 Fairview road, for Franklin Mortgage company to Charles H. Cone, and 218 Fifteenth street, in Ansley Park, for J. H. Byrley to Colonel Carpenter.

Included in the large list of residential sales for the year are a series of north side building lots and acreage, as well as numerous small homes and investment parcels on the south side of Atlanta, sold for the Mortgage Bond company, of New York, which Adams-Cates company represents in Atlanta.

George T. Warren Plans New Home In Druid Hills

George T. Warren, head of the Shannon Refrigerator company, has begun the construction of a residence at Ponce de Leon avenue and Springdale road, in Druid Hills.

It will be of brick construction and will cost $20,000. It will occupy a large lot which is part of the former home place of Forrest Adair.

Newly Discovered Comet to Appear Sunday Evening

BY JOHN STEELE.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and the Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 17.—The Christmas comet is expected to come into view in the western sky tomorrow evening. Though not a great comet, it is the brightest that has appeared for 15 years. Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard college observatory, said in his lecture at the American Museum of Natural History on Thursday night that it might have a tail three or four degrees long—or it might not. "You never can tell how a comet will behave," he reminded his hearers.

The comet bears the name of the Australian amateur, Skjellerup, who discovered it not so many days ago.

AUCTION

Tuesday, December 20th

BEGINNING promptly at 11 o'clock. We will sell for the high dollar, No. 741 Frederica St., also adjoining lot. The location of this property is second to none, near the 1050 Ponce de Leon Apartments. Just the right distance from the car line, being between Ponce de Leon Avenue and St. Charles Avenue. The lot being 60x300 feet deep with a 12-foot alley in the rear, and on both sides. The ten-room house is well constructed and has all conveniences.

AT 2 P. M.
SAME DAY

WE will sell property known as 288 Marietta St., fronting Marietta St. 45 feet, extending back to W. & A. R. R. This lot has a two-story building with foundation so constructed that it will carry two additional stories. We consider this location good. The owner says sell the above property for the high dollar, and that's what we are going to do. Do not get the hours confused. Remember, the sale of Frederica Street begins promptly at 11 A. M. and Marietta Street at 2 P. M.

More than a help to the man with the oil can

WESTINGHOUSE motors, equipped with Sealed-Sleeve Bearings, operate without bearing trouble under the most severe dust conditions—even in the grinding air of foundries and machine shops. Sealed-Sleeve housings are dust-tight—grit can't get in to cut the bearing, oil must stay in to lubricate it. Oiling is reduced; worn bearings become the exception rather than the rule; shorted windings, soaked with oil thrown from the bearing, are eliminated.

Insist upon motors equipped with Sealed-Sleeve Bearings, which combine all the time-tried sleeve bearing advantages with an improved dust-tight structure.

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Continuation of the recent buying movement caused rallies from an opening decline in the cotton market today but there was considerable week-end realizing and prices reacted later. January sold up from 18.78 to 19 cents, a net advance of 11 points and a new high for the movement, but closed at 18.88, the general market closing steady, net 4 points higher to 1 point lower.

The opening was unchanged to 10 points lower, active months showing net losses of 8 to 11 points in the first few minutes under profit-taking by recent buyers, together with local and southern selling, probably promoted by the failure of Liverpool to fully meet yesterday's local advance. Offerings were readily absorbed by covering and trade buying, however, and the market firmed up during the forenoon, when the demand seemed to be encouraged by reports of a better demand for cotton goods. March advanced from 18.99 to 19.18 and May from 19.11 to 19.33, net gains of about 9 to 13 points on active months and advances of about 100 to 110 points from the low levels last Tuesday. At these figures realizing increased and prices worked back to about yesterday's closing figures in the later trading.

The fact that week-end realizing was not heavier at the start, considering the extent of the recent advance, no doubt contributed to the midmorning rally, as it was taken to indicate that the market's technical position had not been materially weakened by recent buying. Houses with Liverpool and London connections were credited with buying here in the early trading, but the demand from abroad tapered off later. The decline was accompanied by rumors that spot demand was less active but nothing definite developed in that connection, and local brokers attributed most of the selling to realizing, although there was some selling of March and May, supposedly in the way of hedging.

Private cables said there had been covering, trade calling and continental buying in the Liverpool market, adding that fair cloth sales had been reported for India, and that the Shanghai auctions showed a better tone.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 170,000 bales, against 192,000 last year.

MARKET ACTIVE WITH FLUCTUATIONS.

New Orleans, December 17.—(AP)—The cotton market was fairly active for a short Saturday session today with rather wide price fluctuations. Following an opening decline the market rallied on trade buying and January contracts which had sold down to 18.82, eight points net down, rallied to 19.05, but eased off in the final trading and closed at 18.94, four points up for the day. The general market closed steady at a net advance of 2 to 8 points.

Liverpool cables were lower than due but the market here opened unchanged to 3 points down. As New York eased off in sympathy with Liverpool the local market turned downward soon after the start and January sold off to 18.82, and May 19.12, six to 8 points down.

Prices rallied later on week-end covering and moderate trade buying promoted by more favorable advices from the cotton goods market. January traded to 19.05 and May 19.34, 22 to 23 points over the lows and 15 to 16 points above the previous close.

The advance attracted considerable week-end realizing and although the undertone continued steady the market gradually eased off until January traded down to 18.94 and May 19.26, closing 8 to 11 points under the highs.

Exports for the day totaled 28,662 bales.

Market Gossip

News From Wall Street and New York Editorial Comment

Furnished by Fenner & Beane.

NEW YORK EVENING SUN.

Although several issues that were in the van of yesterday's advance did no more than mark time, today's stock market was generally buoyant. The rails, which were moving steadily forward yesterday, continued ahead, several of them topping the week's lows by 5 points or more. Both United States Steel and General Motors were resting after their strenuous climb to new high levels for the movement, but many minor industrials were strong and the oils, coppers and merchandising shares contributed substantial gains.

No group made a better collective showing than the oils. Nearly all of them moved substantially higher, with Mariand, General Asphalt and Sinclair in particularly good demand. Another sharp upturn in Greene Cananea bringing it to a new high above 120, diverted attention from the more modest gains by the other coppers. The mail order shares, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward, were leading the merchandising issues, both sold at new highs.

Individual features of the industrial and other groups included several of the motor shares, Hudson and Yellow Truck in particular; Pacific Gas and Electric, Texas Gulf and American Can. Wright Aero was weak selling below 80 for a loss of more than 15 points from its recent high.

WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Stocks wound up the week with a further burst of strength. New highs on the movement were reached in many sections of the list, and the whole market was characterized by a buoyant tone.

Vigorous buying activities proceeded in special groups. Oils were stimulated by a price advance in Pennsylvania Crude, the second in a few weeks. Sinclair was again taken in large blocks, strengthening the belief that important interests were buying into the company.

Merchandising shares continued to respond to the outlook for record Christmas business as a result of high wages throughout the country and the greatly improved purchasing power of rural communities. Montgomery Ward reached record prices and there were advances in Sears Roebuck and Woolworth.

Perhaps the most powerful influence in the impressive strength of the general list was the persistent ease of credit. Many borrowers were able to carry stocks over Sunday on 3 3-4 per cent money against a rate of 5 per cent to 5 1-2 per cent at this time last year. This comfortable situation heightened bullish enthusiasm and practically eliminated recent fears regarding the effects of the gold movement.

STOCK OPINIONS.

Fenner & Beane—Everything points to a satisfactory trading market in securities at least for the immediate future.

Hervey Fisk & Sons—The stock market is in an upward trend that is not likely to be checked until the reinvestment demand is spent in January.

Prince & Whitely—The retail list shows indications of important accumulations and appears to be ready for a rise.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, December 17.—Pig iron prices are lower in the Pittsburgh district, but the market is active, inquiries varying from 500 to 5,000 tons. Monongahela Iron & Steel has bought 2,500 tons of Bessemer iron at $17.50 a ton, a decline of 25 cents a ton. A. M. Byers company is understood to have placed its Bessemer tonnage at the same price. National Radiator wants 5,000 tons of foundry iron.

Philadelphia Dairy Products company, subsidiary of United States Dairy Products corporation, has acquired Russ Brothers Ice Cream company, Harrisburg, Pa., adding three major operating companies to the eastern chain in the last week. Other recent acquisitions were L. W. Robbins company, Newark, N. J., and the Friese Ice Cream company, Reading, Pa. A new marketing plan has been developed by the Philadelphia company and manufacture will be centralized in the main plant in Philadelphia.

Latest estimates of American Locomotive company's earnings for the second half of the year are around $3 a share compared with $1.48 a share in the first half, or more than $4 for 1927. The company earned $8.16 a share in 1926.

Preliminary estimates on total value of construction contracts let in the United States for 1927, indicating that the industry is holding to the $7,000,000,000 line, says Engineering News-Record. Engineering construction contracts the last week were valued at $30,630,000 against $38,155,000 a year ago. Awards on heavy construction operations to date this year totaled $3,107,941,000 against $2,791,810,000 in the corresponding 1926 period.

Northern New Jersey Clearing House association reports clearings of $57,288,471 for the week ended December 16, against $42,716,461 the week before and $35,250,665 a year ago.

Missouri State Life Insurance company shortly will launch an extensive advertising campaign through leading daily newspapers in 60 key cities over a period of eight weeks. In the last 10 months the company has added new business at the rate of two and a half millions dollars a week.

Keen competition in the bottle making industry will be reflected, it is said, in 1927 net profit being figured between $4,750,000, or around $6 a share on the ground. Earnings for the year before were $7.08 a share exclusive of the proceeds from sale of stock interest in Hazel-Atlas Glass company.

Total stock sales, 1,603,200 shares.

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Heavy accumulation of the copper shares in further reflection of improving trade conditions lifted nearly all active members of that group to their highest prices in years in today's brief session of the market. Some irregularity developed in the general list as a result of heavy week-end profit taking, but the line of lease resistance was unmistakably upward, the average of 20 leading industrials again reaching a new record. Trading was conducted at a terrific pace, total sales for the two hours running about 1,603,200 shares, establishing a new Saturday record.

Easy Money Expected.

Despite the fears of a credit stringency aroused in some quarters by heavy exports of gold from the United States in the last few weeks, operators for the rise expressed confidence that no immediate tightening of rates was in prospect, emphasizing the stability and ease of the call money market this week in the face of a heavy mid-month turnover of funds and large withdrawals of currency in anticipation of holiday requirements. The improvement shown in the basic industries also was stressed as a "bull" factor.

Much of today's realizing probably was inspired by commission house advices, suggesting that the recent advance was too rapid and that the market was entitled to a breathing spell. This was particularly apparent in U. S. Steel common and General Motors, each of which ran up over 3 points yesterday, but closed today at net declines of 1 3-8 and 3-4, respectively.

Greene Cananea Leads.

Greene Cananea was again the sensational feature in the copper group, soaring 7 1-4 points to a new high record of 133 3-4 or more than 100 points above the year's low, but easing to 130 1-4 on realizing. New peak prices for the year or longer also were attained by Anaconda, Chile, Calumet & Arizona, Nevada and International Nickel.

An increase in Pennsylvania crude prices started a heavy buying movement in oils under the leadership of Sinclair, which advanced 2 3-4 points to 21.

Mercantile stocks were in demand, new highs being attained by Sears-Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and Gotham Silk Hosiery. American Can improved its best price for the year, stimulated by an enormous buying of buying orders and sharp advances were scored by other specials such as International Nickel, Porto Rican Tobacco B and Southern Dairy A.

Airplane Issues Lose.

The aviation issues were under rather heavy pressure, Wright dropping back more than 4 points and Curtiss yielding about 2. Strength of New York tractions featured the public utility group.

Except for a further slight recession in sterling exchange, cables on London being quoted around $4.88 3-16, there were no changes of importance in the foreign exchange market.

The weekly clearing house statement showed excess reserve of $18,281,560, an increase of $186,000 above the week before. Aggregate reserve was $681,675,000. The detailed statement of actual condition this day showed mixed changes. Loans, discounts and investments increased $18,267,000; cash in own vaults, $6,220,000, and reserve in the federal reserve bank of member banks, $78,000. Net demand deposits dropped $591,000 and time deposits, $4,388,000.

THIEF OUT OF LUCK

Hapless Sneak Steals 20 Shoes for Left Feet.

Most burglars and sneak thieves generally "spot" their objects and take only such articles as can be used or disposed of easily, but there is one thief in Atlanta who Saturday took 20 shoes, for left feet only, from the automobile of Irwin Cohen, of 317 Boulevard, while it was parked in a downtown section.

Police are of the opinion that the thief is an "amateur." He also took a fruit cake from the car, which may be of considerable use to him.

Stock Offered.

Stock financing for Loew's Incorporated, one of the largest factors in the motion picture industry, is announced today in the form of an offering of 150,000 shares of $6.50 cumulative preferred stock, priced at $100 per share and accrued dividend to yield 6 1-2 per cent.

Pope Is Pleased That U. S. Cardinals Will Attend Meet

Rome, December 17.—(AP)—Pope Pius today expressed satisfaction that Cardinals Dougherty, of Philadelphia, and Mundelein, of Chicago, would be present at the eucharistic congress next year in Sydney, Australia.

The pope made the comment while receiving in audience Cardinal Bourne, archbishop of Westminster. The pontiff remarked that the presence of the two American cardinals would represent a link between two great modern civilizations on two new continents.

Cardinal Bourne told his holiness that he regretted his inability to attend the congress because of important development that would keep him in England.

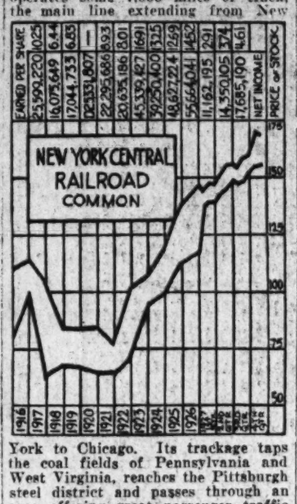

SCHOOL BUS LICENSE TAX IS ABOLISHED

Under a ruling given Saturday to the secretary of state by Attorney General George M. Napier, school busses transporting children to and from school will not be required to pay a license fee. In giving the decision Mr. Napier stated, "The law does not specify that school busses shall be required to pay license fees and the policy of the law is not to exact taxes from political subdivisions of the state."

RAIL EARNINGS NEAR 1926 PEAK

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Earnings of the New York Central railroad have fluctuated rather widely but in the fourth quarter of this year need reach only $3.26 a share to make the total equal to the previous peak net earnings of 1926, which were $55,664,041, or $14.52 per share.

With its subsidiaries, the company operates some 7,000 miles of track, the main line extending from New York to Chicago. Its trackage taps the coal fields of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, reaches the Pittsburgh steel district and passes through an area offering great passenger traffic possibilities.

About two-thirds of the revenue freight tonnage is derived from connecting lines. Total tonnage is dependent upon business conditions within territory served, but has shown a general increase with mine products assuming an increasing proportion. Bituminous coal supplied 35 per cent last year.

The company has about 62,000 stockholders, more than 40,000 of them employees.

CHAMBERLIN PLANS FLIGHT TO EUROPE AND BACK AGAIN

Providence, R. I., December 17.—(AP)—The Providence Tribune says that Clarence D. Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flier, on his arrival here today announced he would attempt a round trip flight to Europe. Chamberlin was en route to Pawtucket to inspect a prospective site for an airplane factory.

On his next flight which will not be in the immediate future, he will use a ship equipped to land on water, he said.

Chamberlin is interested in the establishment of a factory for the manufacture of small planes to be equipped with a motor developed by one of his associates in the project, Charles B. Kirkham, former chief engineer of the Curtiss Airplane factory.

BANDITS VISIT STORE, TAKE WATCH AND $34

Negro bandits obtained loot of $34, a valuable watch and $7 worth of cigarettes from M. Gordon, proprietor of a store at 194 Harris street, N. W., according to police reports Saturday.

Gold Shipment of $7,500,000 to London Is Most Important Development of Week in Wall Street.

New York, December 17.—This week's most important development from Wall street's viewpoint was the shipment of $7,500,000 gold to London following a steadily increasing outflow of the yellow metal beginning in a very small way three months ago. It is now perfectly obvious that the outflow of gold is the result of the understanding reached by federal reserve officials at the conference held here last summer with foreign bankers as to how the money market here, at London and elsewhere was to be handled.

High officials of the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Germany, some of whom had never before been in this country, did not make the journey across the Atlantic last summer to arrive at an important decision regarding the international movement of gold which would be reversed as soon as the object of the conference began to be accepted. Hence, Wall street appears to be justified in reaching its conclusion that we are going to lose more gold. With this conclusion reached Wall street's first thought was reflected in the question wildly asked this week, How will continued gold exports affect the stock market?

U. S. Flush With Gold.

Wise business men and bankers on both sides of the Atlantic not in the confidence of those holding the conference of bankers held here last summer are confident that from the long viewpoint of this country it is right for us to be sending out gold. We have more than we need or than is good for us; other countries need gold to reestablish currencies or finance improving domestic or foreign trade, the benefits of which we will share with the rest of the world. Some individuals may profit by hanging to the tail of the world's trade kite, which will fly higher as a result of the gold we are now sending out. That, however, despite what "Big Bill Thompson" and some of his followers are saying, is a small matter compared with improvement in the world situation as a whole. Admitting that our motive in sending out gold is one of self-interest we are doing the right thing in helping ourselves by helping others. There is no other way of looking at our gold exports.

But just the same there are grounds for doubting those who are saying that our credit structure will not be disturbed by gold exports, meaning, using plain English, that the outward flow of gold will result in no deflation.

Any disturbance to our credit structure by gold exports, it is being explained, will be offset by expansion in reserve bank obligations.

Used to Pay Debts.

In discussing the results to our credit structure of the outward flow of gold now under way one high authority in our banking circles was quoted this week as saying:

"Fortunately bankers and business men have used the incoming gold mainly to pay debts rather than to contract fresh ones and the slate is clean." What this means is that the member banks paid off their heavy borrowings from the Federal Reserve banks with business men paying off their loans to the member banks.

Loans made by member banks at the federal reserve banks, a matter of public record, are practically nothing compared to the high record rediscounts of only a few years ago. It is also a matter of common knowledge that corporations and business men in this country have never had so much free working capital.

But just the same during the past six years the individual deposits of the banks throughout the country have increased $16,000,000,000. If the figures mean anything they mean that banks and business men have not altogether used the incoming gold to pay debts without contracting new ones, believing their slates clean.

It is perfectly natural for a bank to want to keep loaned up. Borrowings of member banks from the federal reserve banks are comparatively small and so are the commercial loans made by member banks to corporations and business men. When we begin to look around, however, to see if everybody's slate is clean we find some $4,000,000,000 outstanding credits on installment merchandising; some $4,000,000,000 credits in the form of brokers' loans, a very large amount of outstanding credit in the form of loans made against real estate mortgages. These items can only mean that we are not free of credit inflation.

There is no question but that member banks can go back to the federal reserve banks by increasing their rediscounts. This, however, will mean that the member banks are again making loans that were paid off when gold was coming into the country, with such borrowings starting from a credit level higher by at least $16,000,000,000 than it was before the big inflow of gold started.

If we continue to ship out gold it is safe to predict what is going to happen. Loans made against real estate are for a fixed period. On the other hand every large amount of outstanding credit in the form of brokers' loans is subject to call any day. The long continued upward movement in the stock market has been based on the country's surplus credit resulting from our greatly increased gold holdings. If this surplus credit is skimmed off as a result of the gold now going out of the country it is safe to predict that the stock market is going to get the first back-kick through the callings of loans by the banks secured by stock exchange collateral.

If gold exports continue forcing the member banks to go to the federal reserve banks to rediscount it will only be a question of time until the federal reserve banks, which reduced their rediscount rate last summer from 4 per cent to 3 1-2 per cent, reverse the action of last summer by advancing their rediscount rates. An advance in the rediscount rate would undo what was done last summer in promoting gold exports and it would also act as a check against inflation based on resumed borrowings by the member banks from the federal reserve banks.

RUMANIA OFFERS TO AID CHURCHES DAMAGED IN RIOT

Cluj, Ruminia, December 17.—(AP) M. Lapedatu, minister of religions, today offered $16,000 to Jewish communities here for the restoration of synagogues devastated by rioting students earlier in the month.

The communities showed him evidence that the sum was insufficient for the purpose and M. Lapedatu promised that more money was forthcoming.

NEGRO STUDENTS PLAN CHRISTMAS CONCERT

Christmas carols will be sung Wednesday evening in a concert to be given by the students of Spelman and Morehouse colleges in the Sisters' chapel at the entrance of the Spelman grounds. The concert will start at 8 o'clock and will include fine old Christmas songs of England, France, Germany and Russia, followed by a group of negro spirituals. The program will close with the inspiring "Adeste Fidelis."

Rabbi Abraham Hirmes Reelected and Honored By His Congregation

Rabbi Abraham P. Hirmes was unanimously reelected spiritual leader of the Congregational Ahavath Achim and high tribute was paid his splendid work during his nine years with the Congregation by the leading members of his flock on Sunday afternoon, December 10.

Joe Goldberg, president of the congregation; Joel Dorfan, now honorary life president and for the past 30 years active president of the congregation; J. Paradies, president of the board of education of the congregation; J. Jacobs, trustee of the congregation and president of the Montefeare relief; Morris Freedman, prominent business man and the proud possessor of the "golden key" to the synagogue and a trustee of the congregation; Sam Gershon, the first chairman of the building committee and relief-bearer to sufferers in Europe during the world war; A. Edison, Captain R. Willner and Joel Goldstein, head teacher of the Bible classes, were speakers paying high tribute to the work of Rabbi Hirmes.

Rabbi Hirmes is a graduate of the "Slobotker Yesheva," famous rabbinical seminary in Europe, and also a graduate of the Isaac Elchanon Theological seminary of New York, now largest seminary in the world. He is a member of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of America and Canada, member of the Mzrachi organization, orthodox branch of the Zionist organization; a national director of the ex-Patients' home in Denver; a national director of the Union of Orthodox Congregations of America, a director of Montiferoe relief, and a director of the Keren Hyesod and other local organizations.

ELKS WILL STAGE CHRISTMAS TREE FEATURE SATURDAY

One of the most elaborate Christmas tree programs ever held by members of the local Elks club will take place at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, December 24, at the Georgia theater, according to announcements from lodge officials.

Exalted Ruler J. Turner Fitten has appointed the following members of the Atlanta Lodge No. 78, B. P. O. E., to handle the Christmas tree entertainment; W. A. Jones, chairman; Al Dunn, R. E. Lee Reynolds, W. T. Jordan, J. G. Hardy, G. Allen Maddox, Leslie Hubbard and W. J. Auten.

An unusually large number of calls for presents has forced the Elks to confine the distribution to those names that have been sent in and approved and it is announced that no package can be distributed except to holders of tickets issued by the order.

Contributions and gifts have already been received by the Elks headquarters to assure that more than 1,200 packages will be delivered to destitute children in the city.

MAJOR PENDLETON DIES IN CAROLINA

Atlanta friends have learned with regret of the recent death in Elizabeth City, N. C., of Major Andrew Lewis Pendleton, world war veteran and former commandant of the R. O. T. C. unit at Georgia Tech.

Major Pendleton never fully recovered from the effects of a gas attack in the autumn of 1917 in the world war. He served on the staff of General C. R. Edwards, of the twenty-sixth division.

He leaves his widow; a daughter Mary Jane Pendleton; a sister, Mrs. C. H. Godwin, and a brother, Morris Pendleton.

Units of Army To Precede Navy In All Parades

Apparently the United States navy is more thoroughly imbued with the spirit of courtesy than its brother-branch of the service, the army. That is, according to a recent order of the joint army-navy board as to precedence of the two organizations in parades where units from both take part.

Casual scrutiny of the approved order of march for occasions when the gobs, doughboys and leathernecks take a specified time to pass a given point, shows that, in any Alphonse-Gaston argument, the sea forces have far the better of it over the foot slogging battalions of the land.

The order of march for all occasions, given out last week by headquarters of the fourth corps area here as the result of recommendations of the joint board in Washington, should be as follows:

1. Cadets of the Military academy at West point; 2, Midshipment from Annapolis; 3, the regular army; 4, United States marines; 5, United States naval forces; 6, national guard and naval reserve organiations which have been federally recognized (these come national guard first and naval reserve second), and, finally, other organizations of the organized reserve, national guard, naval militia and training units in whatever order the grand marshal of the parade deems best.

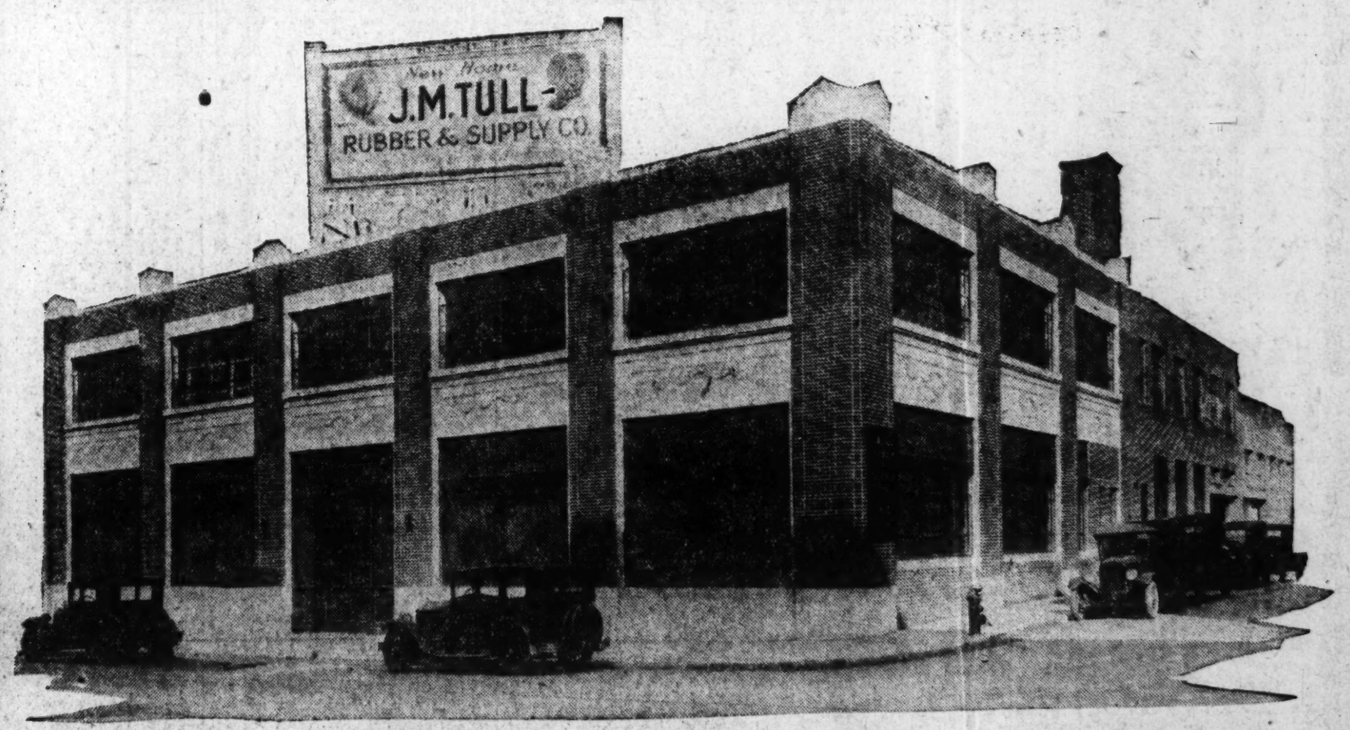

Psychology Lecture.

"Self Control and Success" will be the subject of the lecture in practical psychology to be given Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel.

J. M. Tull Rubber & Supply Company Is Now Located In Handsome New Building at 285 Marietta Street

J. M. TULL
President
J. M. Tull Rubber and Supply Co.

Square Dealing, Quality Merchandise Builders Of Its Wide Clientele

Founded in Modest Way in 1915, Tull Company's Business Witnesses Steady and Phenomenal Growth.

In the spring of 1915 J. M. Tull, a young man with some experience in the rubber goods line, decided to go into business for himself. And after looking over several southern cities he selected Atlanta for a place to feature mechanical and industrial rubber goods, and a small location at 84 N. Pryor street was secured.

Mr. Tull first opened his door with a small stock of goods and a large stock of faith in his goods, his now adopted city, and with the confidence of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company, of Akron, who were willing to back him, and he began to grow from his first month in business.

For the next six years steady progress was made, both in the volume of business transacted and the good will of satisfied customers, and Mr. Tull saw that a larger building was necessary if they would take care of their ever-growing trade. In 1921 a new building was built on the old Orpheum theatre site at 150 Marietta street and at that time it was thought it would be large enough to take care of all future business.

But Mr. Tull and his efficient sales force were more than selling good merchandise during the past six years, they were surveying their own trade territory and anticipating what rubber and mill supplies people could use in this section if they were apprised of its practicability and money-saving advantages, and with all this building increased good will, until space again became an important factor if they would keep up with their trade, and now comes the main reason for this story.

This month a new building as shown on this page, located at the corner of Marietta and Earle streets becomes the permanent home for the J. M. Tull Rubber company. This building facing 100 feet on Marietta street and running back 170 feet on Earle street is not only substantial in every detail but is ornamental to Marietta street and a splendid acquisition to Atlanta.

The owners feel that they were wise in selecting Robert and company to draft the plans and engineer this building, and they say that they were also fortunate in having Padgett Sutton in building it. Both of these firms were vitally interested in pleasing the owner, and Mr. Jones, superintendent of construction, carefully inspected all material and supervised the work so that all materials and workmanship were of the very best.

Many other property owners on Marietta street have highly complimented Mr. Tull for the good his handsome building will bring to Marietta street, which is on the main Dixie highway and one of the most popular and best traveled streets in the entire south.

With triple the amount of floor space, this firm has added many additional lines including Youngstown steel pipe and they have modern shop for cutting and threading in the rear part of the building. They have also added Jones & Laughlin shafting in a great variety of sizes, and after January first will have a modern leather belt shop, equipped for the purpose of making leather belts and specialties for the textile mills who are rapidly realizing the importance of locating in this part of the country.

During the past 12 years many strong connections have been made with manufacturers of fine machine tools, belting of every description, transmission appliances and all necessary supplies that enter into the successful maintenance of progressive industries in the southland.

In order to appreciate the buying power of this firm a solid car of one line of goods, rubber belting, was unloaded last week. Guess these folks mean to live up to their slogan which is "Belting headquarters for the southeast."

While Mr. Tull is still a young man he has been most fortunate to associate with him men and women of the highest type and he feels that in a large measure much of his success is due to their faithful cooperation, and he has a plan worked out by which certain faithful employees can acquire an interest in the business and, of course, share in its profits, and he states that in his judgment this idea of rewarding the faithful co-worker is a good basis for a successful business.

Mr. Tull and his force unite in saying that they appreciate the trade and confidence reposed in them by their thousands of friends and customers all over the southeast and that they are now getting ready a formal mail announcement and handsome calender to send out with a cordial invitation to visit the J. M. Tull Rubber company in their new home and see for themselves what cooperation has made possible.

ATLANTA'S SMOKE NUISANCE.

Smoking chimneys belch sooty-laden clouds of stifling fumes into the atmosphere until Miss Atlanta coughs and strangles, until her complexion becomes dirt encrusted and her dress is ruined almost beyond repair.

This city, otherwise high in the records of the nation as a health resort, makes a bad showing in the prevalence of throat troubles.

Her buildings, with few exceptions, are blackened and disfigured by accretions of carbon.

Her streets are so frequently sprinkled with smoke that visitors, vowing anathema upon the sticky specks of smut, carry tales of the dirt-laden air back to their distant homes.

And all because some of Atlanta's citizens are so short-sighted in their selfishness that they cannot, or will not, see the damage they do, not only to their neighbors and to their city, but to themselves as well.

Many corporate and individual citizens have already installed smoke consumers upon their chimney stacks. They have found the modern appliance effective in preventing smoke, and in conserving fuel. They have found savings in fuel costs and in building maintenance have more than repaid the initial expense.

But others have not yet had the good sense or the consideration for others to impel them to install these important consumers. As a consequence the good that one man's thoughtfulness does is offset by the selfishness of his neighbor. It is discouraging to the man who has done his part by eliminating the smoke nuisance from his own chimneys, to see a heavy pall of black, sooty smoke descending upon his property because his neighbor has not the same civic pride, that same neighborly decency that he has.

In some cities it is against the law to operate chimneys without smoke consumers within the city limits. It should not be necessary to enact a written law in Atlanta.

The innate decency of Atlantans ought to be sufficient law to promptly remedy this disgraceful condition.

Modern smoke consumers are of such perfection in operation that there can be no legitimate excuse for any man to continue to operate a chimney nuisance in any part of the city.

Do away with the smoke and Atlanta will be cured of her bad coughing habits, complexions will be prettier, clothes will last longer, dispositions will be sweeter. Buildings will be cleaner and property deterioration will be slower.

Atlanta should be cured of the smoke-habit. Because it is unnecessary, obnoxious and is a confession of incompetence that no local business man should permit to continue.

THE OLD-TIME FIRESIDE.

Darkening skies of winter evenings bring their own happiness. Blessings peculiar to the fireside and the home circle, which, unfortunately, have seemed in danger of passing into the limbo of memory, are revived with the return of the season of the year when out-of-doors lessens its lure.

Rain and cold know no terrors for the man or woman who has learned to enjoy the delights of home. What care have we for the storms that may rage without, when father, mother and the youngsters gather round the open fire after the evening meal is done and exchange comment upon the happenings of each one's day?

Home, too frequently, in this day of constant amusement enterprise and easy travel, becomes merely the place where we sleep and, occasionally, eat. Where we rush between amusements to change our clothes and collect mail and messages.

Deep happiness clings around the pictured memories of childhood, when father sat and wisely, amusingly and kindly discussed the problems of youth and the sorrow of adolescence.

A return to the home fireside with all it implies would mean the salvation of many modern homes, would reduce the number of broken family circles, decrease the demand for the divorce court and save many of the coming men and women from the devastating effects of modern wild life.

And surely, with phonograph, radio, books, music and all the multitudinous advantages available for the home of today, it should not be difficult to make the fireside at least as attractive as the roadhouse.

ADVERTISING, A BUILDER.

One of the most outstanding advertising experts in the world is Bruce Barton, of New York.

He spends around $50,000,000 a year putting trade marks on the tips of the tongue of the American people.

He is a publicity standardizer. He writes most of the copy himself. He is versatile and dynamic. He is forceful through his simplicity of style, and through the selling power of his epigrams. He was director of publicity for the United States' overseas Y. M. C. A. during the world war.

He has written for nearly all of the standard magazines of this country.

His biography of Jesus Christ, the Savior of Mankind, attracted world-wide attention. He did more in one series of human-interest stories of the Son of God to "sell" Christianity to the people than any other man since the story of Calvary was first written.

The New York Sun recently published a remarkable interview with Bruce Barton on advertising as a builder of prosperity—an analysis of a new day in advertising and a new order of things by which a "niggardly, penny-pinching thrift" has yielded to broad expansion in simple, truthful, forceful publicity as the best investment that can be made in any and in all lines of trade and industry. Without such an investment, commensurate with the volume of trade that can be turned over by any firm or corporation during a year, he is very frank to say stagnation will follow.

The Constitution, with the consent of the New York Sun, is reprinting today this very gripping and entertaining interview in which this famous expert in trade building declares that in 1928 this nation will spend a billion dollars in advertising, and perhaps $100,000,000 more than a billion. It is not only worth reading. It has an educational appeal that almost impels every business man, every mercantile executive, every buyer of space and writer of copy, to read it.

Advertising is a science. Bruce Barton is an advertising scientist. What he says rings as true as the needle to the pole. To read it is to profit, for the shrewd business man engraves a name upon the memory of the public.

REMUS "TRIAL" A FARCE.

The trial of George Remus in Cincinnati for first degree murder, in which the accused is conducting his own defense, is a travesty upon court procedure.

The hysterical ravings of the defendant, which occur every day, would not be permitted in the courts of any other country in the world.

His attacks upon the prosecutors, and his snarling, bulldog demeanor, should have disqualified him from acting as his own attorney weeks ago.

For four weeks the case has dragged, with daily "scenes" that have attracted great crowds of the sordidly curious who feed upon sensations.

"Experts" of one kind and another have been employed by both sides to "testify" as their employment required.

Of all testimony in criminal trials that is farcical it is so-called "expert testimony." It is not difficult to employ an "expert" to testify that white is black. Most "experts" are engaged just as attorneys are.

Character assassination, alleged corruption, violent allegations of perjury, personal abuse, attempts at free-for-all fights, and all of the other farcical features that might be expected in a mock trial in a madhouse, have featured this whole Remus proceeding.

If such a case had been before a criminal court in England, or in any other country in Europe, the defendant would either have been convicted and hung before this, or acquitted and turned loose.

It is a reflection upon the good name of America that such a farce as that of this so-called trial of Remus should be permitted in any temple of justice in this country.

The last act to date in the "trial" is the most farcical of all—that of citing the defendant for contempt but deferring the imposing of penalty until after the curtain rings down.

It is hoped such a mockery in the administration of criminal justice may never occur again in this country.

PAYING WITHOUT GOING.

In this issue is a communication from Robert Powell, of Cornelia, telling of the experience of his party in motoring to Fort Valley by the "nearer good road," thereby leaving the pavement at Barnesville, and negotiating the shorter route by Culloden and Roberta, which state highway, with temporary pavement, he was assured was in "good order."

It is interesting, and illustrates first the fallacy of a patch-work system, and second the enormous expense upon motorists that is exacted by the "dry weather road," which, although enormously expensive to the state to maintain, is frequently almost, if not entirely, impassable in rainy weather. In the trip referred to by Mr. Powell the automobile had to be abandoned in the mud while refuge was sought in a farm house, and sleep obtained "on a mattress on the floor," for which hotel prices were charged. The farmer in question had abandoned his fields for the roadside where greater revenues were secured by "pulling tourists out of the mud."

There are several hundred miles of so-called paved roads in Georgia that are today almost impassable, following a few hours of light rain. Automobiles reaching Atlanta from all sections of the state are covered in mud. On the Dixie highway, north of Atlanta, several automobiles are stuck and temporarily abandoned in sections. Visitors to the city from Perry, Macon and intermediate points along the 140-mile stretch of concrete from Perry to Marietta find motoring a pleasure, because the pavement has been connected. There are other short stretches of pavement, as from Newnan, as an illustration, that affords pleasing motoring into Atlanta. But these constitute but an infinitesimal part of Georgia's system of 7,000 miles of state highways.

A road that is not an all-weather road is not acceptable. However good it may be in good weather if it is impassable or hazardous in bad weather it cannot be counted as a "good road." Although Georgia's state system has been "under construction" for thirteen years there are less than 700 miles of permanent hard-surfaced highways, all told, and the longest stretch is from Perry to Marietta, via Macon and Atlanta. It serves no good purpose in attempting a long drive if a few miles of permanent paving is discounted, and its value practically destroyed, by a sector of mud, here and there, that makes the completion of the trip impossible, or even delayed and abnormally expensive. It is obvious to any unbiased observer that the expense to the state of maintaining—or trying to maintain—such temporarily paved roads is far greater than would be the expense of carrying a bond issue that would complete the entire 7,000 miles, just as the highway from Perry to Marietta is paved today.

Georgia's plan of building highways is wrong, her plan of financing is wrong. Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the federal road bureau, so declared in no unmistaken terms in a recent address in Atlanta.

Even if the "pay-as-you-go" plan is continued this state can never have a connected system until the state is made the unit, so that the paving can be made continuous, as it is in South Carolina. As it is in Georgia, with counties required to provide 25 per cent of the gross cost, there are more than sixty "lost provinces," through which roads can never be paved, unless the plan is changed.

The communication of Mr. Powell illustrates the experiences that hundreds of people are having daily in this state, and it is little less than a scandal, when time and money spent are taken into account, that such conditions prevail.

A LOPSIDED LIFE.

Reasonable attendance at modern amusement places, at theaters, sports, concerts and other forms of entertainment, is a necessary part of life for any man or woman who lives fully and who know best the age in which he lives.

It is a form of mental blindness when an individual, for any reason, refuses to enter a modern place of entertainment. Any arguments based upon moral representations indicate a degree of ignorance or a regrettable lack of moral strength upon the part of the man advancing such arguments.

The motion picture has brought to the world a medium of knowledge and education that should not be scorned by any man. Even in its purely entertainment use, the picture spreads throughout the world a universal language of laughter, of tears and of emotion that draws the peoples of all races in closer bonds of human brotherhood.

The man who inveighs against such a medium of universal understanding is blindly standing in the way of one of the greatest factors for peace and human understanding.

Even if this were not true, he is passing through life with no knowledge of an important part of the average man's existence, and with utter ignorance of the most widespread form of entertainment, which, it cannot be denied, is living a life woefully lopsided in experience and understanding and tolerance.

MONDAY'S FORUM LUNCHEON.

When the forum committee of the chamber of commerce honors a guest with a luncheon that guest is of national or international renown. The committee does not give more than six or eight luncheons a year. It is different from the service committee of the trade body which gives a luncheon once a month to some distinguished state or regional visitor.

The luncheon Monday at 12:30 noon, at the chamber of commerce banquet hall, will be in honor of one of the most distinguished international figures ever to have visited Atlanta—J. Alfred Spender, editor for thirty years of the Westminster Gazette, of London, leader of the liberal party, and authority on political and economic subjects. Mrs. Spender will also be a guest.

Mr. Spender is making a three-months' tour of America studying political and business conditions. With Mrs. Spender he arrived in the city Saturday evening and is at the Biltmore. He is a pleasing speaker, and in addresses delivered at others of the larger cities visited he expresses highly favorable impressions of this country.

Atlantans will enjoy having him. The banquet hall can easily accommodate 200, and every table seat should be filled. It is unnecessary to await an invitation. Every one is invited, whether a member of the trade body or not. It is quite necessary, however, to write or telephone the chamber of commerce for table reservation.

Another distinguished guest at Monday's luncheon will be Miss Sara Graham-Mulhall, noted author, lecturer and sociologist, of New York. She was formerly first deputy commissioner of the New York state department of narcotic control, and was the creator of the foundation for world narcotic research and reclamation. She will be introduced at the forum luncheon.

Atlanta extends a hearty welcome to its distinguished visitors, and it is hoped and believed that the banquet hall of the chamber of commerce will be crowded to its capacity on this notable occasion.

WHY DID COOLIDGE QUIT?

Several hundred prominent citizens of the United States have memorialized President Coolidge to renew his efforts for the participation of the United States in a world court for the settlement of international disputes.

For a time the president was a strong and vigorous advocate of such a tribunal and of full membership by this country. This was a legacy from the Harding administration, the late president, along with Secretary of State Hughes, firmly advocating such a court.

Of late President Coolidge has appeared to lose interest. In his message to the 70th congress he made no reference to it. The omission was in such contrast with his very spirited message on the subject and in advocacy delivered at the opening of the 69th congress, that it naturally created world-wide interest. Hence the memorials that are pouring into him from others, of both parties, who have not only not lost interest but who are more firmly convinced than ever that arbitrament is the one open path that leads to world peace and to the outlawing of all international and civil strife.

The petitioners ask that the president reopen the case. They believe—and the original petition is signed by men of profound knowledge and thought—that a little further patient negotiations may clear away the obstacles to America's entry. If so, how can the president refuse to again lead the fight when in his message he spoke of this nation's "devotion to peace and justice?" That is precisely what the world court seeks, without involvements or entanglements.

The world court is merely the exponent and guardian of the orderly process of international law. Why should this nation—peace loving as it claims—fail to join a movement that seeks peace among nations? It is inconsistent to say that we stand for "peace and justice" when we fail to join the other nations of the world in assuring such conditions for all time.

Boston is boycotting beef as steaks and roasts continue to mount in price. We thought the only food of Boston was mental and pork and beans.

Tampa barbers will be instructed to boost Tampa to customers. That's a new one—instructing a barber to talk.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

Gathering Political Dope in Gotham Leads Into Some Curious Pipe-Dreams.

New York, December 17.—(Special.)—Four hours is as much as I usually allow myself here in godless Gotham, and that in the fullest daytime—not that I have much to lose in a holdup—but what personal morale I have succeeded in maintaining up to date is precious to me.

New York is an elysium all right, I reckon, to those who like it.

For me it is only the repository of information which, at times, I can only get through personal conference and by word of mouth better than by mail, wire, or radiophone.

Just now New York is the brewhouse of spirited politics intended to affect the proceedings of both the big parties in next year's national campaign.

It is here that national and international finance carefully calculates its interests in party policies as administered from Washington city.

It is here that international trade, embodying exports and imports, takes counsel to influence the commercial policies of parties and government.

It is here that the high priests of industries enjoying the profits of high protective duties gather and tell party leaders where to get on and from what to stay off.

And it is here that both parties have to come and collect the sinews of war for their campaigns. So New York possesses the largest sort of political significance.

* * * *

No One in Sight But Smith.

It was no news to learn from authoritative persons that the Smith for president boom is booming to the almost perfect satisfaction of its promoters. They have their scouts and persuaders abroad from Maine to Mare Island and are getting daily reports from the field that the politicians have "no one in sight but Smith."

These wily party manipulators here in New York are taking it for granted that any man in the party capable of preventing Smith from getting the nomination would have been discovered and uncovered to the public eye before now. They have thoroughly calculated the chance of any one of a dozen men to concentrate enough delegate strength to defeat Governor Smith when the breaking away from "favorite sons" takes on the character of a stampede for the band wagon.

Any suggestion that a "dark horse" may suddenly break cover and rush through to the winning post is scornfully scouted.

They tell me that the baptized Smith delegates will, on the first ballot, be close to 400 in strength, and that they will stand pat and even more solidly than did the famous 306 for Grant in the memorable Chicago convention of 1880. That crowd, it should be remembered, nevertheless perished at the post when Garfield, on the 36th ballot, crashed through with 399 votes.

Smith Can Get the Shekels.

It was told to me by a person who ought to know the thing he asserts that if Governor Smith is nominated next June there will be available for the campaign to elect him an already tangible fund of $2,000,000, and that, as the campaign progresses, that sum can be duplicated, if necessary.

Now $2,000,000, plunked bodily into the campaign chest of the democratic national committee, would make the members think that rich old girl, Semele, the mother of Bacchus, had emptied the wealth of her lap into their lap!

Think of it! In 1924, according to the report of the Borah senate committee on national campaign expenditures, the democratic committee collected $821,037 and spent $903,908, so going in the hole for $82,871. That deficit has since increased to near $200,000.

Just imagine the "sis-boom-ah!" that would go up to heaven from democratic headquarters when two million dollars came marching in singing, "East side, west side; Al, we are here!"

* * * *

Both Eyes Set on the South.

It is significant to hear leading men in both parties, here as in Washington city, talking of carrying the next campaign boldly into the south.

Smith managers, I am told quite reliably, believe that if they can secure his nomination, the right strategy will be to put a strong southern man on the ticket for vice president. They do not bank very confidently upon winning much electoral support for him in the west, but are of the opinion that southern states that so uniformly vote dry will need to be nursed and that the surest way to placate them will be to give them a direct interest in supporting Smith and a southern man on the same ticket.

Among those whom I heard mentioned for a Smith running-mate are Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic senate leader; Senator George, of Georgia, and Governor Dan Moody, of Texas. After them mention was made of Senator Glass, of Virginia; Senator Tyson, of Tennessee, and Senator Barkley, of Kentucky.

I am of the opinion that a ticket headed by Smith will have to be just as wet at the back end as at the front end.

* * * *

A Straight Wet Proposition.

The leading newspapers and the leading politicians seem agreed that the nomination of Governor Smith for president will inevitably compel the democratic party to go into the campaign under the wet banner of a modification of the prohibition law and take whatever fate will befall it.

The republican leaders know that will be the case and they, too, are calculating in that event to make the first serious raid into the solid south that they have dared in fifty years.

They are intending to have nominees who will be acceptable to dry voters. They believe the predictions of southern churchmen democrats like Bishops Cannon and DuBose, of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and such eminent and influential Baptist democrats as Dr. Arthur Barton and Dr. E. Y. Mullins. These gentlemen have been open and vehement in declaring that millions of their southern fellow-churchmen will bolt a Smith nomination—whether to sulk in their tents or go over into the republican camp, they cannot now say.

So, if Smith's nomination by the democrats appears sure in early June, the republicans talk of nominating a big southern republican for vice president—some such irreproachable man as David H. Blair, of North Carolina, or Colonel Henry Anderson, of Virginia, or the new republican governor of Kentucky, Sampson.

And they will put up excellent dry candidates for congress in every southern district that looks at all contestable.

Fifth Avenue Shop Windows Disclose Women's Sleeping Costumes Have Become As Varied in Form As Those for Street Wear and More Colorful Than a Rainbow.

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Copyright, 1927, in all countries by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

New York, December 17.—Strolling down Fifth avenue at dusk the Skyliner of a sudden realized that he had been whistling that old song, "Good Night, Ladies." Why? He wondered until he reached the next women's wear shop window, and saw that it was occupied by charming lady dummies in pajamas. Then it came upon him that he had passed at least a dozen windows dressed, or undressed, the same way.

Why are all of the dummy ladies getting ready to go to bed? It may not be the question of the hour but it is one of the questions. Window after window is adorned with them. "Negligees and pajama ensembles," says the neat sign in the corner of the window. Turquoise pajamas, amethyst, mauve, blushing pink, all so soft looking and shimmery, with cozy fur collars and cuffs and buttons here and there.

With dummies appearing in all stages of dishabille, any man may have complete information on just what is not being worn, and he is kept posted by signs in windows filled with boudoir slippers, and reading like this:

"Mules make colorful gifts for her hours of relaxation."

Speaking of Beds.

Saw an antique four-poster, with perfect hair mattress and box springs, auctioned off for $80. A dozen persons present would have paid double that for it, had they been able to get the bed into their apartments.

Antique furniture generally brings crazy prices nowadays, but the beds are an exception, and for this reason only, because the commodious old beds, with canopies and coats of arms and fancy carving, are much in favor. You should see the crowds looking at them in the museums, wondering about their long-gone occupants and their history.

But there have been few such beds as that of "Honest John" Kelly, the gambling house proprietor who died not so long ago. This bed, which Kelly paid $5,000 for and which was auctioned off for $58, was a magnificent piece of furniture. Put four wheels under it and you would have a fine circus wagon. Knock off the corners and there's the core of a merry-go-round.

It had, or probably has, gilt scrolls on it and knobs and fantistic rods looking like carved baseball bats, varnished, and the tops of the posts were wooden bowls that could each hold a pot of geraniums. Down from the head of the bed looked the gilded head of a woman, as on the prow of an ancient ship. Her hair seemed composed of serpents, suggesting the Medusa. In circles of metal at her sides were cherubs playing the banjo.

The auctioneer jumped up and down in the middle of the bed to show that the springs were good. He remarked upon the brass pipe, curling down from the top of the bed and ending in an electric light globe shielded by a green shade. But he couldn't make it popular.

Quacking the Praise of Ducks.

New York has a duck czar. His name is Harry W. Koch and his official title is "Representative of the Long Island Duck Growers' association." He devotes his days to promoting the Long Island duck as a table delicacy, and the result of his efforts is a continuous massacre of ducks only ten weeks from the shell.

In five years this industry has increased from 250,000 to 4,000,000 ducks annually hatched and eaten. Duck is one of the most constant dishes served in New York restaurants, and to make the city completely duck-conscious, as the advertising tribe put it, the billboards of Long Island are bespread with painted ducks, on the hoof and in the platter.

* * * *

Playing Mother Too Accurately.

The little girl's doll must have misbehaved, for she picked it up roughly, gave it a blow on the head and berated it.

"I'll slap you," she cried, her face twisted in well simulated wrath. "I'll beat you 'til—"

The little girl, sitting on tenement steps, was playing mother, and like small girls from the beginning of time she was imitating the mothers that she knew.

Many a time, when the Skyliner has stopped at a park bench for a few minutes' rest, his peace of mind has been shattered at the sight and sound of a mother cuffing and scolding a poor mite of a baby—scarcely more—who stumbled and fell down. Realizing that thousands of mothers don't know any better he has checked the impulse to report it and then has walked away miserably wondering how the world is ever going to become civilized.

* * * *

A Fifth Avenue Contrast.

On the ground floor of the public library, and at the extreme northeast corner, where Fifth avenue and Forty-second street meet, is the children's room.

Subway trains rush through the earth directly under it. Traffic rumbles by it, shifting as police whistles blow, but seldom slackening much, for this is one of the most congested street intersections on earth.

Oblivious to the sights and sounds of the center of the world's largest city, the children go adventuring here. From shelves built so close to the floor that no tiptoeing is necessary, they take books to low tables. They sit down in small chairs and read. Elbow to elbow, physically, they are as far apart in mind as King Arthur and Huckleberry Finn.

* * * *

Rhymes of a City Child.

Pondering on the possible fancies of a city child nowadays, the Skyliner found a book in the children's library, dealing with this very theme. In old-fashioned nursery verse the child of the author's whimsy rhymes out his thoughts.

Opposite the picture of a small boy stooping to pick up the newspaper and bottle of milk, at the door of the apartment in the morning, the boy rhymes about the odd fact that in the country a whole house, with a yard around it, belongs to just one family, but in the city, so father tells him, fifty families live in one building.

There is a rhyme about stepping into the elevator and calling "fourth floor," and getting off to enter a home with a "seven" on the door, and another about father's embarrassment when he entered the wrong door by mistake, and several tell of the joys of city life, such as watching the telephone girl pull the strings, down in the lobby, and going to the zoo and skipping the rope with clothes lines on the roof.

Self-Defense.

The trial of Remus, known as the "king of bootleggers," for the murder of his wife, now going on in Cincinnati, presents one of the most curiously significant and sordid revelations of American life. In this particular case, we do not even have to use the classic newspaper phrase, Remus, 'the alleged' slayer of his wife. He not only confesses, but, one might say, boasts, that he did slay his wife. Immediately afterwards, he deliberately declared, without reservation or modification, that when he killed her he was not insane.

Jekyll and Hyde.

But Mr. Remus is a very versatile personage. One must be very observant and discriminating to understand in what character he speaks, because he plays different roles in this dramatic medley, where convicts and ex-convicts of every description appear in the dramatis personae. What Mr. Remus, the prisoner at bar, may say, is quite different from what Mr. Remus, the distinguished criminal lawyer for the defense, may have to say. The ways of our criminal courts, with their labyrinthine pathways and mysterious technicalities for the preservation of the rights of men to kill, is beyond the understanding of a mere citizen layman.

Remus, the accused murderer, says, "I killed my wife and was in full possession of my faculties when I committed the deed." But Remus, the attorney for the defendant, says, "At the time of the killing, this man Remus was insane, and for all that he did and said at that time, he was not responsible." In a word, the present Remus is not only sane, but so clearly and righteously sane, that he can calmly and impartially examine the insane Remus, and pronounce upon his mental and moral condition. Not only that, but the court which is to make the final decision in this case, accepts the present Mr. Remus as a normal and respectable citizen, and one fitted to appear as the legal representative of an accused murderer. Yet at the same time, the court by doing this, acknowledges that this same lawyer for the defense, a few weeks ago may have been madly insane, and so utterly irresponsible as to have murdered his wife.

How creepy it makes one feel! One begins to examine his own sanity. Was one perfectly sane on yesterday? But how can one tell? The same mind which was so disordered yesterday as to be irresponsible for its actions, is called upon today to be the judge of the sanity or insanity of that same mind. It is clearly analogous to the position of the modern psychologist who takes the materialistic position. He shows with marvelous discrimination, as he criticizes the functions of the brain, that it is only a wonderfully delicate piece of machinery, driven by inevitable forces, and that to suppose it has any freedom or direction of its own, is only an illusion. When one asks who this is that is making this clear and impartial criticism of the brain, one is surprised to find that it is only the brain itself criticizing itself, and declaring with dogmatic superiority, that it is nothing but a machine. But which deliverance of the machine can we accept?

The Purpose of Punishment.

Should Mr. Remus prove that, though sane today, he was insane the day he killed his wife, under the law he will go free. It seems to me that the presumption here of our criminal system is all wrong. Punishment has the idea of vengeance, "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." So if a man was not responsible for his act, then the state should not take vengeance on him. Punishment should never be for the sake of vengeance. It should have only two objectives: one the protection of society from the enemies of society, and the other to strive to change the criminal into a law abiding citizen.

A man who is once murderously insane is a very dangerous person to society. I should respectfully doubt whether any alienist, no matter how learned he may be, could ever give assurance that this dangerous malady would not return. For this reason, and not in order to avenge society, a man who has once been murderously insane should be incarcerated for life.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

What do you understand to be the real meaning of Genesis vi:2: "The sons of God saw the daughters of men, that they were fair and took them wives of all which they chose?" Also Genesis iv:7, last clause: "And unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him?"

To whom do the pronouns refer.

The first verse is generally regarded by scholars as a mythological account of the angels ("sons of God") who were guilty of unnatural relations with women, and God is represented as rebuking them and decreeing the end of these unions (v:3). It is also possible that the passage is an attempt to explain the giants of huge stature known as "the Nephilim" by ascribing their origin to a supernatural paternity.

The Hebrew pronouns of the second quotation are in the singular. Correctly translated, it reads: "And unto you shall be his desire, but as for you, do you rule over him." Paraphrased, it would run as follows: "The beast desires to overpower you. Be on your guard. Chain him down before he can spring.

The interpretation concerns Cain, who was obsessed with the idea of killing his brother Abel. God warned him that sin lurked in his breast like a tiger in the jungle and would presently destroy him if not suppressed. He disregarded the warning and incurred the assassin's doom. Jealousy, envy and hate are the murderous passions that make even a brother's heart a jungle of incipient death.

You are inspiring and make one worship the stars and forget the mushrooms, but could you throw any light on why Lazarus never left any information of what he saw or experienced while he lay dead for four days in the grave? What a chance he had of letting all humanity know what was beyond the vale before our Lord returned victorious!

There is perhaps no better treatment of your question that that given by Robert Browning in his poem on Karshish, the Arabian physician. "This picker-up of learning's crumbs" was won to faith by an account of the experience of Lazarus.

Yet Karshish could not break through the absolute silence Lazarus maintained about what befell him during his sojourn beyond. He could learn no more than was summing up in the single phrase, "the all-great were the all-loving, too."

This contains no solution of the problem you raise, and it is best unsolved. Faith is for this life, sight for that which is to come. Knowledge renders faith superfluous and thus usurps the morally creative faculty without which our spiritual culture is impossible.

For this reason it is God's purpose to engender faith in man. Christ sought for and rejoiced over it as the chief treasure of the soul. Moreover it is the genuine self-revelation which shows what we deeply crave and to which divine revelation answers as day unto night.

If therefore immortality were demonstrated we should be incapable of answering Browning's question:

"Like you this immortality or not?
Has it your vote to be true if it can?"

Master his poem and you will perceive how frequently poets surpass theologians in apprehending the diviner meanings of human existence.

Clifton, N. J.

I was discussing the work of Christian missionaries in China with a young Chinese student who is in this country, studying banking, his father being the head of a large bank in China.

He said: "Missionaries ask us to be Christians, but what kind of Christians do they want us to be, Catholic, Protestant, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Congregationalist, Baptist or Unitarian? I tell them to first agree among themselves, and then come and talk to us." Is this not a fair answer, particularly when the differences between these religious groups are primarily concerned with church government, which was a burning issue 200 or 300 years ago, but is as dead as a door nail today, so far as the average man is concerned?

I agree that what you say is profoundly true of the evangelization of non-Christian peoples. Church leaders of every kind keenly realize the dangers their historic divisions precipitate upon the work of missionaries, and nowhere are these dangers more imminent than in ancient nations already possessing powerful and literary faiths.

Nevertheless, within the last 25 years the Protestant denominations have united for hospital and university service and deem it most desirable that this precedent should be generally applied. Several missionary fields have also been surrendered to native ministers, who may or may not perpetuate our sectarianisms. But these are still vital among us and "the average man" is as much concerned with them as the bishops and clergy. Otherwise, why should they be injected into American politics?

On a Georgia 'Good Road' He Paid But 'Didn't Go'

Editor Constitution: On a recent trip from Atlanta to Fort Valley by Georgia's "road patches" I often wished for the company of a few of our "pay-as-you-go" voters. I certainly paid.

From Atlanta to Barnesville on the paved road all was nice. But there I was informed that the road by Culloden and Roberta was much nearer than by Macon and was in good order. So I left the paved road (Dixie highway) and proceeded by the "nearer good road." About 18 miles out as the rain fell our car skidded and sank to the axles. In vain we tried low gear and planks and poles. The car seemed determined to stay all night right there. Several gentlemen stopped and in sympathy tried to pull us out, but in vain.

Right here let me say there are more good fellows in Georgia than in any other state. They will go down into the mud, take off your tire, patch it and replace it and refuse to take a penny for their trouble—Georgia gentlemen.

Finally a large truck came along and pulled us out and we proceeded joyously. But our joy was short. About three miles beyond Culloden, after dark, we stuck again and tried every means of escape. One of our party went in the mud to a house one-fourth of a mile distant seeking help. The owner declined to hitch up his mules at night, but offered us room for the night, which we were obliged to accept. He gave us a mattress on the floor and breakfast, charging $5.50. He said that he made up his losses on the farm by pulling tourists out of the mud, passing whole days often by the roadside with mules.

So a new industry is opened up.

Our trip took a day and a half, which could easily have been made on a good road in a few hours, and cost $6 for getting out of the mud.

Billion Dollars To Be Spent For Advertising in 1928

Bruce Barton, Advertising Man, Tells How It Will Be Done and Pay, Too.

(From the New York Sun.)

There's a reddish-haired, square-jawed gentleman sitting in a big private office up in Madison avenue and spending about $50,000,000 a year to make the names of certain commodities stick in the fickle human mind, who says something or writes something every once in a while that rings a clear gong in the general clamor and confusion of things. People stop and listen.

This gentleman's name is Bruce Barton, and he is an advertising man. He advertises motor cars and foodstuffs and toilet articles and things made by the Standard Oil company. He has also advertised very extensively Christianity and its founder, the Savior of Mankind. Very few people can write as good an ad about the new model motor car, or the latest thing in luxury, and not more than two people since Matthew, Mark, Luke and John have known equally well how to reach the heart with the real story of the Christ.

A Rare Combination.

There is something going on inside of his head most of the time, which is not the case with everybody, and it's something quite likely to be arresting. When an idealist with a sense of humor, the rarest animal in the world, gets to thinking out loud it's good entertainment and education. This man Barton, herald and champion of modern business, biographer of the Savior, hater of cant, a very plain-spoken fellow with all of his easy courtesy, got to talking about advertising this morning—its place in the scheme of things; its influence in the building of individual character as well as individual prosperity; its tremendous spread and scope; the way it smooths life for people who are barely aware of its existence; how invulnerable it is to the attacks of plain damn fools who howl at it occasionally—got to talking about these and a peppery variety of such topics. He sat in his shirt sleeves—sleeves rolled up to his elbows; knees hunched up against edge of desk top; square shoulders slumped down a little in his chair, cigar puffing; good looking, clean-cut, in the prime of life at about 40, and looking rather like a collar ad with brains in its head.

Spending Important Money.

"The shrewdest business men in the world are going to spend more than $1,000,000,000 on advertising in the coming year," said this engaging Mr. Barton, "quite a bit more. I would be pretty close to the truth (not many millions off, you can bet) if I put the round figures at $1,100,000,000. Now, these fellows are the real bright boys of the land—few dumbbells among them. They are the hair-trigger thinkers, the fellows who can see through a barn door and around a corner. They don't waste a dollar deliberately—not they. Why all the great splash of dollars that will be heard along the beaches of journalism and magazinedom in the coming year? It's because these men know that you've got a gold mine if you can engrave a name upon the memory of the public. If you can by preaching and emphasis and repetition associate with some commodity a special trade name, so that the public thinks of the commodity by that trade name, you've got something! To this end advertising—national advertising—is rather tending today: To establish indelibly in the public mind some special brands and trade names as the veritable synonyms of whole classes of commodities and products.

"There are a lot of interesting capitals in this world—peculair centers of influence and power. I suppose that Rome is the art center of the world, as Paris is for fashions, Amsterdam for diamonds and London for furs. New York is the advertising capital of the world, with Chicago not greatly overshadowed. From New York will radiate the bulk of this staggering advertising expenditure I speak about, and in New York will be made many of the plans anad campaigns of the coming year. And yet in this vast business, here in its own capital, there are phases of advertising which are very imperfectly understood. Advertising doesn't need any longer to protest that it is important. Doctors used to have to proclaim that, on the whole, they cured more than they killed. We, too, are out of the childhood of our business and are in its maturity. Here are a few things to think about:

A Conserver of Life.

"Advertising is a great conserver of life. Elias Howe invented the sewing machine, but he couldn't get women to buy it. His life was a long tragedy of want, and millions of women kept right on drudging, though Howe had in his hand the means of fortune for himself and rescue for those toiling women. Swift and smooth is the pathway of inventions today. Motor car, radio, iceless icebox—all are made known immediately and everywhere and set to work.

"Advertising is a great increaser of wealth. Modern business has outrun the old-fashioned political economy which preached, "Work, and spend as little as possible." The newer political economy holds that whatever increases life, men's capacity for productive labor, increases wealth. And there is no power for increasing men's capacity like the power of desire. Set up before men the images of things they want; give them goals of desire and you transform ten-horsepower men into fifty-horsepower men. Many men have astounded themselves and their friends by unsuspected productivity. The other day I was talking to the head of one of the biggest corporations in the country, one of the high-powered and high-paid men, and he said: 'I can remember very clearly when it was my ambition to save $20,000 and not a dollar more. Having that $20,000 I meant to retire, because $20,000 meant $100 a month or $25 a week, and I knew very well that this was all the money I could possibly need. But my wants increased as I went along. My family acquired new interests. Everything widened.' That's it. Everything widened and advertising did it, and incidentally, drove him up to be a $250,000 a year man rather than a $1,200 a year man.

Reason for Prosperity.

"One reason for America's prosperity, and one reason, in my judgment why that prosperity will continue, is that we have committed ourselves to a standard of living far beyond our wildest pre-war dreams. And we are working harder than any nation in history to make good on our commitments. We cannot make good except by producing more wealth, and always a little ahead of us is advertising with its alluring images of still other good things that work will buy. Americans have passed out of the period where they care about petty economies. They want convenience. They want action. They want comfort and style, and they are willing to pay for it. It is impossible to call Americans back to petty thrift, and I personally am glad of it. I once lived in a town where thrift was worshipped above all else. I live now in New York, where everybody expects to be overcharged and where nobody counts the dimes, much less the pennies. Neither community is ideal, but of the two I much prefer the latter. We have ceased to count our pennies in America, and I certainly hope we never return to the days of the most graceless of all virtues, a niggardly and penny-pinching thrift.

"Advertising keeps business out in the open, compelling it to set up public ideals of quality and service that have to be lived up to. Many forces have been at work to produce cleanliness and wholesomeness in business, but none has been more powerful than national advertising. The late George W. Perkins told to me once that when he became a director of the New York Life Insurance company he proposed that the company should buy a full page in the New York newspapers once every year and publish every dollar's worth of property that it owned; every bond, every share of stock, every mortgage. A director of the old school looked at him with withering scorn. "Some day we shall make a bad investment," he said, "and I suppose you would publish that in your newspaper." Mr. Perkins replied: "If you know it is going to be published in the newspapers you will be a lot less likely to make a bad investment."

Advertising a Builder.

Advertising is a great builder of prosperity, and I have the temerity to predict that advertising will keep our prosperity booming right along through 1928 and beyond. No single market in the United States is saturated or anything like it. Not one household in a hundred has all the sheets and towels it needs. That's for the textile industry. How many people know today—and are convinced—that it is economical to own several pairs of shoes and alternate them in use? That's for the shoe industry. How many women in the land would like to be relieved from drudgery by paying 3 cents an hour for the boon? That's for the electrical industry. Hardly anybody is properly dressed from head to foot. If our hats are new our shoes are old. If our suit is in style our necktie is frayed. That's for the clothing industry. And so it goes. Plenty of room. Plenty of markets. Future teeming with opportunities.

"Advertising is growing simpler, more truthful and very laconic. The future will bring a different and simpler type of advertising, with the old flamboyant stuff discarded and more insistence on brand, trademark, popular name. A very sophisticated audience has been created in this country. It is an audience that has very little time. A thousand voices are clamoring for its attention. Advertising must become more forceful, briefer, more truthful, freer from bunk. This is an inevitable result of popular education. The reputation of the maker of a commodity is going to be more and more the deciding factor, and that reputation will be built upon simplicity."

By this time the anteroom of Mr. Barton's office at 383 Madison avenue had become jammed with folk who had appointments or wanted them, and low murmurs, through which ran the silver thread of a secretary's soothing voice, came in through the door. The talk ran down like a clock as the talker became more and more conscious of these people outside. So the reporter shook hands and went away with a whole bagful of new notions about the "voice of business."

Atlanta's Public Schools

What They Are Doing—What They Are Trying To Do.

This is the seventh of a series of articles on Atlanta's public school system, prepared under the direction of the Personnel association, of Atlanta. They are published with the view of informing parents and the public on the school work. The entire system, from kindergarten to high schools, will be discussed.

ATLANTA'S JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOLS.

Junior High schools, consisting of the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, have been in operation as part of the Atlanta public school system since September, 1923. There are now enrolled in the five junior high schools for white children 6,596 pupils, and approximately 1,000 in the junior high division of the combination junior-senior high school for negroes. These adolescent boys and girls are taught by 225 teachers. Many people in Atlanta frequently ask the following questions:

"What are the aims or chief functions of the junior high schools? What is the fundamental educational philosophy back of the junior high school? How is the school organized? What new subjects are offered and why are they offered? Why are the children so much interested in their work?"

How do the Junior High schools prepare for the Senior High schools?

It is the purpose of this article to answer some of these questions. Those responsible for organization and administration of the junior high schools in Atlanta have created an educational environment which makes it possible to develop as far as possible the special abilities, interests, and aptitudes of boys and girls of the early teen age.

The junior high schools continue instruction in the mastery of the fundamental subjects such as arithmetic, spelling, English, both written and spoken; penmanship, history, civics and geography. All pupils take the same subjects in the seventh and low eighth grades. At the middle of the eighth grade pupils are permitted, with the approval of their parents, to make certain choices. They may elect a foreign language, junior business training, manual arts, home economics, etc.

Preparing for Senior High.

The electives are made in the light of his senior high choice. Pupils who plan to enter Commercial High elect typewriting, filing and junior business training. Those who plan to enter Girls' High and Boys' High elect Latin, and boys who show unusual aptitude for technical subjects continue their work in free-hand drawing, electric shop, metal shops, etc. The promotion is so flexible that it is possible for boys and girls to enter any of the senior high schools when they have finished the junior high school, regardless of the course completed. Every effort is made to keep the door of education opportunity open to all pupils.

Atlanta junior high schools are equipped with libraries, science laboratories, food and clothing laboratories, amnual training shops, commercial laboratories and clinics. The additions to the present buildings to be built from bond funds, will provide facilities for health education, cafeterias, auditoriums and standard class rooms which will make it possible to abandon the portables, in which are housed about one-fourth of the pupils at present.

Atlanta Keeping Pace.

The question is frequently asked: "Why all this equipment and special rooms?" The answer is that Atlanta is trying to keep abreast of the best educational practices of the cities of her class and is interested in giving her children the best education possible.

It is also the function of the junior high school to develop in the pupil an intelligent attitude toward his city and toward his fellowman. John Dewey has said that "Education is not preparation of life—it is life itself." The junior high school, with its shops, its laboratories, and rich course of study takes into account the unfolding personality of the adolescent and puts him in touch with assimilative material so that he will successfully make adjustments to his environmental contacts. This is the reason the Atlanta youth love to attend school. The Bass Junior High school has an annual average daily attendance of 97 per cent. The attendance in the other junior high schools is almost as good.

Atlanta is known throughout the country for its interests in sports. This interest in athletics is begun in the elementary school under the able leadership of Miss Myra Graves and is continued in the junior high schools, under the direction of well-trained physical education teachers. The emphasis is placed on mass athletics. An effort is made to get every boy and girl into the game. Tournaments in baseball, basketball, golf, volleyball and football are held during the year.

The Atlanta junior high schools have the followgin features which are common to the best junior high schools of the country:

1. Promotion by subjects.
2. Grouping of pupils in classes according to ability.
3. Departmental teaching.
4. System of educational and vocational guidance.
5. Exploratory or tryout course.
6. Men teachers as well as women teachers.
7. Full time trained nurse. (Furnished by the P.-T. A.)

Due to overcrowded classes and unusually heavy teaching load, the club of activity periods have been temporarily abandoned.

In conclusion it may be truthfully said that the junior high schools of Atlanta give the youth an abundance of assimilative materials for the fast learner; studies, helps, and directs the slow learner; prevents or scientifically adjusts the cases of misfits. The schools are producing intelligent boys and girls who are making many contacts with the world. They are teaching boys and girls how to study, how to control themselves, how to play the game as a good sport, and how to build strong minds in strong bodies."

The junior high schools and their principals are: Bass, J. H. Smith; Joseph E. Brown, A. G. Martin; Daniel C. O'Keefe, S. M. Hastings; Hoke Smith, L. O. Kimberly; Thomson, J. W. Stipe.

Sheldon To Give Christmas Music At Recital Today

Special Christmas music will be featured on Sunday afternoon by Dr. Charles A. Sheldon, city organist, in the regular organ recital at the city auditorium. The recital, as usual, will start at 3:30 o'clock and will continue for one hour. There is no admission charge.

The program for today follows:

Overture to the Occasional Oratorio (Handel). Andante Maestoso-Allegro-Adagio and March.
Noel Ecossais—(An ancient Christmas carol in the Scotch style)—Guilmant.
Christmas in Sicily—Pietro Yon.
The Holy Night—D. Buck.
Marche Russe—Oscar E. Schminke.
Improvisation.

FOUR LINERS ENTER THIRD CLASS TRAFFIC

Indictative of new development in trans-Atlantic travel, comes announcement from the Allied Cunard and Anchor-Donaldson Steamship companies, operating between Montreal and European ports, that four post-war Canadian service liners will be devoted entirely to tourist-third and third-class passenger traffic during the 1928 season.

The four liners involved in this latest innovation are the Cunard liners Antonia and Andania, and the Anchor-Donaldson liners Athenia and Letitia, all post-war steamers with an aggregate tonnage of over 55,000. The change is a direct answer to the travel demands of American tourists for more, better and cheaper accommodation on ocean-going steamers, and is typified by the proposed addition of several new colossal ocean liners bigger and even more luxurious than the Berengaria and the Aquitania, at present on the New York-Southampton run.

ELEMENTARY LEAGUE WILL MEET TUESDAY

The Baptist Elementary league will meet at 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, December 20, in the Sunday school auditorium of the Second Baptist church. W. A. Browning will lecture on the Christmas carols and give a practical demonstration of their use.

Departmental conferences for cradle roll, beginners, primary and juniors will be held, in which Christmas plans will be discussed by experts in each department.

Supper will be served at 6 o'clock. All elementary workers are invited.

A Song of the Christmas.

Joy sounds the note of that glad good time,—
The coming o' the Chris'mas;
The wild bells chime in a rousin' rime,
The coming o' the Chris'mas;
All dancin' an' singin' the stars peek thru,
The limitless curtains o' the concave blue;
An' the holly makes a wreath, my sweet, for you—
The Queen o' the Chris'mas.

The glistening snow where the cold wind whines
Makes beautiful the Chris'mas;
An' the priestly lines o' the ermined pines
Chant the carols o' the Chris'mas;
Love holds a candle in the cedars, my sweet,
Along the roadside as a lamp to the feet
Of the deer that hurry all ladened for to meet
The heralds o' the Chris'mas.

Little tired fellers in their trundles, sleep late,
Dreamin' o' the Chris'mas;
Along the mantelboard little stockings await
The promise o' the Chris'mas;
Bless 'em; old Santa Claus loves 'em so—
When comes the morn with its softened glow
The limbs o' the holly, heavy-ladened and low
Will kiss 'em for the Chris'mas.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

BULKY FOOD FOR HEALTHY FOLK.

One specialist in digestive diseases, Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, whose views on "nervous indigestion" we referred to in recent articles in this column, is a strong advocate of a "smooth diet" for patients who are dyspeptic or in other words given to quarreling with their food. They themselves say it is the food that disagrees with them, but "nervous" persons are always good at passing the buck, you know.

"Nowadays," says Dr. Alvarez, "one of the simplest ways of helping dyspeptic persons is to take away their bran mush and their muffins. The enthusiast on bran forgets that he is prescribing the substance simply because it is one of the most indigestible to be found in nature; it was especially designed to carry seeds unchanged through the digestive tracts of the herbivores. And yet they call it health food! Those who, except for constipation, have a perfect digestion may be greatly helped by the addition of roughage to the diet, but others who have short, inefficient and irritable bowels get into trouble. . ."

Among the food items Dr. Alvarez excludes from the diet of invalids who do not agree with their food are celery, tomatoes, cucumbers, pineapple, raisins, berries, jams, nuts, many of the raw fruits, many of the green vegetables, beans, cabbage, onions, melons, green or red peppers, peanuts, candy, sugar, syrup—gee whiz, the very thought of existing without these delightful things is enough to make one nervous. But well folk ought to include each and all of these things in the diet, for the very reason that they supply considerable indigestible cellulose or fiber, which is desirable as roughage, filler or bulk. Bulk or filler is a natural and essential aid to the motility, the movement, the peristalsis, and that is the most important feature of digestion.

Invading the physician's field I venture to say that the good doctors are prejudiced and that their theory that any such indigested or indigestible stuff necessarily "irritates" the bowel is gratuitous. However, that's a thing they may discuss with their patients. We know that this cellulose which is indigestible for man is nevertheless a wholesome and desirable thing to eat, for well folk.

Dr. Walter A. Bastedo, another eminent specialist in digestive diseases, gave bran a dreadful panning at the Keuka Lake medical and surgical come all ye last summer. He said:

"Bran is a substance whose usefulness for man has been overrated. Thirty-three per cent of it consists of pentosans which are not digestible by man. According to Osborne and Mendel it is irritating to the stomach and intestines; it is therefore contra-indicated (should not be used) in hyperacidity, mucous colitis, and other states of gastro intestinal irritability."

Not so fast, doctor. Who are Osborne and Mendel? They're very good nutrition physiologists, but they are neither good physicians nor qualified to pass on a question of therapy. When they say something is "irritating" they are thinking of irritability as a physiologist thinks of it, and not as the layman thinks of it. But we'll let that pass and turn to another part of your address, and there you recommend several irritants as good remedies or preventives against constipation. You specifically commend senna leaves chopped up with figs, one of the good old home remedies. You mention cascara with rhubarb and soda; phenolphthalein, and even that crude old horse medicine, aloes or aloin. These are at least as irritating, to the normal or abnormal gastrointestinal tract, as such a natural food substance as bran can be. But we must keep in mind that you are a physician speaking about abnormal or disease conditions, and we are thinking only of well people and their needs.

This is a factor that nearly everybody seems to lose sight of when considering the question of roughage in the diet. I wonder whether any of these good doctors who inveigh against this "fad" have ever encountered a case in which any injury had been done by the eating of bran by a well person. I doubt it. Their bias against bran is based upon the apparent harm it has done to some invalid. I say apparent harm, because, after all, no one has proved that bran is the cause of the injurious effects which these physicians so readily ascribe to it.

Dr. Alvarez recalls a case of a woman who had been on the "smooth-diet" for 10 years and kept fairly well as long as she stuck to the molly-coddle stuff. Then some fool physician persuaded her to eat bran for her constipation, and in just a few weeks she had to be operated on for the relief of intestinal obstruction. And that ain't the half of it, either. At operation the doctors found a section of ileum (intestine) twisted, yes sir, twisted, and bound to the stump of an organ that had been previously removed (a former operation), and, finally, to clinch the matter and condemn bran out of court, this twisted portion of intestine was, as Dr. Alvarez laconically remarks, "nicely packed with bran."

Well, with all due respect for Dr. Alvarez, I ask what one would expect to find an obstructed bowel packed with, if not the residue of the foods the patient had been eating? Does this coincidence imply that bran is likely to cause obstruction of the bowel? Applesauce. But that's Dr. Alvarez's story and I suppose he is going to stick to it. As a story it is nearly as good as the one the bartender told in explanation of his assault on a cold stiff some roistering medical students set up before the bar. When the students had worked in vain to revive the victim they asked the pharmacist why he had attacked the man. "Had to hit him in self-defense," the dispenser declared.

Bran gems are gems when made after this recipe:

One egg well beaten; pinch of salt; butter size of walnut melted; one cupful each of sweet milk, wheat flour, wheat bran, teaspoonful baking powder. Bake in gem tins.

Bran bread a la St. Paul nurse:

One quart each of wheat bran, white flour, buttermilk or sour milk; one cup seeded raisins; one cup old-fashioned molasses; one teaspoonful baking powder; one teaspoonful salt; one half teaspoonful soda. Mix well, put batter in three greased tins, and bake in a slow oven.

Bran macaroons for hired or tired men:

One egg; one cup granulated sugar; 2 1-2 tablespoonsful flour; one cup finely chopped almonds; 2 1-2 tablespoonsful wheat bran. Beat egg and sugar until very light. Add the nuts, then flour and bran. Drop on buttered tins and bake in a medium oven 10 minutes.

Some soxdologers prefer to munch their bran straight and raw, and if one likes it so it is fine.

Some timid folk fear raw bran is too lively and they prefer to bake or cook the bran in one way or another to kill off possible insects or even germs in it. This is all right, too.

Most people have been educated to imagine the kind of bran the miller gets from wheat isn't just suited for human consumption until some manufacturer or "health food" wizard "prepares" or puts the stamp of his approval on the package. Bunk. The best bran and the cheapest, for human consumption, comes directly from the mill, the feed store or the farmer.

Speaking of well people merely, I think it is wise that everybody have some bran in the house and use it pretty freely as a food and a treat. Myself, I haven't brushed my teeth with a bran macaroon in a month of Sundays. I have depended largely on potato skins and similar odds and ends lately, and potato skins are so appetizing that they have to watch Tony and me now whenever we go out to play, if the neighbors' garbage cans are exposed.

I'd be glad to show you a beautiful picture of Tony and myself taking our rolls, only Tony's whiskers have grown so long you might not be able to tell us apart.

Alamo No. 2.

Boom! The cannon roared. The land rush was on! Ten thousand mad rushing men and horses! And here it was that the appealing eyes of a defenseless girl awakened the true hearts of three of the wildest roughnecks in the Black Hills. Then after many hardships comes the heroic sacrifice of each of the three bad men's lives for the safety and happiness of the girl and her lover. There are 12 stars and a cast of 25,000 in "Three Bad Men," showing at the Alamo No. 1 theater Monday and Tuesday.

"West of the Law," featuring Ben Wilson, Neva Gerber and "Fangs," the dog star, will run Wednesday and Thursday.

Art Acord in "Hard Fists" plays Friday and Saturday. This is a story of love triumphant over greed and crooked tactics of the race track.

Tudor.

The Tudor opens the week with Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "The Ridin' Rowdy," the story of the son of a prominent ranchman who gets into trouble with the old boy and is ordered away from home, and who, in going, becomes involved in a cattle and sheep war, lining up with a girl whom he had met, and working out his way through helping her. "The Ridin' Rowdy" plays the Tudor on Monday and Tuesday.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Tudor offers "Silverstreak in "Fangs of Justice," the story of the worthless son of a prominent constructor, who is led into dissipation by a crooked cousin who seeks to secure control of the old man's property, but is thwarted by the dog belonging to the son.

Friday and Saturday brings to the Tudor Ken Maynard in "Fighting Courage," presenting Maynard as a young man who goes west in search of fame and fortune.

Capitol Picture StarsRin-Tin-Tin In Greatest Role

Rin-Tin-Tin!

What entertainment that name summons into the minds of motion picture fans everywhere! Many have been his sensational successes heretofore, but in "Tracked by the Police," at the Capitol theater this week, he has made a picture that is the absolute zenith of everything he has ever done for the screen.

"Tracked by the Police" will be featured all this week at the Capitol in addition to a great bill of vaudeville, which includes two big headline acts, Gibson's Navigators and Clown Classics Revue.

"Tracked by the Police" records the courageous fight of a dog hero to save not only one of the greatest reclamation projects in the United States, but also his friends engaged in building it. With a splendid cast including Jason Robards, Virginia Brown Faire, Tom Santschi, Nanette, Dave Morris, Theodore Lorch, Ben Walker and Wilfred North, Rinty is said to depict the most sympathetic and thrilling role of his career.

The story deals with the construction of a great dam and desert irrigation project. For the beautiful exteriors the company journeyed to Yuma, Ariz., using the Laguna dam and reclamation project across the Colorado river as a setting.

Rinty is seen as the dog of a young foreman in love with the daughter of the superintendent. She is also the subject of dishonorable interest of another foreman who has been bribed by a rival construction company to place all the obstacles possible in the way of the work, so that the company would be forced to abandon it.

Because Rinty has foiled many of these attempts, the plotters determine to get him. The superintendent is disabled in a mysterious accident, and when the young foreman takes his place, a heinous scheme to put him and Rinty out of the way, leaving the girl and the dam unprotected, is hatched.

The way by which the schemes of the bad men are coped with by the wonder-dog make thrilling melodrama and gives Rinty an opportunity to display his uncanny brilliance as never before.

Included in the cast are Jason Robards, Virginia Brown Faire, Tom Santschi, Nanette, Dave Morris, Theodore Lorch, Ben Walker and Wilfred North.

There is no rest, however, for William Beaudine, who will direct "Home, James." He has just finished what is considered one of the best jobs of directing ever made at Universal City, that of "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," with most of the original "Cohens and Kellys" cast. The first print is now on the way east.

Two Great Acts Head Big Bill Now at Capitol

Two of the greatest headliners a local vaudeville circuit ever offered on any two bills will be seen this week at the Capitol theater and both of 'em will be on the same program! Gibson's Navigators and "Clown Classics Revue" are the two great acts which will be supported by three other good Pantage's acts and a Rin-Tin-Tin picture.

Gibson's Navigators is an act composed of eight beautiful young girls in a jazzy middy band presenting comedy, singing and music in first-rate fashion. This act is one of the foremost turns on the American stage and it comes in the way of a distinct treat for local theatergoers.

In addition to possessing beauty and dancing talent to the utmost, the girls are absolutely the last word when it comes to jazz music. They rank at the top-notch of vaudeville excellence.

The funniest clowns that ever plastered grease paint on their faces are to be seen in "Clown Classics Revue," an exceptionally clever variety act featuring Lapinski and Jay Carter and their musical clowns.

There are six people in this act, which presents three scenes, with every moment of their time on the stage occupied in uproarious comedy which has never failed to make them tremendous hits with all their audiences.

Alfred Latell, the world's greatest animal actor, is a name to conjure with, itself. Latell is one of the most famous vaudeville artists in the world and he will be seen at the Capitol theater this week in an entirely new routine. He will be assisted by Sylvan Dell.

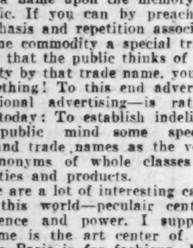

Allen and Norman will present a clever and entertaining line of comedy patter and chatter that is the last word in newness and originality. In the way of comedy variety teams, there are none to surpass Allen and Norman.

Kluting's Entertainers are performing pigeons, rabbits, dogs, cats and other remarkable animals, in a really sensational act which has met with great success on appearances in other cities.

"Tracked by the Police," the latest and one of the best of Rin-Tin-Tin's pictures, is a rattling good melodrama of the old west. The reclamation of the arid lands of the Arizona desert, by the building of the huge Laguna dam for irrigation purposes, figures in the story, and the scenes taken of the dam itself and picturesque features of the vicinity give historic value to a story which would carry itself by its own impetus.

DUNCAN SISTERS STAR 'TOPSY AND EVA' FILM

Burlesque on "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Is a Side-Splitting Comedy.

The big fun hit of the decade "Topsy and Eva" with the famous Duncan sisters in leading roles, has been turned into a screen classic of laughter which will be the feature picture offering at Loew's Grand theater. This is a delightful and whimsically funny burlesque of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and as shown on the screen is even funnier than the original stage version.

"Topsy and Eva" is a comedy film adapted from Rosetta and Vivian Duncan's famous musical comedy of the same name, which played to capacity audiences during its recent tour of the United States.

Many original and unusual situations mark this picture as an "epic of fun." The graveyard scene in which "Topsy" wanders after escaping Simon Legree is an amusing sequence.

The setting and much of the plot of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," on which the musical version was based, are retained in the picturization, although more opportunities are given to Rosetta Duncan, as "Topsy," to reenact her laughable antics.

Great care was taken in assembling the technical and acting staffs of the picture to get persons who were in sympathy with the story and the peculiar brand of comedy that has made the names of Rosetta and Vivian Duncan among the most widely known in the amusement world.

Del Lord was chosen to direct because of his experience as a director for Mack Sennett. The Pathe board recently honored Lord by selecting a series of three of his pictures as the best short comedies produced for their release. Scott Darling, who adapted the story for screen purposes, was formerly supervising director of comedy units at Universal and before his engagement by United Artists to work on "Topsy and Eva" was unit production editor for Famous Players-Lasky.

The two Duncans are cast in the roles which they created for the stage, Rosetta as the impish slave child "Topsy," and Vivian as the doll-like white girl, "Eva." Gibson Gowland is a particularly cruel "Simon Legree," Noble Johnson portrays "Uncle Tom." The rest of the cast is composed of Marjorie Daw, as "Maretta;" Myrtle Ferguson, as "Aunt Ophelia;" Nils Asther, as "George Shelby," and Henry Victor as "St. Claire."

'FORBIDDEN WOMAN' RIALTO PHOTOPLAY

Four high-grade film numbers, two of them features, and two snappy new comedies, will mark the program to be presented at the Rialto theater this week.

"The Forbidden Woman," featuring lovely Jetta Goudal, supported by Victor Varconi and Joseph Schildkraut, with a gripping theme of the love of two brothers for the same woman against a background of war, will be screened by the Rialto the first three days of the week.

It will be accompanied by the comedy, "Mickey's Pals," the first of the series of two-reelers starring Mickey McGuire, the child star, who is "Irish as Dick's hatband."

Patsy and Ruth Miller, Ralph Ince and a dynamic cast combine their talents again to produce "South Sea Love," which will be at the Rialto Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This picturesque drama is marked by the stirring action associated with any Ralph Ince production.

The comedy along with it will be the Paramount production, "Swiss Movements."

Paramount News will accompany both programs changing with the other numbers.

Jetta Goudal is said to rise to sublime heights in "The Forbidden Woman." It is a picture story of love, intrigue and passion, with the scenes laid in Paris and the arid wastes of Morocco.

With the engagement of Addie McPhail, who, in Stern Brothers' comedies, is Mrs. Newlywed; Tom O'Brien, Kate Price, Alfred Allen and Bruce Gordon, the cast in support of Bessie Love and Tom Moore in "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" is complete. It is in production at Universay City under the direction of Willy Wyler.

BIG MYSTERY COMEDY, 'GORILLA,' AT HOWARD

Combining the last word in chills with the last laugh in merriment, the picturization of the famous mystery-comedy, "The Gorilla," is to be shown at the Howard theater this week.

This is the show that rocked Broadway for a year. In its film form it has been changed somewhat in order to offer a new mystery tangle to those who may have been the stage presentation. That a great many have seen it is due to the fact that during the last two years eight stage companies toured this country and Great Britain, scoring a sensational success everywhere.

Weird and novel settings and exceptional lighting effects are said to make the screen version of "The Gorilla" even more spooky than it was on the stage. Charlie Murray and Kelsey, as the two celebrated sleuths; Mulligan and Garrity, who hear all, see all and know nothing, provide the comedy. The supporting cast is all-star, headed by Alice Day, petite leading lady.

In response to numerous queries that have come in to him from motion picture fans all over the world, Edward Small, of Asher, Small & Rogers, producers of "The Gorilla," announced that a real, bona fide 9-foot ape-man actually appeared in the title role as seen on the screen. He tipped the scales at 400 pounds, Mr. Small stated. In one of the scenes he is shown carrying Alice Day from room to room of a house. He also carries Charlie Murray, the chief comedian.

The blood-chilling and scalp-raising screams and situations have been faithfully followed by the screen version, it is reported, with Alfred Santell as director. Santell is famous for his direction of "The Patent Leather Kid."

On the Howard stage will be seen the "Eight Popular Victor Artists," who should prove a real treat to theatergoers.

'ENCHANTED ISLAND' METROPOLITAN FILM

A picture of intense dramatic action and beautiful scenes is "The Enchanted Island," the Metropolitan's offering this week under its popular new policy, "Big pictures, little prices."

Claimed outstanding for its unusual plot and picturesque setting, the story revolves about a girl and three men on an island in the Pacific. A man and his small daughter, while returning from Australia, are shipwrecked and find themselves alone on an island. On the same boat were many animals of a circus, some of which were able to swim ashore and became companions for the girl. Years pass and the girl grows to womanhood with only animals as her friends, until the advent of three men, one of them a young American. Interest and suspense is heightened as the father, fearing for his daughter's safety, because of the presence of a bullying shipmate, disguises her as a boy. Thus she passes until she unknowingly gives the secret away to her lover.

Besides the interesting story, the picture is of entertainment value for its natural setting and scenes. Trained animals with their playful antics are pleasing to an audience.

Henry B. Walthall plays the role of the father excellently. Charlotte Stevens, as the daughter, is well cast; also, Pierre Gondron, as the young lover. Good comedy relief is seen in Floyd Shackleford, the negro cook.

Enrico Leide and his orchestra will accompany the picture with the musical theme. "The Song Is Ended," Irving Berlin's latest ballad. A medley of the latest Broadway hits, "My Melancholy Baby," Gene Austin's newest number, and "Hooray! Hooray! It's Raining," Eddie Cantor's most popular song in Ziegfeld's Follies.

An unusually clever and hilarious comedy, "Hello Judge," with Bobby Ray, and Metropolitan News and Views conclude the program.

Palace.

At the Palace theater this week, moviegoers will see one of the best programs offered at that house in several weeks. Opening on Monday and Tuesday with "Swim, Girl, Swim," in which the inimitable Bebe Daniels is starred, the week continues on the same high plane.

On Wednesday, Colleen Moore, another intensely popular female star, will be seen in "Twinkletoes," a story of London's Limehouse and a musical comedy queen. It is eminently entertaining.

"College Day," said by critics and authorities to be the truest picture ever made of modern college life, will be featured at the Palace theater this week on Thursday and Friday.

"Majave Kid," a thrilling western, will close the week on Saturday.

'MOTHERHOOD' HELD THREE DAYS AT RIALTO

Having set a record for the best single week at the year, "Motherhood," the distinctive motion picture, will be held over at the Rialto theater for three more days—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—of this week, Manager W. T. Murray, of the Rialto, and Bob Savini, who is sponsoring the showing, announced yesterday.

"The office telephone rang constantly Thursday and Friday, patrons asking if there was a chance of the picture being held over," Savini said. Therefore, after considerable telegraphic dickering with headquarters, permission was received Friday to hold "Motherhood" over.

"Motherhood," an innovation in motion pictures, depicts the greatest adventure in a woman's life—childbirth, and points a powerful moral lesson to women.

Paramount Newsreel scenes of the arrival and tremendous welcome accorded Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh in Mexico City after his epochal flight from Washington are being rushed to the Rialto and are expected to be on the screen Monday to run during the remaining three days with "Motherhood."

Literally hundreds of men and women—for children under sixteen are not permitted to see it—thanked Manager Murray last week for showing "Motherhood" at the Rialto, thus contributing to the decision to retain it for three days more, he said.

GOOD SCREEN BILL AT PONCE DE LEON

A thoroughly entertaining bill of screen entertainment is on the slate for patrons of the Ponce de Leon theater this week. Opening with a comedy, the remainder of the week is devoted to melodramas and romances, all of unusual merit.

"Clancy's Kosher Wedding," with the eminent character actor, George Sidney, in the leading role, is the feature at the Ponce de Leon for Monday only. Of the many films builded around a son of Erin and a daughter of Abraham, "Clancy's Kosher Wedding" is, perhaps, the best.

"Sweet Rosie O'Grady," with Shirley Mason and Cullen Landis featured, will be shown at the Ponce de Leon on Tuesday only. One of the finest and tenderest love romances that the silver sheet has ever held is "The Tender Hour," featuring the handsome Ben Lyon and beautiful Billie Dove. "The Tender Hour" will be shown on Wednesday only.

A grippingly thrilling drama of the civil war days will be shown to Ponce de Leon theater on Thursday and Friday. It is "The Heart of Maryland," and is internationally famous as a stage success.

James Oliver Curwood's "The Slayer" will be shown on Saturday only at the Ponce de Leon theater.

West End.

The stark drama of a man whom Fate has conspired to send to the bottomless dregs of disgrace and despair, is "Framed," starring the popular Milton Sills, which plays Monday and Tuesday at the West End theater.

On Wednesday at the West End Adolphe Menjou will be featured in "Service for Ladies," in which the suave Adolphe demonstrates to all concerned that he is the foremost "gentleman" artist of the screen.

"Forever After," with Mary Astor and Lloyd Huges, will delight West End patrons on Thursday and Friday. This picture is full of entertainment and replete with thrills and laughs.

"Judgment of the Hills" is the feature for Saturday only.

ERLANGER THEATER SHOWS 'MY MARYLAND'

Xmas Week Attraction To Have Over 100 in Cast.

With the presentation of "My Maryland," the Dorothy Donnelly-Sigmund Rombery operetta based on the story of Barbara Frietchie and her patriotic act in the days of 1862, the Messrs. Shubert have given to the music and dramatic entertainment lovers of America another worthwhile production, one of the latest of their offerings of a series in this field which began with "Maytime" and has included "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince." "My Maryland" opens an engagement at the Erlanger theater starting Christmas week, Monday, December 26, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, and it should prove to be the crowning musical event of the season.

Mr. Romberg is said to feel proud of the score of "My Maryland," and well he should be, for it is musicianly at every point. He has shown his adeptness in welding original creations and tunes of "Dixie" of 1861 war days. As a composer of march numbers, Mr. Romberg is in the Sousa class or higher. He provided some stirring tunes for "The Student Prince" and so far as popular appeal is concerned, he has excelled them in "My Maryland." In the operetta, which is about to open here, it is the galloping, feet-provoking, lusty "Your Land and My Land" number that brings down the house whenever it is sung. In addition, there is an attractive love duet, "The Same Silver Moon," and several excellent quartets and quintets that have a charming, old-fashioned flavor about them. A dramatic number concerning "John Barleycorn is used with admirable effect. Musically, "My Maryland" is quite worthy to hold up its head with the many operettas that have come along during the past half dozen years.

But the music is not all that there is to this operetta. Miss Donnelly's book and lyrics possess a quality and entertainmen value not usually met with. The story unfolded in "My Maryland" evokes a response from everyone for whom youth, romance, adventure and patriotism have an appeal. There are thrills to be had, and there is merriment rippling upon the surface. Also there is wistfulness resounding from its depths.

"My Maryland" will be presented by an exceptionally fine cast numbering over 100; besides a large mixed chorus there is a special male chorus of picked, well-trained voices. The piece was staged by J. C. Huffman. The settings were designed and built by Watson Barratt and the entire production is under the personal supervision of J. J. Shubert. Mail orders, accompanied by proper remittance, are now being received. The seat sale will open at the Erlanger box office Thursday morning.

EIGHT VICTOR ARTISTS HOWARD STAGE BILL

The Howard considers itself most fortunate in being able to offer its patrons this week a stage attraction extraordinary—the eight popular Victor artists.

More than 700 concerts have been given by the "Eight Popular Victor Artists" during the past seasons, their travels having taken them into nearly every state in the union and to the principal cities of Canada. As the name of the organization would indicate, these artists have become even better known through their Victor records, and the personal appearance on one program of eight Victor artists is most unusual. The success of this organization has been continuous, and concerts to crowded houses have become an annual event in many cities. The program is given in English throughout and is composed of semi-classical, popular and humorous selections, both vocal and instrumental in solo and concerted form, with a dash of American jazz added for spice and delivered with a superb artistry and balance.

Henry Burr is known the world over for the records of his delightful tenor voice. He first became famous as a church singer, but gave this up when his Victor records won him a foremost place among the artists of the day.

Billy Murray, of the rapid-fire trumpet voice, has become known as "the funniest man that makes records."

Monroe Silver is best known through his "Cohen" records. His talent for mimicry of the song and speech of the East Side Jew is remarkable, and he has wide experience as an entertainer.

James Stanley, baritone, is an artist in the forefront of American singers and has made many appearances in concert and oratorio.

Stanley Baughman, basso sang with the Mendelssohn quartet for several seasons and is a pianist of ability.

Carl Mathieu, lyric tenor, has had considerable concert and oratorio experience. He has been a member of the Mendelssohn quartet of New York for the past six seasons.

Sam Herman, xylophonist, has developed a remarkable technique on this little known instrument, and is also an accomplished pianist.

Frank Banta, pianist and accompanist, has specialized in jazz. Nobody is more versatile in devising new ragtime effects at the keyboard.

The Peerless quartet, with various changes in personnel, has been singing for the Victor for many years.

CONDUCTED BY LORENZO JONES JR.

LOEW'S VAUDEVILLE OFFERS BIG VARIETY

For the pre-Christmas amusement week in Atlanta Loew's Grand theater will offer an unusually large vaudeville bill of the all-star variety, the headline attraction being the beautiful dancing act of Theodore Adolphus and Grace Eastman with the famous London Palace Girls entitled "Dance Poems."

Adolphus and Eastman as a team have combined talents in one of the prettiest dancing creations ever staged. Both are stars in their particular line and both are originators of many dancing steps. Raymond Sykes presents several additional dances.

The London Palace Girls scored an immense success in the Broadway production of the Duncan Sisters' show "Topsy and Eva" and offer one of the speediest ensemble dance organizations on the stage today.

Maude Powers and Vernon Wallace, two well-known vaudevillians, will bring a musical comedy skit entitled "Georgia," as their contribution to the program. These artists are versatile and accomplished and offer a little bit of everything in the way of entertainment in their sketch.

Much of the comedy on the new program will be produced by Ben Rodero and Danny Maley in their burlesque skit, "Ask Me Something." They bring a fast line of patter and gage and offer some funny comic song hits.

Jack Shanley and Gladys Kern will present an appealing little skit garnished with clean humor entitled, "Hits and a Miss." They are able singers and include many popular song hits on their program.

The opening number will be that of Paul Nolan, "The Jesting Swede," who appears in a comedy juggling turn. In addition to being a real comedian Nolan is a skillful juggler and performs many marvelous feats.

Along with this great vaudeville bill Loew's Grand will present as a feature picture "Topsy and Eva," the big comedy sensation with the famous Duncan sisters in leading roles.

'HIGH SCHOOL HERO' KEITH'S GEORGIA BILL

Basketball in its most exciting moments is the big scene in the "High School Hero," featured film at Keith's Georgia this week. The story deals with the activities of a typical American high school and treats in humorous vein the problems of the students. There is fine romance, a great deal of humor and one of the most hotly contested basketball games woven into the plot of the story.

In this comedy of high school life Sally Phipps plays the queen of the campus, a typical high school flapper who is the heart's desire of every "sheik" in the institution. Sally, however, never really gives her affections to any boy exclusively, but flirts coquettishly with all of them.

Charles Paddock, internationally famous sprinter, has the role of coach in the "High School Hero" and makes the most of his opportunities to instill the school spirit into the students. That he has succeeded is amply attested by the results of the game.

This picture of high school life is something different from anything that has been brought to the screen before, inasmuch as every other type of youth has been shown excepting the high school student with their activities and athletics.

Madison.

"Clancy's Kosher Wedding" opens the week at the Madison theater in East Atlanta this week, and patrons of this house on Monday will find in "Clancy's Kosher Wedding" a really delightful picture.

Peter B. Kyne's "Jim, the Conqueror," will be shown at the Madison on Tuesday. William Boyd is starred in the picture. "Judgment of the Hills," starring vehicle of Virginia Vall," is slated to entertain Madison patrons on Wednesday.

For Thursday Manager Swint has secured "The Heart of the Yukon," with John Bowers in the leading role. This will be followed on Friday by "By Whose Hand" starring Ricardo Cortez.

Erlanger Theater Presents 'Ziegfeld Follies' Monday

If memory serves one correctly, never has an attraction of such fame and proportions as the Ziegfeld Follies, which will be seen at the Erlanger theater, for three days, starting tomorrow (Monday), with matinee Wednesday, been sent on a transcontinental tour of the United States. For 20 years the world-famous Follies have been the outstanding annual event in New York city, and so consistently successful has each edition been and so prolonged have been the metropolitan runs that until now it has been impracticable to send the great spectacle on tour to all cities, but now, through special transportation arrangements, by which the huge company travels in its own train, and since it has been found within the realm of possibility to secure famous stars for the tour of the Follies, the cities outside of New York, Boston and Chicago will have an opportunity of seeing what is perhaps the world's most celebrated musical entertainment intact, and, it is understood, in all its gorgeousness, exactly as presented annually at the New Amsterdam theater, New York. For the 20th edition, which is to be seen here, Joseph Urban designed the settings and Andre Monteux supplied the lavish tableaux, which have ever been a feature of the Follies. The music is by George B. McConnell and James Hanley. Gene Buck and Irving Caesar are responsible for the lyrics, rhymes and jingles, while the comedy scenes are the work of William K. Wells. Brilliant names are found in the cast, including Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn and their Denishawn Dancers, internationally famous dance stars, also a special ballet and many principals whose names are familiar to theatergoers throughout the land. George E. Wintz, under whose direction the Follies tour is being made, is responsible for the statement that every conceivable preparation has been carefully looked after and no possible expense has been spared to make the tour of the Follies a historical one in every way. Seats for all performances may be had at the Erlanger box office and at Phillips & Crew Piano Co.

Tenth Street.

Delightful comedy of the highest type will be served up to patrons of the Tenth Street theater this week with the showing on Monday and Tuesday of "Adam and Evil," starring Aileen Pringle and Lew Cody.

"Judgment of the Hills," slated for showings of Wednesday only, is another picture that will prove popular. It is a prize story produced in a big-time manner and thoroughly entertaining.

"New York," the true and real story of the famous city's Tin Pan Alley will be shown on Thursday and Friday at the Tenth Street theater. Ricardo Cortez is seen as a young Irving Berlin and Lois Wilson as the young society girl.

"Paradise for Two," with Richard Dix and Betty Bronson, will be shown on Saturday only.

Uproarious Laughter Hit Current Forsyth Vehicle

Clever, scintillating comedy of the sort that can sparkle only at its point on the stage, is in store for Atlanta theater-goers this week with the presentation by the Forsyth players of "One of the Family," at the Forsyth theater all week.

Not in a long while has such a comedy gem been offered to the local stock lovers. It is a play which is replete with laughs and comedy situations of the finest kind, and the play as a whole may well be expected to take its place as one of the finest comedies seen here in several seasons.

Miss Ivy Mertons and Walter Regan, leading people of the Forsyth company, will this week have untold opportunities to display their exceptional ability, and judging from past performances, it is quite a settled fact that they will give splendid accounts of themselves.

Regan to Lead.

Mr. Regan will be seen in the leading role, that of an unmarried chap, who has for a good many years, been the support of his family, which includes an old and very argumentary aunt. The play opens with the family awaiting the young man's return from a summer vacation.

Imagine their greatest horror and surprise when the son comes home with his attendant baggage and sunburn—and a wife!

Imagine that!

Well, that supplies the first of a series of great comedy situations which will keep this week's audiences at the Forsyth theater in one, long continuous round of laughter.

The aunt takes it pretty hard. But reconciliation is effected and so in the course of events, the man, who has established himself with his wife in another residence, invites his "boss" out to dinner at his place.

"Demon Rum" Enters.

The family including the aunt immediately takes it upon themselves to encamp at the son's residence and attempt to supervise the preparations for the "boss." This drives the said "son" to drink and strangely enough, he soon becomes quite inebriated, so that, on the arrival of the "boss," a very "stewed" host is on deck.

To cut a long and excrutiatingly funny matter short, the exasperated and "lit" young man finally winds up the evening's celebration by knocking all the teeth out of the boss's nephew. Then comes the end of the second act.

The third act is another long line of laughter, which comes about as a result of the young man attempting to "square" himself with his employer.

Broadway says it's a great show.

FAMOUS PATRICOLA TOPS KEITH'S BILL

Patricola, that famous exponent of jazz art and one of the big features at Keith's Georgia this week, is not only one of the best entertainers on the American stage, but is also known as the richest woman in vaudeville. There are thousands of singers and almost as many violinists, but there is only one Patricola. She is a wholesome, hearty, attractive young woman with a message of health and happiness to carry to the amusement world. Patricola is not unknown to Atlanta theater-goers and has a host of friends who will glady give her a big welcome.

One of the most pretentious dancing acts of the season is represented in the offering this week of "Fountain O'Dance" with Lorelie Lee and an all-star cast of dance artists with a program which embraces a wide range of dance steps and original creations.

For real humor and laughing comedy we recommend "The Gyp," as presented by Fern Redmon and George Wells. This team of clever comedians has taken the Gypsy fortune-teller as their theme for some bright bits, but, in addition, Wells is counted as one of the best eccentric dancers now on the boards.

Roy Smack, a Victor and Columbia record star, as well as the inventor of the "silver bell banjo," makes his first local appearance this week. Smeck is one of the few nationally known instrumental soloists and the local musicians will want to see and hear this "wizard" on the banjo and ukelele. A marvelous exhibition of strength and gymnastics will be presented by Black and Gold, noted exponents of athletic work, who present their stunts in a beautiful setting.

Norman Kerry and Pauline Stark will be featured players in "Fallen Angels," the Arthur Somers Roche Red Rock magazine story which will go into production at Universal City next week. Ward Crane is also cast in this feature, which Edward Laemle will direct.

LOEW'S VAUDEVILLE OFFERS BIG VARIETY

For the pre-Christmas amusement week in Atlanta Loew's Grand theater will offer an unusually large vaudeville bill of the all-star variety, the headline attraction being the beautiful dancing act of Theodore Adolphus and Grace Eastman with the famous London Palace Girls entitled "Dance Poems."

Adolphus and Eastman as a team have combined talents in one of the prettiest dancing creations ever staged. Both are stars in their particular line and both are originators of many dancing steps. Raymond Sykes presents several additional dances.

The London Palace Girls scored an immense success in the Broadway production of the Duncan Sisters' show "Topsy and Eva" and offer one of the speediest ensemble dance organizations on the stage today.

Maude Powers and Vernon Wallace, two well-known vaudevillians, will bring a musical comedy skit entitled "Georgia," as their contribution to the program. These artists are versatile and accomplished and offer a little bit of everything in the way of entertainment in their sketch.

Much of the comedy on the new program will be produced by Ben Rodero and Danny Maley in their burlesque skit, "Ask Me Something." They bring a fast line of patter and gage and offer some funny comic song hits.

Jack Shanley and Gladys Kern will present an appealing little skit garnished with clean humor entitled, "Hits and a Miss." They are able singers and include many popular song hits on their program.

The opening number will be that of Paul Nolan, "The Jesting Swede," who appears in a comedy juggling turn. In addition to being a real comedian Nolan is a skillful juggler and performs many marvelous feats.

Along with this great vaudeville bill Loew's Grand will present as a feature picture "Topsy and Eva," the big comedy sensation with the famous Duncan sisters in leading roles.

Miss Carolyn Pierce To Wed Fielding Dillard January 3

Miss Carolyn Pierce, lovely young daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Mann Pierce, whose engagement is announced today to Fielding Dillard, the wedding to be solemnized at 4:30 o'clock, Tuesday, January 3, at the Emory Theological chapel.

Of cordial interest to their friends is the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Carolyn Pierce and Fielding Dillard.

Miss Pierce is the eldest daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Mann Pierce. Her father is the editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. On her paternal side she is the granddaughter of the late Thomas Foster Pierce and Susan Sinquefield Pierce, and the great granddaughter of Lovick Pierce. Through her mother, who was Miss Bessie John Almand, of Rockdale county, she is descended from the Longshores, of Pennsylvania, and the Stackhouses, of England. Her sisters are Misses Susan and Mary Pierce.

The lovely bride-elect is a graduate of Randolph-Macon Woman's college, where she was a member of the Alpha Delta Pi fraternity, and later she secured her master's degree from Emory university. In September she returned from several months' travel abroad.

Mr. Dillard is the eldest son of the late Rev. Miles H. Dillard and of Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, prominent in W. C. T. U. work. He is a nephew of Rev. W. B. Dillard, of Athens, Ga., and is a brother of Mrs. Lucian Whipple, of Cochran, and Miles H. Dillard, of Warrenton. He is a graduate of Emory university, where he was a popular member of the Chi Phi fraternity. During the world war he served as an officer overseas, and now holds a responsible position with the Charles E. Merrill company.

The marriage will occur late in the afternoon of January 3 at the Emory university theological chapel, and will be witnessed by only the families of the bride and groom and their closest friends.

Misses Frances Boykin, Aline Fraser, Anne Huffman and Ella B. Huffman. Assisting in entertaining will be the hostess' mother, Mrs. William H. Bailes; Misses Penelope Brown, Nancy Downing, Dorothy Mae Phillips and Betty Cole. About 125 of the school girl set have been invited.

Miss Cubbedge Weds Charles P. Brown.

Guyton, Ga., December 17.—Dr. and Mrs. Bartimus Williams Cubbedge announce the marriage of their daughter, Cathrine Carolina, to Charles P. Brown, Jr., of Atlanta. The marriage having taken place in Lafayette, Ala., May 29, 1927.

Simple Ceremony Unites Miss Hart and John Hearst

New York, December 17.—(United News.)—Simplicity was the keynote of the pre-holiday wedding this afternoon that made attractive Dorothy Hart, a prominent member of the Los Angeles younger social set, the bride of John Randolph Hearst, third son of Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

With only members of the two families as witnesses, the ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Dr. Henry Evertson Cobb in the West End Collegiate Reformed church, West Seventy-seventh street, between Broadway and West End avenue.

The decorations at the church consisted of greens and lilies, and at the close of the service a small, informal reception was held at Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's apartment, No. 137 Riverside drive. Only relatives and a few intimate friends attended the reception.

The new Mrs. Hearst, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Hart, of Los Angeles, was a vision of loveliness. She dispensed with the usual bridal habiliments of white satin and lace and chose a stunning afternoon frock of pigeon-grey satin, modeled on simple lines. The bodice was fashioned with a tight girdle and close-fitting sleeves and the pleated skirt draped into a wide flare at the hemline. Slippers and stockings of pale grey and a small grey felt hat completed the effective bridal ensemble. A handsome cluster of deep lavender orchids was carried by the bride.

Dorothy, who was presented in marriage by her father, had but one attendant, Nancy Wood, of Lansing, Mich., who served as maid of honor. Miss Wood was charmingly attired in a bolero gown of green crepe, combined with cream-colored lace, and small green hat, trimmed with tiny green feathers. A colorful touch was added by her bouquet of lavender cyclamen.

Due to the absence in California of his older brothers, George Hearst and William Randolph Hearst, Jr., the youthful bridegroom had George Weiler, of Los Angeles, for his best man. There were no ushers.

Mr. Hearst and his bride, who is a graduate of Miss Bennet's school in Millbrook, N. Y., will spend their honeymoon in Havana and in the south, and later will make their home in Atlanta, where Mr. Hearst will continue his studies at Oglethorpe university.

Miss Ethel Martin Is Given Shower.

Miss Nellie Kate Martin entertained Saturday at her home on Stokes avenue with a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Ethel Martin, bride-elect of this month.

Huge white hearts strung with tiny wedding bells formed an arch in the doorways leading from the living room. On the console table a miniature wedding party was placed. A larger wedding party graced the center of the dining table, while holly and mistletoe gave a suggestion of the Christmas season.

Miss Martin was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. A. N. Martin; Miss Emily Lipscomb, two sisters of the bride-elect, Mrs. J. C. Hardy and Mrs. M. C. Strickland.

The invited guests were Mrs. Walter Ward, Mrs. Everett Millican, Mrs. J. E. Slider, Mrs. J. W. Ham, Mrs. Zode Smith, Mrs. Morgan Blake, Mrs. Clifford Bradley, Mrs. C. M. Stovall, Mrs. Glenn Martin, Mrs. J. C. Martin, Mrs. J. H. Rusk, Mrs. L. C. McClure, Mrs. Cortez Suttles, Mrs. Aileen McCain, Mrs. Will K. Coley, Jr., Mrs. Raymond Biles, Mrs. L. F. Moore, Mrs. Ernest Sorrells, Misses Sarah Pierce, Almeta Pierce, Edith Thomas, Hallie Young, Ada Smith, Joy Williams, Sadie Miles, Lucile Miles, Teresa Humphries, Lois Bell, Katherine Holly, Pearl Harris, Alberta Miller, Elizabeth Martin and Cleo Bradley.

Christmas Gaieties At the Seminary.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Scott and Miss Emma Scott entertained at dinner Thursday evening, the honor guests being the members of the faculty and the resident students of the Washington seminary.

The tables were decorated with red candles, red bonbon holders, place cards and booklets with red covers containing the Christmas hymns and were sung between courses by all of the guests. Miss Marguerite Battle and Mr. Scott gave the vocal numbers on the program; Miss Cooper a violin number, and Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, a reading.

The annual Christmas tree was enjoyed Friday when a host of little boys and girls gathered for the occasion. Filled stockings and other gifts went to the brothers and sisters of the children who could not come to the tree.

Each class was busy last week with its special activity.

The seniors packed a box for their protege at Vashti. The juniors remembered the little ones in the children's ward at the Grady with stockings, toys and clothes. The sophomores fitted out the two girls at the Home for the Incurable with necessary and pretty clothes. The freshman eighth and seventh grades made different families happy with well-filled baskets. The seminary closed on December 16 for two weeks holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Celebrate Anniversary.

Seventy-five friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Bishop assembled Sunday, December 11, at the Mt. Zion dormitory, the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary celebration of their marriage. Mrs. Bishop was 72 years old December 6, and Mr. Bishop was 76 December 12. Their wedding day was December 13, 1877.

W. M. Bishop, the youngest member of the family, acted as toastmaster, calling upon his father, R. R. Bishop, who responded by recalling the past. Others responding were Clarence Titus, W. H. Williams, Rev. W. S. Hamilton, C. Wilcox, J. T. Bishop, Mrs. Charles Campbell and Dr. Martin.

The guests included the following members of the R. R. Bishop family: J. T. Bishop and Mrs. J. L. Gammon, of Mt. Zion, W. M. Bishop, Mrs. T. B. McGran and Mrs. L. S. Shell, of Atlanta; Mrs. T. H. McBurnett, of Bowdon; Mrs. J. B. Barnett, of Senoia; Mrs. J. M. Akin and Mrs. F. F. Taut, of Waco; Mrs. V. M. Walton, of Hapeville, together with 36 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Among the friends present were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Titus and son, Howard, of Atlanta, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hamilton and family, of Mt. Zion, and the faculty of the Mt. Zion seminary.

Monday evening, December 19 the annual installation of the officers of Oakland City chapter, O. E. S., will be held in their hall at 7:30 o'clock in Oakland City. Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby worthy grand marshal of the general grand chapter, will be the installing officer, assisted by Mrs. Esther Hansen, grand marshal; Mrs. Hazel Holmes, grand chaplain, and Mrs. Kate Massey, grand organist.

National P.-T. A. Convention To Be Held in Cleveland

Preparations for the 32d annual convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers to be held April 30 to May 5 at Cleveland, Ohio, are going forward rapidly and the preliminary program will be issued early in January. Among the speakers will be Dr. D. A. Thom, Boston, Mass., authority on mental hygiene; Dr. W. E. Blatz, of St. George's school, Toronto, Canada, specialist in parental training; Frank H. Cheley, author of "The Job of Being a Dad," and Dr. Randall J. Condon, superintendent of schools, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Through the courtesy of the Playground and Recreation Association of America the play night and the recreation classes will be conducted by John Martin, whose magnetic leadership is known to all those who have attended a recreation congress.

Among the leaders at the twelve round table conferences will be Dr. Thom, Dr. Blatz, Dr. Gary C. Myers, of Western Reserve university, Ohio, and Newell Edson, of the American Social Hygiene association, New York city.

Rate cards from the headquarters hotel will be sent out immediately after the first of the year, and in view of the exceptional arrangements made by the management for securing accommodations at reasonable rates, it is hoped that all delegates desiring to stay in a hotel will stay at the Hotel Cleveland. For those preferring private entertainment the local committee is arranging to offer rooms in homes for a very moderate charge.

Brenau College Campus Notes.

Monday evening, December 12, Epsilon chapter of Zeta Phi Eta, the honor professional sorority in the Brenau School of Oratory, produced Percy Mackaye's "The Scarecrow" in the Brenau auditorinm to a large audience. The annual meeting of the League of Women Voters will be held at the Henry Grady hotel January 11 and 12. Mrs. R. E. Rollins, third vice president, and chairman of hospitality of the League of Women Voters, made arrangements for the meeting and the program for the forthcoming year will be adopted. Mrs. S. D. Halley and Mrs. W. C. Robinson are working on the program and urge members having suggestions to send them to headquarters, 356 Candler annex. The program is divided into three sections, educational, political and organization.

The items suggested on the political are as follows: A one-chamber council of 15 members, one elected from each ward by the city at large, and three from the city at large; proper registration laws properly enforced; a school board of seven members elected at large; at least 30 per cent of the city's gross income to the schools; reduction of the city democratic executive committee to 24 members; primaries held not earlier than October 1. Mrs. Bailey urges that all members come to the annual meeting prepared to discuss the program and offer suggestions. The poll tax must be paid by Monday, December 19. After that date a penalty is assessed against each woman in Fulton county whose name is on the registration list.

Mrs. Bailey announces the appointment of Mrs. Harvey Payne, chairman of membership. This committee is one of the most important of the administrative committees in the league and a feature of its work is the membership campaign which takes place each year during February. Mrs. Payne is especially qualified to head the committee as she was vice chairman in 1925 and assumed the head of the committee when the chairman, Mrs. Paul LaBlant, was called out of town. She is planning new features to add to the campaign.

The committees for 1928 are holding meetings to discuss the work for the coming year and to make suggestions to the program committee. The first meeting of the ward officers' council, under the leadership of the new chairman, Mrs. G. L. Sink, took place during the past week. The old committees are also meeting, closing the work for the present year.

Mrs. Guy L. Sink left Atlanta for a visit to her parents in Chicago during the Christmas season. Mrs. Sink has resigned her place as assistant director in the league, and on her return will confine her work to the activities of the ward officers' council. The league has secured the services of Miss Katherine E. Bosworth, who assumed her duties in the office December 15. She is a young woman of charming personality and a graduate of Oglethorpe university.

Demonstration Club To Give Candy Party.

The Ben Hill Home Demonstration club is to have a Christmas party at 1:30 o'clock Monday, December 19, at the school. The making of Christmas candy will be demonstrated by Miss Lucy Wood. Business will be transacted.

Gift Expectations

REALIZED AT ALLEN'S

GREAT expectations they are—and how they run riot at Christmas time! The worry and flurry that is, after all, only fun, in making out list after list, deciding and re-deciding what to give Mary Louise, "who has everything!" The thrill of shopping in the crowded stores—and then—the super-thrill of walking into Allen's and finding Mary Louise's gift waiting for you! That doesn't happen just everywhere!

And then, on Christmas Day, when Mary Louise opens her gift and fairly squeals with rapture (she'd always wanted an imported scarf!) And when Dad fumbles with the holly ribbon round his packages, and Mother pulls hers with frantic excitement from its tissue wrappings! What happiness tugs at the heart when their faces break into smiles and their voices tremble a little in trying to express all their gratification and delight.

It's so easy to fulfill their desires—so easy to grant their precious hopes. At Allen's are treasures fit for a king, and Allen's has great expectations of supplying your every Christmas need!

Charlotte, being rather in the social whirl of the younger set, adores to appear sophisticated. This enameled compact, with its cigarette compartment, will positively thrill her! She'll love dangling it carelessly at bridge tables! ($9.25.)

Aunt Louise is the kind of woman who inspired the invention of earrings—tall and stately, with poise and charm—like Alice Joyce, you know. She can wear the tailored button, the graceful drop or the gypsy loops with equally fascinating effect. Loops, $3.95; Buttons, $2.95; Drops, $8.95.

He's a business man, is Dad, brusque, systematic, to the point! His desk is always piled with work, but somehow manages to be neat, too! A desk set, as pictured, will warm the cockles of his business-like heart! It's what he needs! Set, $28.90.

A girl at heart—a girl who loves frivolous, luxurious gifts at Christmas time—that's Mother. And most people feel called upon to present her with prosaic, practical presents! It's a shame, too, when she'd so love a gift bottle of Coty's Paris. ($6.75.)

The nice thing about Francesca is the way her personal belongings express her personality! She's a precious person, too—rare, lovely, original! "La Precieuse," this toilet set of three pieces, mirror, comb and brush, in cornelian or rose on amber, will just suit her. The mirror, not pictured, is included at $22.50.

Bill declares that Christmas "ain't what it used to be" in the days of Mr. Pickwick and hot punch! But watch his face when he finds this musical decanter on the Christmas tree! It will be worth much more than the $15 you paid for his present to see Brother Bill's grin!

Drama League Will Present Film Romance

The Drama league will present "Richard the Lion-Hearted," the film romance which is the screen version of Sir Walter Scott's "The Talisman," Sunday afternoon, December 18, at 3:30 o'clock at the Tenth Street theater. There will be no tickets sold for this production on Sunday. The theater was given at cost to the organization by courtesy of the management, which is in sympathy with the educational work of the Drama league. The public is invited.

Based on "The Talisman," Sir Walter Scott's story so familiar to book lovers the world over, "Richard the Lion-Hearted" has a two-point appeal. For those who seek entertainment alone, it unfolds a story of compelling interest in lavish settings, that are a source of constant delight. For students of history or literature, it is a faithful representation of the life of the period in which it was laid.

Mrs. A. Ten Eyck Brown, president of the Drama league, urges all members and friends to see this stupendous film romance, that aside from its appeal as a collossal spectacular drama, features Wallace Berry and an all-star cast of box office magnets. The screen version deals with one of the most interesting periods of English history.

Memorial Group Holds Meeting.

The Atlanta Ladies' Memorial association held its December meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. William A. Wright, Friday afternoon. Plans were discussed for future work of the association, especially the proposed presentation, to about 200 Confederate Veterans in Fulton county, with gold memory medals, sometime in January, 1928.

An entertaining program was rendered by Mrs. Benjamin Parker, who gave two vocal selections, Mrs. Williamson, two instrumental solos and Mrs. Mary J. Blackburn, who delighted her audience with two readings.

Many Parties Assemble At Biltmore Tea-Dance.

The tea-dance Saturday afternoon at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel assembled a large number of the younger social contingent. The affair was held in the Pompeiian grillroom from 5 until 7 o'clock. Mack Davis and his orchestra, who are here for the holiday season, furnished the dance music.

Members of the Scabbard and Blade, honorary military fraternity at Georgia Tech, entertained the largest party of the afternoon. The affair is an annual event, closing the week of initiation of the pledges, and was in compliment to the regimental sponsors and pledges to "M" company, Second regiment. Covers were placed for Misses Billie Johnson, Scabbard and Blade sponsor; Imogene Edwards, of Chattanooga, Tenn., regimental sponsor, and the following company sponsors: Harriett Durham, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Christine Wolfe, Harriette Wynne, Virginia Riske, Julia Gardener, Juanita Lawrence, of Tallahassee, Fla.; Leanora Briggs, Arlene Friethe, Josephine Crafts, Claire Jones, Jeannette Staples, Anne Fletcher, Elizabeth Jenkins, Elosie Kilpatrick, Lila Porcher and Mary Dodd and the pledges to "M" company, J. Ripley-Bell Wedding Plans Are of Interest To Society

Of cordial interest is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Monica Ripley, daughter of the Rev. Reginald John Ripley, of Seat Pleasant, Md., to Hunter Seaborn Bell, of Atlanta, the marriage to take place Wednesday afternoon, December 21, at 3 o'clock, in historic Addison's chapel, in Seat Pleasant, of which Mr. Ripley is rector.

The ceremony will be performed by the bride-elect's father, Rev. R. J. Ripley, and she will be given in marriage by her brother, R. L. A. Ripley. Mrs. Margery Ripley will act as her sister's maid of honor, and Misses Frances Boykin, of Atlanta, and Val Lynch, of Washington, D. C., will act as bridesmaids. Little Gene Crews, of Hamlet, N. C., and Barbara Savage, of Washington, D. C., will be junior bridesmaids.

John K. Ottley, Jr., of Atlanta, will be best man for Mr. Bell, and the ushers include Noel Ripley, brother of the bride-elect, and Charles Berry, of Washington, D. C., Homer Patterson, of Washington, D. C., and James A. Dombrosky, formerly of Atlanta, who is attending Harvard university.

A reception follows the ceremony at St. Matthews rectory. Mr. Bell is the only son of Mrs. R. E. Bell, of Dawson, Ga. He was graduated with honors from Emory university, where he was a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, and has been connected with The Journal since 1921, the year of his graduation, holding the position of city editor.

Mrs. Garland Embry Honors Miss Wilson.

Among the entertainments being given for Miss Janet Wilson, whose marriage to H. B. Longino occurs at an early date, was the bridge-tea given by Mrs. Garland Embry Saturday afternoon.

Those invited were Mesdames L. B. Davidson, John Brooke, Herbert Squires, O. A. Spruell, T. A. Clayton, J. I. Hosford, R. H. Bell, Beall G. Wilson, J. B. Tuggle, Florrie Faulkner, Misses Marion Wilson, Lucyle Johnson, Emily Longino, Susan and Corinne Clayton, Margaret, Ethel and Louise Grant.

State Street P.-T. A. Meet Largely Attended.

The State Street P.-T. A. met Friday afternoon. The school made 98.1 in attendance last week and the P.-T. A. measured up to the children's fine record with a splendid attendance. Mrs. G. W. Cranford presided. Splendid reports from the various committee heads were made.

Mrs. Charles J. Foster, president of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, was introduced and spoke on child welfare. Miss Annie Cherry Schorb's first grade carried off the attendance prize.

The refreshment committee, including Mrs. J. A. Johnston, Mrs. H. D. Lawson, Mrs. B. L. Garvin, Mrs. D. E. Philpott and Mrs. G. L. Smith, has done splendid work this year and well-earned praise was given each one. Everyone wished the lady sitting next to her a merry Christmas and a delightful holiday spirit reigned during the social half hour, when the ladies were served coffee and sandwiches.

Douglas-McCombs Wedding Is of Wide Social Interest

Characterized by unusual beauty and simplicity was the wedding of Miss Alice Mason Douglas and Stewart William McCombs, which was solemnized at the First Methodist Episcopal church, south, at 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The impressive bench ceremony was performed by Dr. Samuel T. Senter in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

The church with its tasteful decorations formed a setting of rich beauty for the wedding group. The choir loft, chancel and pulpit were banked with palms and foliage plants while the balcony and chancel rails were garlanded with southern smilax. Amid this greenery were floor baskets of Easter lilies and around the pulpit were baskets of lilies and seven single candlesticks, holding unshaded lighted tapers. Three-branched candelabra stood at each end of the chancel. The pews reserved for the family were marked with beautiful clusters of white roses and lilies.

Appropriate nuptial music was rendered by Miss Ethel Beyer, organist, and Mrs. Charles L. Douglas. Mrs. Douglas sang "All For You" preceding the ceremony, and "A Perfect Song" at its conclusion. The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was played as the wedding group entered and Mendelssohn's wedding march as a recessional.

The groomsmen were J. S. Roberts, I. G. Wilkes, Joe H. McCombs, brother of the groom, and Roy Petty.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. J. Walter Bailey, Mrs. Trammell Trice, Miss Sara McArthur and Miss Bertha Douglas, the bride's sister.

Mrs. Thomas P. Wright was her sister's matron of honor and the maid of honor was Miss Ruth Douglas, the bride's younger sister. The bride's attendants were gowned alike in pink taffeta with an iridescent and gold sheen. Their dresses were fashioned robe de style. Lovely rhinestone ornaments, the bride's gift, fastened the tulle and taffeta to the shoulders. Each carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses with clusters of pink and lavender sweet peas.

The flower girl was Margaret Schilling, petite little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Schilling, of Marietta. She wore a Laura Mays model of pink chiffon with a bow at the shoulder of tulle and handmade roses. Pink slippers and socks completed her ensemble. Charles L. Douglas, Jr., attractive little son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Douglas, was the ring bearer. He wore a white satin suit and carried the ring on a small white satin pillow.

The Lovely Bride.

The bride, who entered with her brother, Stephen A. Douglas, by whom she was given in marriage, was met at the altar by the groom and James E. Dickey, Jr., his best man.

The radiant loveliness of the bride was enhanced by the wedding gown of ivory white satin fashioned with tight bodice. A bertha of real lace was the effective trimming. The graceful court train was of heavy white satin. The bride's veil was of misty white tulle, fashioned cap shape and fastened to her hair with a coronet of duchess and rosepoint lace and clusters of orange blossoms. She carried an exquisite bouquet of white roses showered with swainsona and valley lilies.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Annie S. Beane, wore blue georgette crepe with a corsage of roses. Mrs. J. H. Douglas, the bride's aunt, was gowned in black satin and her corsage was also of roses.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. McCombs left on a wedding journey to Cuba and on their return will be at home at Miami, Fla., for the winter. The bride's traveling dress was of powder blue georgette satin. A gray gabardine coat and Gary hat of blue felt stitched in silver completed her costume.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bradley and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Douglas, of Montgomery, Ala.; Miss Ruth Douglas and Mrs. J. H. Douglas, of Breenton, Ala.

Miss Idabel Hunt To Wed Mr. Vance December 28th

Wide social interest centers in the approaching marriage of Miss Idabel Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Hunt, to William L. Vance, Jr., which will be a brilliant event of Wednesday, December 28, at 8 o'clock in the evening at St. James Episcopal church, with Rev. Robert Tatum performing the ceremony. Preceding the ceremony a program of music appropriate in sentiment will be rendered by Paul Lovejoy, violinist; Miss Mary Louise Brumby, vocalist, and Mrs. P. D. Reeser at the organ.

The ushers will be J. A. Williams, A. D. Grant, Frank Owenby, George H. Sessions and Ralph Hunt, brother of the bride. The bride will be given in marriage by her father, E. R. Hunt, and will have as her maid-of-honor Miss Dorothy Jackson, of Valdosta. The bridesmaids will be Misses Nancy Boston, Nancy Morris, Harriette Leake, Nelle Johnson, of Atlanta, and Fannie Kate Hollingsworth, of Tifton. Misses Matilda Trezevant and Elizabeth Massey will act as junior bridesmaids. Little Jean McNeel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mills McNeel, Jr., and Mildred Brumby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Brumby, Jr., will be flower girls. The ring will be carried by Bobbie Goodman, handsome little son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goodman.

Mr. Vance will have Joe Wyatt as his best man, and the groomsmen will be George H. Keeler, Armstrong Hunt, Archie Sessions, Bolan Glover and Malcolm Whitlock. Immediately following the ceremony a brilliant reception will be held by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Hunt, at the Marietta Golf club.

Mr. and Mrs. Hargrove To Entertain December 21.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lewis Hargrove will entertain at a buffet supper Wednesday evening, December 21, at their home on Juniper street, complimenting Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Moring Faires, of Bryan, Texas, the holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Franklin Faires. Twenty-five guests have been invited.

Garwood - Inman Wedding Plans Of Social Interest

Social interest centers in the wedding plans of Miss Margaret Ellen Garwood, daughter of Mrs. Mary Barnes Garwood, and Samuel Martin Inman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Inman, the marriage to be a brilliant event solemnized in the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church Tuesday evening, December 27, at 8:30 o'clock. Dr. Luther Rice Christie, pastor of the church, will perform the ceremony, assisted by Dr. Aquilla Chamblee, president of Bessie Tift college, from which the charming bride-elect was graduated.

Miss Garwood will be given in marriage by her brother, Hugh Johnson Garwood, of Washington, D. C., and her sister, Miss Mary Garwood will be maid of honor. The matrons of honor will be Mrs. Leonard Mc Clair, of Jacksonville, Fla., sister of the bride-elect, and Mrs. Eugene McNeel, sister of the groom-to-be. The group of bridesmaids include Misses Rio Cox, of Waynesboro; Catherine Garwood, cousin of the bride, and Margaret Bolling.

Mr. Inman will have as his best man his brother, Frank Inman, Jr., and F. W. Coleman, Jr., Edward Sterne, and Howard Garwood will act as groomsmen. The ushers include Sam Inman Cooper, Dr. Floyd McRae, Carlton Binns and Joe Cooper, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Edge Issue Invitations.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. David Calhoun Edge to the marriage of their daughter, Marilu Jarrett, and Edward Howard White, which will be solemnized Saturday evening, January 7, at 8 o'clock at Devereaux-Jarrett manor, Tugalo.

Atlanta Orders Install Officers.

The annual public installation of the John Rosier lodge, No. 608, F. & A. M., and the north Atlanta chapter, O. E. S., No. 36, will be held Wednesday evening, December 21, at 8 o'clock in the temple, Hemphill avenue and West Tenth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spalding Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary With Friends

Mr. and Mrs. Jack J. Spalding, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a brilliant reception Saturday at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack J. Spalding celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Saturday, at the Atlanta Biltmore at a brilliant reception, at which several hundred friends called between 5 and 7 o'clock, to offer congratulations and treasured expressions of thought to this distinguished couple, who have spent more than 40 years of their happy and congenial lives in this city. Their marriage took place in Morganfield, Union county, Ky., December 17, 1877, and a few years afterward Mr. and Mrs. Spalding moved to Atlanta for permanent residence.

Receive in Ballroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Spalding received their guests in the Georgian ballroom, where the decorations of yellow roses and yellow-shaded lights reflected the golden pathway this beloved couple has traveled together for fifty years. They stood in front of a background formed by stately palms, ferns, and garlands of smilax, with pedestal baskets holding Claudia Pernet roses, symbolic of the mellowing color of their useful lives. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Spalding on this auspicious and important occasion were their sons and daughters, including Hughes Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spalding, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Schroeder, and their sister, Mrs. Milton Young, of Lexington, Ky., formerly Miss Lucy Spalding, who was a bridesmaid at their wedding.

The colonial columns in the ballroom were encircled with smilax starred with Pernet roses and ferns. At the northern end of the room the orchestra was seated amid a bower of palms and ferns and rendered an artistic musical program. The punch tables were decorated with smilax, the bowls being embedded in smilax, ferns and yellow roses and decorated in hothouse grapes and oranges.

Misses Betty Schroeder, Eleanor Spalding and Boline Spalding, a trio of charming members of the junior set of society and granddaughters of the hosts, served punch.

Handsome Gowns.

Mrs. Spalding was handsomely gowned in pale blue transparent velvet elaborately embroidered in rhinestones and pearls, and she wore a shoulder bouquet of Pernet roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Schroeder's gown was fashioned of rose-colored crepe embroidered in crystals. She wore a corsage bouquet of Claudia Pernet rosebuds and valley lilies.

Mrs. J. J. Spalding, of New York, was handsomely gowned in French blue velvet trimmed in pearls and rhinestones. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow rosebuds and her shoulder bouquet was of Claudia Pernet roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Milton Young, of Lexington, Ky., wore a taupe shaded satin gown trimmed with duchess lace. A shoulder bouquet of yellow roses and valley lilies adorned her left shoulder.

The fiftieth wedding centered the interest of social, civic, religious and cultural and philanthropic life of the community in which Mr. and Mrs. Spalding occupy positions of honor and dignity. Mr. Spalding is one of the south's leading attorney's, having been a partner of the late Judge Alex King, and senior partner of the firm of Spalding, MacDougald & Sibley. Mrs. Spalding is one of the most beloved women of the city, and they maintain a lovely home, "Deerland," on Peachtree road, and dispense traditional hospitality.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the brilliant event were Mrs. J. T. Dyer, of St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Elizabeth Dyer, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. W. S. Feland, of Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Milton Young, of Lexington, Ky.; Miss Lucy Young, of Lexington, Ky.; Henry Hughes, of Paducah, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Spalding, of New York, and Robert Spalding, of New York.

Candle-Lighting Service To Be Held by Girl Scouts Xmas Eve

The annual Girl Scout candle lighting service will be held Christmas eve at 3:30 o'clock at the First Methodist church, corner of Peachtree street and Porter place. This service is symbolical of the Christmas spirit and the Girl Scout ideals and is one of the most beautiful things of its kind given in Atlanta. All friends, parents and Girl Scouts are invited to attend.

The program will open with the processional "O, come all ye faithful," Girl Scouts entering the church as they sing. Mrs. W. H. L. Nelms will preside at the organ. An old traditional carol, "The First Nowell," will be sung by Mrs. Eunice Curry Prescott. This will be dramatized by the following scouts: Shepherds, Dorothy Davis, June Matthews, Margaret Jones, Linda Miller; angel, Mildred Faulkner; wise men, Sarah Bowman, Aldora Hudson, Virginia Heard.

Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, Mrs. Frank D. Holland, Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, members of the Girl Scout Council, will stand before the chancel of the church holding red tapers. These three persons will represent the three-fold meaning of the Girl Scout promise, "On my honor I will try to do my duty to God and my country; to help other people at all times; to obey the scout law." A processional of ten scouts, Marian Fugitt, Lucile Taylor, Maxine Clark, Kate Harris, Evelyn von Herrmann, Virginia Williams, Frances Holsenbeck, Mathilde Transou, Lucile Logan, Dorothea Blackshear, representing the laws, will approach the trio with burning tapers and each girl will light her taper as she repeats the law she represents.

These ten scouts will form a pyramid and all the Atlanta Girl Scouts will pass before them to light their candles.

During the ceremony the organist will play "Holy Night" by Adams, after which the assemblage will sing the beautiful old carol, "Silent Night."

Dr. Samuel T. Senter, pastor of the First Methodist church, will pronounce the benediction.

Preceding the service troop No. 5, chaperoned by Mrs. James Mayo, will visit the Old Soldiers' home, singing carols and distributing fruit and tobacco to the veterans.

Troop No. 18 will visit a family group, where there are six children, to distribute a Christmas dinner basket, toys, clothing and to cheer the home with carols.

Troop No. 32 will visit the Atlanta Child's home to give scrapbooks which they have been making with linen squares and pictures.

Troop No. 38 will sponsor a Christmas tree at Oak Grove school, a rural school beyond Emory university. Many of the children in this community will have their first vision of a Christmas tree.

Georgia D. A. R. Contributes To Friendship Garden

At the request of the state regent, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, state officers and others have sent many bulbs and roots for planting in the "Friendship Garden" in Washington, D. C., in honor of the president general, Mrs. Alfred J. Bresseau. Each state was alloted thirty feet, three feet wide along the hedge at Memorial Continental hall, with flower beds near the hall and administration building. This will be a beautiful and lasting memorial honoring the president general, and one which is being shared by the D. A. R. from every state. Bulbs and plants contributed by Georgia D. A. R. include the following:

1. Ten and one-half dozen bulbs and roots from the Major General Samuel Elbert chapter, of Tennille, of which the state regent, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, and state corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. H. Colgate, are members. This chapter was organized by Mrs. Franklin in 1913 and she served as regent for four years. Mrs. Will Brantley, present regent, contributed bulbs from her own gardens and sent a collection from her members. These bulbs were from historic Washington county, named for George Washington, and one of the oldest counties in Georgia. It is one of two counties, Washington and Franklin, in which land was granted for service in the revoluton.

2. Mrs. Sanford Gardner, regent of Augusta chapter, sent a collection of bulbs from Meadow Garden, home of George Walton, one of Georgia's three signers of the Declaration of Independence. Mrs. Gardner also sent snow drops from her home garden where many lovely flowers grow.

3. Mrs. Walter K. Greene, regent of Mary Hammond Washington chapter sent roots of Japanese quince, white oleander and white iris from Wesleyan college, of Macon, first chartered college for women in the world. (The mother of the state regent, Mrs. Loula Kendall Rogers, is the oldest living graduate of this college.) Mrs. Greene sent also roots of althea and tea plant from Washington Memorial library, of Macon, presented to the city by the daughters of Mary Hammond Washington, and ivy roots from the birthplace of Sidney Lanier.

4. Mrs. A. L. Wilkins, of Eastman, state auditor, sent bulbs of hyacinths and narcissi.

5. Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, state treasurer, and the three Columbus chapters, Oglethorpe chapter, Mrs. J. W. Schlessner, regent; Mrs. John Blackmas and other members of Button Gwinnett chapter; Mrs. Arville Harvey, regent; George Walton chapter, Mrs. T. S. Grimes, regent, sent bulbs from St. Elmo and their own gardens.

6. Mrs. Walker Jordan, state chaplain, sent blue flags and white narcissi from her garden in Hawkinsville which is named for its revolutionary soldier, General Benjamin Hawkins. The city is on the old Andrew Jackson trail.

7. Mrs. Bun Wylie, state recording secretary, sent tulip bulbs from her home in Atlanta.

8. Mrs. Mell Knox, state consulting registrar, sent hyacinths and narcissi from her home in Social Circle.

10. Mrs. C. H. Leavy, state editor, sent giant daffodil bulbs from her home garden.

National Americanization Chairman Issues Letter

At the request of Mrs. John W. Daniel, of Savannah, state chairman of Americanization committee, a most interesting communication from the national chairman, Mrs. W. W. Husband, is printed today. Mrs. Daniel urges that every D. A. R. in Georgia read carefully the contents of the letter from the national chairman, that they may be informed as to the work of this important committee. The letter follows:

"Undoubtedly you have already received direct from the printer sufficient copies of a circular addressed to chapter regents and Americanism chairmen for the use of the chapters in your jurisdiction. You will note that an annual report form for chapters has been made a part of this bulletin this year. This was done because of suggestions made by some of the state chairmen in their last year's reports, and it is believed that when they know what they may be expected to report next spring the chapters will be in better position to keep the necessary records during the winter. Experience of the last year has convinced me that it is not wise or necessary to lay out definite plans for chapters to follow in their Americanism or Americanization work. Chapters have quite generally applied their efforts in accordance with the needs of their particular localities, and from annual reports it is obvious that the work covers so wide a range that it would not be practicable to even enumerate all of the various lines which have been followed. In my opinion we can best expend our efforts in inducing additional chapters to look over the field in their respective jurisdictions and to take up the work with a view to doing what is most needed.

"As you know, the last continental congress decided that hereafter the national Americanization committee shall be known as the national Americanism committee. It is not anticipated that there will be any immediate change of importance in the activities of chapters, but it does mean that eventually the helpful service which chapters have rendered in promoting a better understanding and appreciation of America and American institutions among foreign-born adults will be made available, when needed, for native-born men and women as well. The immediate reason for making the change was to enable the D. A. R. to do its part in the recently launched country-wide movement to wipe out illiteracy among our adult population, and the work of Americanization committees having been so largely along the line of promoting adult education it naturally fell to our lot to undertake the additional duties involved. Moreover, the broader field will enable chapters in communities where there are few or no foreign-born people to take up work similar to that which has proven to be so helpful and absorbing among hundreds of chapters in our immigrant centers.

"The problem of adult education deserves and is receiving more and more attention as the years go by, and the crusade against illiteracy is only one phase of what is rapidly becoming a nation-wide movement. Thirty states have already enacted legislation promoting adult classes in English and citizenship. In 24 states the department of education supervises adult classes. Twelve states have illiteracy commissions. About 1,300 communities have classes for illiterates. These facts, supplied by the United States bureau of education, are ample evidence of the seriousness of the crusade against illiteracy and ignorance among the adult population, and they also suggest that our society can best serve this very worthy cause by advocating the establishment or extension of school facilities for men and women who are in need of them. Chapter committees should be urged to study the matter of adult education, and especially the question of adult illiteracy, in their respective jurisdictions, and to report results and offer suggestions which may be considered at a meeting of state chairmen of Americanism during the next continental congress.

"Perhaps I have unduly emphasized the added task set for our committees, but it is not the purpose to suggest any restriction of Americanization effort among the foreign-born. The splendid work our society is doing in this highly important field is widely recognized and it ought to be extended rather than curtailed. When your national chairman first took up Americanization work she believed that its success was quite largely measured by the amount of money contributed by chapters for Americanization purposes. She has learned from experience, however, that while money is desirable, and in many cases essential, the most effective kind of work possible is in the way of educating the public to the need of providing school facilities for adult immigrants and in supporting such schools. At my request L. R. Alderman, who has supervision of adult education work in the United States bureau of education, will forward to you some pamphlets relating to the nation-wide crusade against illiteracy, and if you are not already acquainted with this movement I believe the pamphlets will interest you and that they will suggest a field in which the national society may well join with other organizations in promoting a most desirable object. If I can be of any service to you, I trust you will feel free to call upon me at any time."

'The Ship That Was a Navy' Is Reprinted From D. A. R. Magazine

Editor's note: "Probably every Daughter of the American Revolution has heard of the nation-wide campaign to restore the frigate Constitution as a naval relic. But has every member of our great organization contributed to this worthy cause? Approximately $450,000 has been contributed thus far through popular subscription; your help is needed to complete the fund. About $300,000 more will be required. This sum is being raised by the sale of prints of Gordon Grant's painting, 'Old Ironsides,' a beautiful ten-color lithograph measuring 18 3-4 inches by 22 3-4 inches, and of souvenirs made from materials removed from the famous man-of-war during reconstruction."

Today in the dry dock at the navy yard in Boston, undergoing reconstruction, lies the noble old frigate Constitution, whose "iron-sides" shielded and protected our young and struggling nation at one of the most critical periods in its history. No ship more justly deserves a place in the affections of a country than does this champion of our liberty and our rights as a nation. "Old Ironsides" has sent forth her call to all the land; Americans are answering and repaying their just debt of gratitude to this famous ship, our foremost naval relic. She is now being rebuilt from truck to keel.

"Old Ironsides" has never known defeat, although she bears scars of 42 battles. In 1798 she helped to clear the West Indies and our coast line of French privateers. In 1803-05 she bombarded the forts at Tripoli, dictating peace without tribute to the Barbary states. In the war of 1812 she won a succession of famous victories over the British fleets, increasing our prestige abroad and inspiring at home a greater faith in the new republic. "Old Ironsides" stood invincible against the great English navy and fought for our independence on the sea, as two generations before, the colonists had fought for it on land. She, more than any other American vessel, was instrumental in exploding the boast made by a British poet of that period: "The winds and seas are Britain's wide domain and not a sail without permission spreads."

Her remarkable escape from the British squadron off the coast of New Jersey in July of 1812, the destruction of the Guerriere, the capture of the Java, the Cyane, and the Levant, make pages of romantic reading in the history of our country. Her conquests not only established the declaration of independence a fact in 1812; they did more. The moral effect of her victories upon the country, serving as they did to unite opposing factions and territories in a feeling of national pride and unity of purpose, cannot be overestimated. Staunch as her great name, the Constitution was almost a navy in herself. Ever invincible, she is now the proud possessor of a fighting record that has never been equaled by any single ship in the history of any navy in the world.

After the War of 1812 "Old Ironsides" served as flagship of the Mediterranean squadron, keeping a sharp lookout for our interests there. It was at one time on this cruise that Lord Byron visited her. He is said to have remarked while on board that he "would rather have a nod from an American naval officer than a snuff box from an emperor." At a later date an occurrence rare in the annals of our navy took place on board this venerable ship, when Master Constitution Stewart McCauley, an infant son of our consul general and Mrs. McCauley, was born during a voyage from Tripoli to Alexandria.

It is of especial interest to patriotic Americans that the Constitution's first flags and signals were made by Betsy Ross, while the bolts that fastened her timbers were forged by Paul Revere.

It was in 1830, when the naval commissioners condemned "Old Ironsides" as unseaworthy and ordered that she be broken up, that Oliver Wendell Holmes published his immortal poem throughout the land and aroused such a storm of protest from public sentiment that the navy department had the famous old fighter rebuilt in Boston.

From 1835 to 1855 the Constitution made numerous voyages, the most important being her cruise around the world in 1844-45 under Captain John Percival, when she covered 52,279 miles in 495 days at sea, an enviable record for ships of her day. But with the progress of shipbuilding and with the advent of the steam-propelled iron-clad, the Constitution rapidly became a relic of the past. For several years she was used at the naval academy as a training and practice ship. In 1871 she was rebuilt at Philadelphia and in 1878 went on her last trip abroad, carrying goods sent by the citizens of the United States to the Universal exposition at Paris. Her long career at sea closed in 1881.

Her subsequent history, though uneventful, has been one of loyal usefulness. From Portsmouth, N. H., where she was used as a receiving ship, the Constitution was brought to her birthplace for the celebration of her centennial in 1897. She has been in Boston ever since. Again threatened with destruction in 1905, when it was proposed to use her as a target for ships of the Atlantic fleet, because her timbers were gradually rotting away, public sentiment came to her rescue and she was partially rebuilt.

After such a renowned career as a champion of American liberty, small wonder it is that Americans are seeking to preserve "Old Ironsides." The funds for her restoration were not appropriated by congress, but are being raised by the people of our country, so that they may feel a closer ownership and interest in their gallant old ship, on whose decks are enshrined the proud traditions for which America stands. In so doing they will honor not only "Old Ironsides," but the men who, by their bravery and skill, brought her to such renown and made such glorious history for America.

Every American knows of Independence hall in Philadelphia and would not think of letting it fall into decay. Loud would be the protest from every corner of our country should it be proposed to destroy Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington and our national shrine. Like these and many more historical relics, "Old Ironsides" belongs to every American; it is the patriotic duty of every citizen of our country to aid in preserving her as a national floating monument. Restored to her proud condition at the height of her brilliant career, a picturesque and beautiful survivor of the bygone days of sail, she will again cruise the seas, visiting the ports of our country, carrying a message of loyalty, of patriotism and of service well done.

(Keel of the Constitution laid in 1794, at Hartt's shipyard, Boston. Designed by Joshua Humphries, of Philadelphia, on new lines based on those of the fast French frigates. Carried very large amount of sail and a very heavy battery of 24-pounders on gun deck, which was unusually high above the water line so that the guns could be fought in heavy weather; 18-pounders were the usual gun on frigates of the period. Was 175 feet on water line and truck of main mast was over 200 feet from water line. Very heavy timbers were used, many of which have survived to the present day. Hull lines were very fine under water and much like the present racing yachts. Her heavy sides and maneuvering ability under sail brought her out of four engagements scarcely damaged, though the two frigates she fought were both dismasted and sunk. Built of live oak, cut from St. Simons Island, Georgia, yellow pine, and cedar from trees selected while still standing in the forest.)

Brunswick Chapter Reports Meeting.

Brunswick chapter, D. A. R., held their December meeting last week with the regent, Mrs. A. L. Church, presiding. A large number of members were present and many routine matters were taken up. The chapter will continue to award medals and prizes in the history and home economics departments of the local high school, and cash prizes will be given in the three grammar schools to the grades memorizing and singing best, patriotic songs, as designated by the state chairman of patriotic songs committee.

The chapter will observe Arbor day in February by planting a tree, it being though best to defer the date till that time in this climate. A historic marker will also be placed on one of the numerous places of historic interest in the county in the early spring. Mrs. G. V. Cate will address the chapter at the January meeting on historic places in this session. Additional flag codes have been ordered for use in the patriotic program for February in the schools.

The chapter unanimously indorsed the candidacy of Mrs. Julius Talmadge for the office of president general, and by a unanimous and rising vote indorsed Mrs. C. H. Leavy for the office of state recording secretary.

Mrs. D. W. Krauss was program chairman, and presented a very interesting program on Woodrow Wilson, whose birthday is celebrated this month. In observance of Christmas, Mrs. A. O. Osborne read a beautiful paper on "The Humblest Home in History." As a closing number Mrs. E. C. Garvin sang "Keep the Home Fires Burning." At the close of the meeting the hostesses, Mrs. R. D. Eadie and Mrs. W. W. Travis, served tea.

Yearbooks Are Acknowledged.

In addition to the yearbooks already reported, the state regent acknowledges with grateful appreciation receipt of splendid yearbooks from other chapters. They are artistic in appearance and contain most interesting programs, many using those prepared by the state chairman, Mrs. C. B. Smith, of Savannah, with the subject "Historic Homes." The following yearbooks have been received recently: Brunswick chapter, Brunswick, regent, Mrs. A. L. Church; Fort Early chapter, Cordele, regent, Mrs. T. J. Royal; Governor John Milledge chapter, Dalton, regent, Mrs. Porter Walker; Button Gwinnett chapter, Columbus, regent, Mrs. Orville Harvey; William Marsh chapter, LaFayette, regent, Mrs. W. A. Enloe; Sarah Dickinson chapter, Newnan, regent, Mrs. T. J. Fisher; Chattahoochee chapter, West Point, regent, Mrs. Edward L. Cumbee; General Daniel Stewart chapter, Perry, regent, Mrs. C. B. Miss Cora Yvonne Ross To Wed James C. Shelor on Xmas Day

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Ross, of Bremerton, Washington, announce the engagement of their niece, Cora Yvonne Ross to James Chalmers Shelor, of Atlanta, the wedding to take place in the presence of a few members of the family and intimate friends Sunday, December 25, at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York city.

Miss Ross is the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Akin Ross, of Pelham, N. Y., where she was born and reared. She has lived for a short while with relatives in Bremerton, Washington and Atlanta, but is now living at Decatur, Ala. Miss Ross' mother was the late Pattie Mae Robinson, of Morganton, N. C. She is a direct descendant of George Ross, of Pennsylvania, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Miss Ross formerly attended Athens Female College at Athens, Ala.

Mr. Shelor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Warren Shelor, of this city. He is a graduate of the Boys High school, of the University of Georgia, later attending the law school of Columbia university in New York city. While at the University of Georgia he played on the football team and was a member of the Gridiron club and other organizations. He is a member of the Phi Delta Phi and Alpha Kappa Psi fraternities. Mr. Shelor is now engaged in the practice of law in Atlanta being connected with the firm of Dorsey, Shelton & Dorsey. He is secretary of the Lawyers' club and a member of other civic organizations.

He and his bride will return to Atlanta during the early part of January and will make their home at 802 Virginia avenue, N. E.

U. D. C. Chapter Pays Tribute To Mrs. Felton at Luncheon

An important event of the pre-holiday season was the luncheon given at the Piedmont hotel Thursday by the Rebecca Felton chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, with the distinguished and beloved lady for whom the chapter is named as the honor guest. The 70 guests included several notables and a number of officers of the Confederacy. Following the luncheon a Christmas program was rendered at the Soldiers' Home.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale gave an address and in his tribute to Mrs. Felton he said he had known her many years and that she was a life-long friend. He spoke of her active work in politics during the lifetime of her husband and of the impress she has made upon the state's history.

Dr. Arch Avery replied to the mayor's speech, remarking: "I have known Mrs. Felton longer than you or anyone else here has known her." He proved his statement by relating incidents that occurred 75 years ago.

Commander Freeman, General George W. Wells, Colonel Shropshire and other veterans made impressive speeches. Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, state president of the U. D. C., spoke inspiringly of the "baby" chapter, and Mrs. Stafford Seidell, president of the Atlanta chapter, also gave a short talk.

Mrs. Fannie Mae Dabney, state memorial chairman of the D. A. R., paid tribute to Mrs. Felton in her concluding remarks, speaking of Alexander Stephens and the recent unveiling of the monument in his honor. Mrs. Dabney stated that the hearse which bore the remains of the great Georgian to the cemetery in Crawfordville is in the possession of her father, W. V. Almand, of Conyers.

Among others who made short talks were Mrs. Josephus Camp, Mrs. J. W. Hollingsworth and Mrs. Henderson, the chapter historian.

Mrs. Walter E. Lomax, president of the chapter, presided at the luncheon, introducing the speakers. Mrs. Josephus Camp, registrar, was chairman of the luncheon arrangements and also led the program at the Soldiers' Home.

Mrs. A. C. Belcher was chairman of transportation.

Superintendent McAllister, in a brief address, welcomed the party to the home and the rendition of the program followed.

Due to a misunderstanding of the hour, Mrs. Felton was not present at the luncheon.

Will Spend Xmas in Atlanta

Miss Sally Pearson, charming daughter of Major and Mrs. William F. Pearson, U. S. A., who arrives Sunday from Greenwich, Conn., to spend the holidays with her parents at the Georgian Terrace. Miss Pearson is enrolled as a student at Rosemary Hall, one of the most fashionable schools in the United States.

Congenial Parties Assemble For Driving Club Dance

Congenial parties assembled Saturday evening at the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club, which proved one of the most enjoyable events of the past week.

Dining with Mr. and Mrs. William Niller were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Martin, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Hopkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Guss Dodd entertained a congenial party. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Dodd, Mr. and Mrs. William Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Owens, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Black, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Huger, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Quill Orme, Jr., Harry Bewick and Harry Sommers.

Dining with A. R. Dowling were Mr. and Mrs. Norris Broyles, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Black, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Thornwell, Misses Jeanette Bailey, Louise Arnold, Sarah Watts, of Charlottsville, Va.; Baxter Maddox, Murray Shoun, Lawson Kiser and Jerre L. Dowling, of New York city.

Major and Mrs. H. R. Herwig entertained a congenial group.

Colonel and Mrs. George F. Baltzell entertained a party Saturday evening at the club, entertaining General and Mrs. H. O. Williams, Major and Mrs. Allen M. Burdett, Colonel and Mrs. E. D. A. Pearce, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Moore and Major and Mrs. Richard Donovan.

Mrs. Upshaw Honors Young Daughter.

Honoring the third birthday of her little daughter, Mary Elizabeth, Mrs. C. B. Upshaw entertained at a lovely children's party Saturday afternoon at her home, 75 Maddox drive.

Gay Christmas decorations adorned the rooms where the little guests were received. The beautifully appointed table held in the center a birthday cake, surmounted by three tiny candles. A Christmas tree, from which each child was given an attractive toy, was a lovely feature of the party.

The guests included 12 little friends of the young honor guest.

Georgia O. E. S. To Hold Bazar.

Georgia chapter, No. 127, O. E. S., will hold a bazar Monday at Hightower Hardware company, 132 Whitehall street, S. W. A selection of articles will be offered, consisting of embroidered bridge sets, aprons, scarfs, buffet and vanity sets, pillow cases, hand-made infant's pieces, and other articles that will make attractive Christmas gifts. The patronage of members of the order and public is solicited.

Dean Johnston Addresses Decatur Fine Arts Club

Dean Johnston, of St. Philip's cathedral, will speak on the Oberammergau Passion Play before the Christmas meeting of the Decatur Fine Arts club, which meets at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, December 20, in the ballroom of the Hotel Candler, in Decatur. A musical program will feature Mesdames C. S. Hamilton and J. G. Addy, two of Decatur's leading pianists, and Walter Herbert, tenor.

Dean Johnston witnessed the Passion Play of Oberammergau during the course of an European tour during the past summer.

The club has decided to extend the courtesies of the meeting to friends, and all members are privileged to bring as many guests as they desire. The program committee for December, in charge of the meeting, is composed of Mesdames S. R. Christie, J. G. Addy, Rob Barry, Ulric Green, B. B. Lewis, C. E. Y. W. C. A. Xmas Activities Are Of Wide Interest

The Christmas vesper service will be held at the Y. W. C. A. Sunday afternoon, December 18, at 5 o'clock. The program will include representatives from practically every department of the local association. Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of All Saints' church, will tell a Christmas story. Miss Mildred Wells, of the Business and Professional league, will be mistress of ceremonies and will light the Christmas fire. Candles will be lighted for each department by Miss Jane Robinson for the Girl Reserves; Miss Lottie Johnson, industrial department; Miss Ruth Palmer, Business and Professional club; Miss Virginia Clyburn, Camp Highland; Miss Laura McClelland, health education, and Miss Jean Hall, residence. Various groups will sing Christmas carols.

The text of the service was written by Miss Aileen Paul, secretary of the business and professional department. The Y. W. C. A. building will be appropriately decorated by Miss Katherine Erwin and Mrs. James Speas, of the girl reserve committee. The service will last a half hour and the public is cordially invited to attend.

The various Girl Reserve clubs will complete their Christmas programs this week with a series of parties. The children of the younger blue triangle group, from the Wesley community center and the Stewart avenue day nursery, will have a party at the Y. W. C. A. building Tuesday afternoon. The James L. Key club will be entertained Wednesday and the older girls of the blue triangle group Friday.

Members of the High School Reserve clubs will embody the Girl Reserve ideal of "service" in all their festivities during the week. The Amicus club of Girls High and Commercial High schools, will entertain several small children Tuesday with a Christmas tree and party. The Decatur High group will visit the Home for the Poor and sing carols. The Fulton High school reserves will join with the Home Economics club of this school for their Christmas service, and the East Point reserves will bring Christmas cheer to an unfortunate family of their community.

The S. I. S. P. club will meet with the Business Girls' league Thursday and entertain a group of children and their mothers at a Christmas dinner and tree. The Old Glory club will have its party Tuesday, December 27, at the home of Miss Gertrude Reilly on St. Charles avenue.

The Business Girls' league is at work arranging classes for the new term which starts January 5. Details will be announced in the near future. All girls wishing to take advantage of these classes are urged to discuss the matter with Miss Aileen Paul.

The Rainbow club, of the industrial department, headed by Miss Lottie Johnson, will have a dinner party and Christmas tree Friday, December 23, at 6 o'clock at the Association building. Each member will be permitted to bring one friend.

Announcement is made of the addition to the Y. W. C. A. staff of Mrs. Carl Walker, as director of the cafeteria, management of which was recently resumed by the Atlanta Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Walker, who comes to this city from Chicago, has had extensive experience there and also in St. Louis, where she was director of one of the five cafeterias maintained by the St. Louis association.

Among the special features installed by the new director are a 50-cent turkey dinner, served every Wednesday and a children's luncheon every Saturday at noon.

Miss Lucile Crabtree, director of health education, announces that a group of girls from M. Rich & Bros. company are organizing a swimming class to begin directly after Christmas, and that any other group of 15 girls may start a similar class. Classes organized in this way are charged only the price of a dip ticket. A block ticket can be bought for $22.50, which will entitle each member of the group of 15 to six lessons for the small price of $1.50 each.

The pool will be open for dips all through the holidays, although all regular gymnasium and swimming classes will be closed from December 24 to January 2. All who expect to join classes after the holidays are requested to register during this week of vacation.

An important committee meeting of the week will occur Wednesday at 5:30 o'clock at the Association building when the publicity committee, Miss Susie Wailes, chairman, will meet. Supper will be served afterward for those who make reservations in advance.

Miss Yolande Gwin Is Luncheon Hostess.

Miss Yolande Gwin was hostess at luncheon Saturday at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel assembling a group of popular members of the season's debutantes and their escorts. Luncheon was served in the main dining room the table holding as a center decoration a basket filled with a variety of frosted red and green Christmas flowers, while at each end of the table there was a decorated Christmas tree. A each guest's place were red comports as favors, while a red Santa Claus marked the guests' places. During the luncheon hour dancing was enjoyed, music being furnished by Mack Davis and his orchestra. Miss Gwin was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Jim Lyon Gwin and Mrs. John Fitten MacDougald.

Covers were placed for Misses Mary Wellborn and Knowles Davis, Catherine Boyd and Guy Woolford, Edna Raine and Billy Wardlaw, Anne Spalding and Syd Hardie, Florence Eckford and Louis Rucker, Gertrude Harris and Malcolm Barksdale, Mary Harvey and Richard Fickett, Virginia Courts and T. V. Morrison, Dorothy Maurtz, of Portland, Ore., the guest of Miss Courts and Richard Courts, Constance Spalding and Thomas W. Collier, Palmer Dallas and Dr. Hartwell Joyner and Yolande Gwin and Howard Fisch.

Miss Caroline Thompson Gives Dancing Party.

Miss Caroline Thompson entertained at a dancing party Saturday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Thompson, at their home on Harvard road.

Miss Thompson's classmates at Emory High school were invited for this occasion, and the house was elaborately decorated in Christmas flowers and greens.

Prominent Guests To Attend Reception.

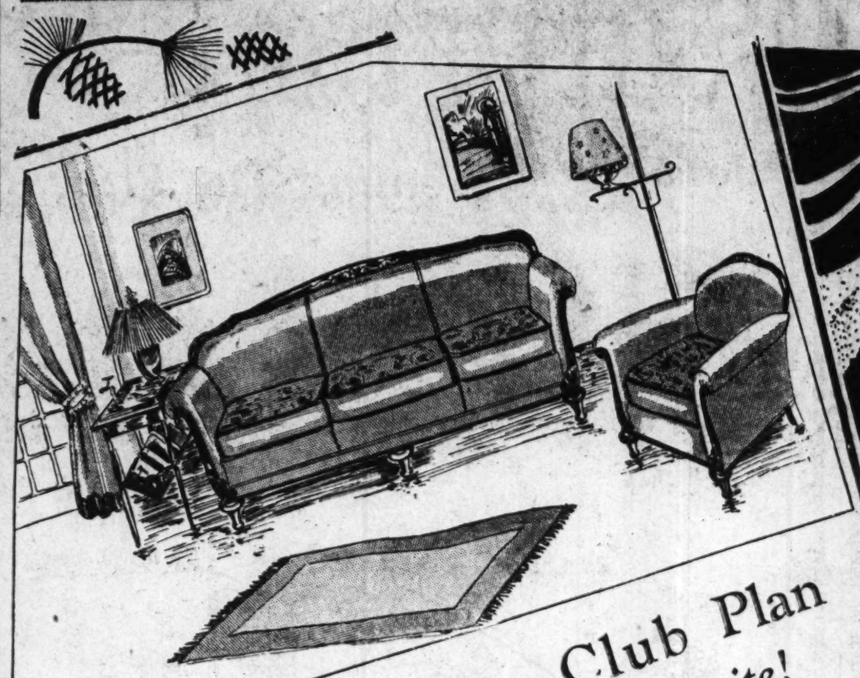

Senator and Mrs. William J. Harris, Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Blair Bannister and her daughter, Miss Bannister, and Congressman and Mrs. Steele, will be prominent among the guest extended an invitation through Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, director for Georgi. in the General Federation, to attend the reception, January 10, given in Washington, D. C., to the executive board of the General Federation.

Mrs. Goodman Names Public Welfare Chairmen for Fifth

Mrs. Charles Goodman, fifth district chairman of public welfare, announces as chairmen of divisions: Mrs. Charles Goodman, Hemlock 0858-W.-24 Park lane, Atlanta, public welfare; Mrs. Katherine Wethersbee, 232 Walker street, College Park, child welfare; Mrs. Ira Farmer, care M. Rich & Bros., Atlanta, industrial and social relations; Mrs. A. G. Helmer, 598 Arthur street, S. W., prison and jails; Mrs. Warren D. White, 716 Piedmont avenue, Indian welfare; Mrs. E. D. Sutton, Clarkston, Ga., thrift; Dr. Elizabeth Broach, 938 North Highland avenue, N. E., public health; Mrs. W. H. Sanders, 514 Moreland avenue, N. E., narcotics.

Many hundred club women are actively engaged in public welfare work in the fifth district. They are the directors and active workers in various institutions doing child welfare work. Mrs. Goodman requests that each club send her at once the list of chairmen in each division of public welfare and that they report the work they are doing in the Atlanta Child's home, Georgia Children's Home society, in the Sheltering Arms, Southern Christian home, Crippled Children's home, Methodist Decatur Orphan home, Jewish Orphan home, Hapeville Baptist Orphan home, the Boys' Reformatory and the Girls' Reform school.

The clubs are especially requested to aid Dr. Elizabeth Broach in her wonderful health programs and clinics. Reports must be kept and filed to assist in the great May day program in the spring. Mrs. Goodman requests information on the assistance and help given to the Boy and Girl Scouts, the Camp Fire Girls, boys' division of the Y. M. C. A., the girls' division of the Y. W. C. A. and the young people's Music Study club and singing contests. All these things contribute to the spiritual welfare of the young people and should be earnestly fostered by clubwomen.

Mrs. Brantley Indorsed For State Director.

The Georgians, the largest federated woman's club of Waycross; the Waycross Health league, and the Girl Scout council, also federated women's clubs, have unanimously indorsed Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, for director in the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Washington Works For Tallulah Industrial School

The smart set of Washington, D. C. gathered at the Mayflower hotel on the afternoon of December 16 at an elaborate card party for the benefit of the Tallulah Falls Industrial Schools, Inc., at Tallulah Falls, Ga., which is owned and maintained by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. An important list of patronesses for the occasion was headed by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, whose visit to Georgia some years since has given her an especial interest in the concerns of Georgia women and children. Mrs. William J. Harris and Mrs. Walter F. George, with the wives of many prominent congressmen from the Empire state, were conspicuous in their attendance and interest.

Miss Elizabeth Howry, daughter of Justice Howry, was chairman for the card party, and was ably assisted by Mrs. Ben King, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. Theodore Tiller, Mrs. Lyman Kendall and many others. Mrs. Zeno Fitzpatrick, vice president of the trustees of the school, who is at the Hotel Washington, has cooperated with the committee of arrangements in charge of the card party, which was largely attended and engendered great enthusiasm for the mountain school, which works under the motto, "The school belongs to Georgia federation, but the children belong to all Americans." Well selected exhibit of the and unusual crafts work of the school was the source of much interest and many beautiful feather fans were bought by those attending.

Mrs. Warthen Offers Christmas Suggestion To Clubwomen

As chairman of budget and insurance for the Georgia Federation, Mrs. Ober Warthen of Vidalia, suggests an "educational policy" for children of clubwomen. She says:

"The wonderful Christmas season is always preceded by two or three weeks of uncertainty as to what will be the best thing we can get for our family as well as for our friends. Why not buy your children an 'educational policy' each and thereby assure them of the most valuable gift in the world—an education? Or suggest to friend husband that an additional thousand or two of insurance for the protection of the home would be a thoughtful, ideal and much-appreciated gift.

"Now I shall tell you how you may win a nice gift for your favorite club enterprise. The National Association of Life Underwriters at its annual convention held in Memphis, October 12-14, again appropriated the sum of $175 as prizes in an essay contest between members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"The subject: 'Life Insurance a Necessary Family Protection.'"

Rules: Length of essays: Must not exceed 1,000 words. Those eligible: Open to every member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Form of essays: Must be written in triplicate (one copy for each of three judges). Must be typewritten on one side only of the paper. The name of the author must not appear on the essay; instead of the name, the writer must print a number at the top of the first sheet. All the sheets must be securely fastened together.

The envelope containing the essay must also bear only the number chosen by the writer and, in addition to the essay, must contain a smaller envelope in which has been placed a slip bearing the name of the writer, her address, the name of her club and the number she has chosen for the essay. The small envelope must be sealed, to remain unopened until after the committee of awards has selected the three winning essays.

Time limit: The contest will close on April 14, 1928. No essay bearing a postmark later than that date will be considered.

All essays must be mailed to Miss Alice Lakey, insurance specialist, G. F. W. C., 74 Cortland street, New York city. (To guard against loss, it would be well for the contestant to write a separate letter, advising that she has mailed her essay, signing it with her own name, but omitting the number she chose).

Prizes: There are three. The first prize of $100 will be awarded to the essay which in the judgment of the committee of awards is the best. The second prize of $50 will go to the next best essay. The third prize of $25 will go to the essay which ranks next after that winning the second prize.

It is a condition of the donors of the prizes that they shall go to the clubs of which the respective winners are members.

Committee of awards: Grenville Howard, field editor of the New York Life Insurance company, New York city; John C. McNamara, the McNamara organization, general agents of the Guardian Life Insurance company, New York city; Ernest W. Porter, office editor of the Prudential Insurance Company of America, Newark, N. J.

Tallapoosa Thursday Club Gives Program.

The Tallapoosa Thursday club held its December meeting at the home of Mrs. J. J. Thornton. December 2 being Arbor day for Georgia a program was arranged by Mrs. W. H. Malone, program chairman, and an appropriate Christmas selection was included.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Latimore Mosley, president. Mrs. A. V. Howe gave an informative report of the eighteenth annual convention of the Seventh District Federated clubs at Marietta; Miss Jessie Orgain, chairman of literature and library extension, acted as secretary, Mrs. J. C. Tumlin, secretary, being one of the hostesses. An orchestra, the personnel of which included Miss Nell Meadows, piano; Misses Pearl Hutson, Charlotte McMahan, mandolin; Thomas Hill, K. Head, W. C. Aycock and Miss Mildren Jackson, violin, rendered musical selections. The following program was given: "Origin of Arbor Day," Mrs. Latimore Mosley; music, "Joy to the World," orchestra; "How Do Trees Serve Us? Mrs. L. C. Waldrop; reading, "But Only God Can Make a Tree," Mrs. F. S. Dunklee; reading, "Legend of the Christmas Tree," Mrs. Johnson Head; music, "Holy Night," orchestra; "State-Wide Crusade Against Tuberculosis in Georgia," Mrs. R. J. Hammond. Attention was called to the sale of Christmas seals, which is being sponsored by the club, stating tuberculosis was a real menace to our population, and giving preventime and curative measures in combatting this disease. "The Third Circle," a most engaging paper containing an earnest appeal to purchase Christmas seals, was charmingly read by Miss Isabella Prather. Music, "By the Light of the Stars," orchestra; the Christmas greetings to each by our president, Mrs. Latimore Mosley. Refreshments were served by Mesdames J. J. Thornton and J. C. Tumlin, hostesses for the afternoon.

Mrs. Warthen Offers Helpful Suggestions.

Mrs. Ober D. Warthen, of Vidalia, chairman of the division of budget and insurance for Georgia Federation, has the following to suggest to clubwomen:

"A woman who is the head of a household has the most complex and fearful responsibility that can be thrust on human shoulders. On her is cast the burden of spending the income with discretion and providing for the fundamentals of life. This requires the knowledge of values in food, furniture, clothing, etc., and also an understanding of psychology, dietetics, bio-chemistry and kindred sciences. The fact that so many women have not studied—and by studied I mean meditated as well as read books on the subject—psychology and child-raising accounts for a great deal of the crime, immorality and unwholesome living in the world today. Ignorance may excuse in the sight of man but the consequences are the same.

"But this other responsibility of weighing values and spending for the best interest of the family is my especial charge, and I again urge you to resolve now—to Think and plan—and give your children more suitable and wholesome food, practical and neater clothes on less money and not only have the joy of seeing them grow into healthier and happier young people but win anew the admiration and respect of your husband along with a pleasurable sense of financial freedom. Let him know that you give as much intelligent thought to the spending of the income as he to the making.

"Please promise me to try at least a rudimentary budget and to study more carefully values—the why and how and where and when of all purchases. Best wishes for a merry Christmas and a new year full of the satisfaction of having Him say "well done."

Lesche Club And Dalton Woman's Club Hold Meetings

The Lesche Woman's club, of Dalton, one of the oldest in the state, held its November meeting at the new home of the club, sharing ownership with the local chapter of the U. D. C., taking the form of an evening in charge of the division of music, the numbers being by American composers and the president, Mrs. W. M. Jones, herself a most accomplished musician, giving a brief introduction to each number, thus adding to the appreciation and understanding of the selection given. The Lesche quartet, composed of Mrs. Jones, Mrs. C. L. Hamilton, Miss Sadie Sapp and Miss Margaret Gavitt, gave three songs; Miss Gavitt followed with two solos, "Twilight" and "Take Joy Home," both well rendered. Mrs. Hamilton gave a song cycle, "Stars of the Desert;" there were four of these, all filled with the haunting melody that Amy Wordfofd Finden weaves into her music, and Mrs. Hamilton's flexible voice, clear and true, was heard with the greatest pleasure in these characteristic songs. Mrs. Howard Manly accompanied all of the vocal numbers acceptably, as she always does, being an exceptional accompanist. Miss Ethel Sapp played "Venetienne," by Godard, with the utmost ease and grace. Altogether the musical evening was a real pleasure to all who heard the numbers given and reflects the greatest credit on those who planned it as well as on the talented artists. Earlier programs have included the president's evening when, in addition to the president's address, talks were made by several members who had made extended trips during the summer, notably by Miss Willie White, who made a trip to Europe, extended to Egypt, staying some time in Jerusalem. One meeting was given over to the Camp Fire Girls and their guardian, who gave a program of music and tableaux; this was under the direction of the division of community service. Two programs to be given shortly include a play by the division of drama and an evening by the division of art.

The Dalton Woman's club held a reception recently for the new members, the teachers of the public schools and the board of education. The lovely clubhouse was decorated with autumn flowers, many beautiful dahlias and chrysanthemums being arranged in floor baskets and wall vases. Officers of the organization, headed by Mrs. M. E. Judgg, the president, and members of the executive board, received the guests and the very informal party was much enjoyed. Tea was served by the younger contingent of the organization and the guests had an opportunity to inspect the growing library, for a year past entirely free to the general public, which is the pride of the club. This was first opened two years ago when a fee of $1 a year was charged for cards, but one year ago it was made free and the patronage has greatly increased, till more than 50 books a day are drawn from the shelves. During the past week extensive planting has been done on the grounds of the Robin's Nest, as our poet, Robert Loveman, called his home, which now belongs to the Woman's club, and with the new driveway finished, the combined libary and clubhouse makes a promise of beauty in the spring. More than $100 worth of shrubs, the gift of the president, have been planted and more than 2,000 bulbs will be planted as soon as the season is favorable, making a real picture of the interesting old house.

Talbotton Club Raises $500 for Community Hall.

Talbotton Woman's club has closed a very successful year with $500 raised for the Straus-LeVert community hall. This building, known as Old LeVert college, was bought by Percy, Isador and Herbert Straus, of New York, and given to the town of Talbotton.

The officers for 1928 are as follows: President, Mrs. F. P. Freeman; first vice president, Miss Mary Mathews; second vice president, Miss Virginia Persons; recording secretary, Mrs. E. B. Douglas; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Brooks Culpepper; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas Mahone; auditor, Mrs. J. H. McGehee; department American citizenship, chairman, Mrs. F. R. Spivey; department American home, chairman, Mrs. W. C. Thomas; department education, chairman, Mrs. W. L. Perryman; department fine arts, chairman, Miss Martha K. Smith.

Brooks Woman's Club Holds Literary Meeting.

Mrs. William Malone and Miss Sara Gable entertained the Brooks Woman's club last Friday at the home of Mrs. Malone. Mrs. Sophie Woods presided over business part of meeting and Mrs. J. I. Woolsey had charge of program for the afternoon. Literature was subject and was as follows: Musical reading, "Family Traits," by Miss Ouida Jeanne Woolsey, Mrs. J. I. Woolsey accompanist. The program included "Brief Summary of American Literature," paper by Mrs. Sophie Woods; vocal solo, "The Bridge," by Mrs. William Malone, Mrs. Nannie Henderson, accompanist; "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," by Miss Helen Hardy; "Joel Chandler Harris," a paper by Mrs. J. H. Jones; "Battle Hymn of the Federation," Mrs. J. B. Woods at the piano.

Mrs. Richardson Honored By Clubwomen.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, general federation director for Georgia, has returned from Washington, Ga., where she was the guest of the Woman's club at a reception given in her honor Wednesday, December 14. Mrs. Richardson was invited to Washington to speak on federation work and all of the women's organizations in the city were invited to hear her.

Washington has a Junior Woman's club, a per capita club paying regular dues through the Senior Woman's club. The juniors were in charge of the reception with Mrs. Boyce Ficklin as chairman and proved to be charming hostesses as well as efficient young clubwomen. The gorgeous decorations were in the Christmas colors and the lovely gardens of the town furnished the flowers.

Mrs. Harry Moore, president of the Washington club, presented several of the district officers and chairmen from Lexington, Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter, Mrs. T. W. Crawford and Mrs. R. F. Brooks. Other eighth district clubwomen were present to hear the federation message from Mrs. Richardson. She visited Mrs. T. B. Burke.

Mrs. Lee Issues Christmas Greetings

To the Third District club women: With the approach of the blessed Christmas season my thoughts go out to the splendid club women of the third district for whom my affections grow stronger and stronger with each passing month. As the holiday season approaches our spirituality deepens and our thoughts soften as our hearts fill with love for those near us. Let us keep this spirit of love and kindness throughout the year and "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," will abide. I wish for you all at this season, peace, contentment and happiness throughout the year.

Faithfully,
MARY K. LEE.

Lexington Woman's Club Wins Cup.

Lexington Woman's club held its December meeting, Thursday, December 9, at the home of Mrs. Grady Tiller, the president, with Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter in the chair.

Mrs. Clifford Paul and Mrs. A. Q. Lipsey were welcomed as new members.

Mrs. Earl Reynolds, chairman of the ways and means committee, reported the Christmas bazar a huge success, materially and otherwise. Mrs. G. A. Barron, chairman of the rest room, reported work completed in that line. Mrs. W. T Cunningham, chairman of forestry, reported a tree planted on the school campus in honor of Theodore Roosevelt and 60 other trees and shrubs planted by the members of the club. Mrs. C. R. Crawford sent a box to ex-service men in Augusta hospital and the county farm. A program of forestry by Mrs. F. C. Reed, chairman, was given.

The outstanding feature of the meeting was the report of the splendid eighth district meeting held recently in Athens, given by Mrs. W. H. Maxwell, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham and Mrs. Minnie Crawford. It was indeed a great inspiration to this little club to be able to bring home for the second time the loving cup offered by Mrs. Gholston for the most outstanding club in the eighth district and three big and hearty cheers were given the wonderful president, Mrs. McWhorter.

Covington Woman's Club Holds Meeting.

Covington Woman's club held its December meeting at the library with Mrs. S. L. Waites, president, presiding. Mrs. W. Fitzhugh Lee, secretary, read the minutes of the November meeting, which were adopted. Mrs. H. B. McDonald, treasurer, reported the sum of $427.17 taken in during the year with total expenditure of $357.59.

It was decided that the club put forth an extra effort to win the district loving cup. Mrs. R. A. Norris reported for the library committee that a place had been fixed to keep the silver recently purchased and told of the need of a new heater for the library. It was decided to purchase the heater and a donation of $25 was made by R. A. Norris. Mrs. Paul Shepherd was elected to membership. Mrs. S. L. Waites delivered a message from Mrs. J. L. Allgood, expressing her love for the club and her regrets at leaving.

Mrs. Walker Combs, chairman of the public welfare committee, had charge of the program and introduced the Honorable R. P. Lester as the principal speaker of the afternoon. At the close of his talk, a large part of which dealt with the possibilities of the junior college at Oxford, a motion was made by Mrs. W. C. Clark, which was seconded, that every movement of the junior college at Oxford be indorsed by the Woman's club.

Little Miss Christine Jackson gave a humorous reading, which was followed with music by Miss Caroline Lee. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge as follows: Mrs. Walker Combs, Mrs. E. H. Mobley, Mrs. F. M. Jackson, Mrs. Joe Pittman, Mrs. J. N. Leonard and Mrs. Wilson Biggers.

Fourth District Elects Mrs. Jones As Its President

Mrs. W. R. Jones, of Greenville, was elected president at the 17th annual convention of the fourth district held in Greenville, with the following officers elected to serve for 1928-29: President, Mrs. W. R. Jones, Greenville; first vice president, Mrs. W. C. Hudmon, West Point; second vice president, Mrs. T. C. Hudson, Columbus; recording secretary, Mrs. S. A. Keefer, Manchester; treasurer, Mrs. Hettie White, Chipley; parliamentarian, Mrs. Clifford Smith, LaGrange. Mrs. Henry M. Bird was elected to serve on the nominating committee from the district in Decatur in May.

Miss Dora Freeman, Greenville, second vice president of the district, deputized Hon. J. P. Atkinson in behalf of the mayor and city; Mrs. J. A. Gaston and Mrs. R. B. Gilbert, presidents of the hostess clubs, extended greetings. The response was made by Mrs. W. C. Hudmon, of West Point.

Mrs. Henry M. Bird, president of the district, presided over the convention and after the prayer by Rev. A. E. Scott, Mrs. Bird presented honor guests, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, state president; Mrs. A. H. Brenner, vice president-at-large; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, General Federation director for Georgia, and the officers of the district.

Mrs. Brantley's address, "Know Your Federation" was an epitome of federation knowledge, so clear and concise that most of it will remain in the heart and mind of every club woman fortunate enough to have heard her.

Mrs. Neal Kitchens, district chairman Tallulah Falls, held an interesting hour for the Industrial school. Mrs. Brenner's address on "Attaining Our Purpose Through Membership" and Mrs. Richardson's message from the General Federation were important features.

Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Brenner as judges, awarded the gavel to LaGrange, the library there being the most outstanding achievement in the district for 1927.

The resolution committee was most appreciative of the messages of welcome, inspirational speeches made by Mrs. Bird, Mrs. Brantley, Mrs. Brenner and Mrs. Richardson; the beautiful music in song and piano by Messrs. Frederick Botts, Joseph Freeman and Annie Holt Terrell.

Vidalia Bronte Club Presents Program.

The Vidalia Bronte club presented a Woodrow Wilson commemoration at the city hall with Mrs. J. C. Meadows, leader, and a speech made by Congressman Larsen. Assembly singing, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War." "Short Tributes to Wilson, as a Scholar, Leader and Southern Gentleman," Dr. C. O'N. Martendale. Chorus, "The Day Is Dying in the West." "Wilson's Loyalty to the Faith of His Forefathers," Miss Anne Rosansky. Poems, "We Shall Not Sleep," "We Shall Keep Faith," Miss Alice Adams. Committee, Mrs. Paul Thomas, Miss Mina Edenfield, Mrs. J. O. Palmer and Mrs. W. R. Wyatt.

Miss Clara McConnell Entertains at Tea.

Miss Clara Mitchell McConnell entertained at tea Saturday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius McConnell, on Peachtree road. One hundred members of the school girl set called betwen 4 and 6 o'clock, the affair being one of the most elaborate inaugurating the Yuletide season.

Miss McConnell was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Lucius McConnell, and Misses Ida Thomas, Aline Timmons, Helen Smith, Susan Scott, Edith Kendrick and Fort Scott Meador. Little Misses Betty McConnell, Lillian Robert and Mary Virginia McConnell, cousins of the hostess, received the cards.

A Few Words to Fathers

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Why all the magazine articles, why all the newspaper articles, the sermons from pulpits and judicial benches about woman and her job of keeping the home fires burning? How about the other party? How about his duties? Are we to believe that his are executed in the sight of man, God and his wife when he brings home a pay envelope, which half the time his wife doesn't get an even break on?

"In this appalling increase in divorce, of which we are reminded almost daily, is it possible to believe that woman is the sole cause and with her alone lies the remedy? Does not the old bromide about it taking two to make a quarrel serve in the instance of divorce? And being so, why not ask oftener 'Are Men Husbands?' instead of 'Are Women Wives?' 'Are You on Your Job, Old Frozen Face, Grouch or What Have You?' 'Are You the Sweetheart She Married?' 'Are You a Sympathetic, Loving Husband?' et cetera, et cetera."—Weary.

Fair enough, Weary! Let's ask it. What kind of mate are you, anyway, Old Man?

Just stand still a minute until we get the tape out and see if we have been measuring the wrong person for shortcomings that lend to domestic friction!

Of course, when you married, one of the dreams you had was to be met on your return from work by a charmingly frocked, adorably coiffured, sweetly smiling dear who would offer her arms and lips affectionately while you secretly marveled how such sweet desserts could be meted out to one so undeserving.

Now that you may not be met with the coveted warmth of affection do you ever ask yourself if you might not be responsible for the change? Do you take a real interest in your home? Or, as a homemaker, do you think your job is done with the financing of it?

Of course, you have to go to shop or office every morning, put in a full day of struggle and toil. You have to buck competitors. You have hours, days, perhaps, of anxiety that are grilling. You're doing it all for the little woman and the children. You're honestly intent on getting ahead that they may have more comforts or luxuries, as the case may be; and you, yourself, may be able to enjoy some of them, too. But do you become possessed of the feeling that because of this effort of yours you alone are entitled to all the consideration at the end of the day; that you should be absolved from blame should a worried mood pursue you to the doorstep and the absent minded peck that you bestow be accepted, not at its face value but as meaning your heart is always in the right place, though your moods may vary?

If you expect the little woman to greet you warmly, isn't it only fair that you give her the chance with a display of affection yourself? Unhappily, where the emotions are concerned, women are peculiarly sensitive. A warm response is easy enough, however, if there is a smile and a happy greeting to respond to.

Few of us are so phlegmatically built as to escape moods entirely. The wife is expected to respect those of her husband. She accepts the old alibi of business worries for his moments of silence, indifference or curtness because it is her job to try to "understand" her husband. How about husbands striving a bit, too, to understand that the life of a woman with a couple of children to look after during the day is likewise apt to be harassed beyond measure by mischief or accidents they fall into? In between watching them, there are sewing jobs, mending, planning of meals, cooking, doing those hundred and one things around a house to improve its appearance so "John" will have a charming home to bring his friends to.

Suppose, at the end of one of these days, her greeting is a bit preoccupied, a little understanding might save that sulky hour before and during mealtime. A cheery word, an honest interest in what has engaged her day would clear the atmosphere.

Some men seem to expect to walk into a home and find things just as they would be in a hotel. And take just about as much interest in how the management conducts things as there. And their attitude toward the whole place is one of "I pay for it. Why shouldn't it be so?" Praise is the last thing that ever occurs to them to offer. No home was ever broken where praise was given freely.

We hear a good deal of counsel administered to wives about being polite and nice to husbands' friends. Courtesy to a wife's friends is quite as much in order. It is the same gross affront to snub Emma X in your own home as for your wife to "freeze up" when Bill B drops in. If she is willing to accept invitations with you to the home of friends of yours, what right have you to refuse to play bridge or dine with a woman friend of hers?

Affection Is Appreciated.

How often do you bestow on your mate those little marks of affection so dear to her—an unsolicited caress, a hug, a word of flattery? These are the things that mean more to woman's happiness than motors, pearls or diamond bracelets. The latter are presented on rare occasions but the other little things that make life sweet may be offered frequently and often, and more than anything else to keep alive the love in a woman's heart.

Are you the kind of man who thinks women are incompetent to handle money? If so, have you ever given your wife an honest chance to prove what she could do with it? You aren't the ideal husband just because you give her enough to buy food and clothing for herself and for the family. More bitterness in homes is caused over the money question than any other. Men are woefully short sighted who do not take their wives into their financial confidence.

Half of the extravagances of women are due to ignorance of their mates' earning power or are committed in a spirit of indifference as to whether things can be afforded or not. When the wife is let in on the partnership she knows how the balance sheet stands and there are very, very few wives who will break the confidence placed in them on money matters. When lean days are fallen upon, lean days are lived in the knowledge that when fuller days arrive they, too, will be shared equally.

Yaarab To Play Host To Kiddies At Xmas Session

Nobles of Yaarab temple will be hosts to a large number of little guests from the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children at the Christmas ceremonial session to be held in the auditorium next Wednesday evening. Owing to the big program the first section of the ceremonial has been set to start at 6:30 preceded by a buffet luncheon beginning at 5:30, at which hour the candidates will report.

Immediately following the first section the children will arrive under escort of nobles and nurses to witness an elaborate tableau depicting "The First Christmas" in which some 50 nobles will participate, assisted by the band and chanters. In "The Christmas of 1927," Santa Claus will appear in his sleigh drawn by reindeers and accompanied by his assistant with a dog sled amid a regular Christmas snow storm. There will be a huge Christmas tree with presents for all the children, music by the chanters and band, and some genuine surprises such as happen on Christmas, in which the patrol will participate.

The guests will leave at this point and the second section of the ceremonial will be put on at 9 p. m.

Salvation Army Will Play Santa To Poor of City

Baskets, each containing all necessary ingredients for a regular Christmas dinner, will be distributed to several hundred needy Atlanta families on Christmas Eve, Saturday, December 24, at the Salvation Army temple at 54 Ellis street. This announcement was made Saturday at army headquarters, by Colonel Alfred A. Chandler, chief secretary.

Commissioner and Mrs. W. A. McIntyre will be hosts for the occasion, which will include, as well as the basket feature, a special program of music, song and cheerful good will suitable for the season.

Children of the poor will not be forgotten. In addition to the comestibles, tops, articles of clothing, candy, fruit and nuts will be provided for many hundreds of youngsters who otherwise would probably suffer the pangs of disappointment when Santa Claus failed to notice their empty stockings.

Salvation Army workers have made careful, sympathetic investigation of all cases and have discovered many families in the city who really need this help. Some cases have been caused by sickness and some by unemployment and the army, seeking to render permanent relief, is anxious to hear from any who can offer employment to either men or women. Any person with work to offer should communicate with the relief department at the army headquarters.

All Christmas extras provided for the needy by the army are paid for entirely out of the fund collected by the Christmas kettles on the corners of the city streets. The army urgently asks all who can to give to this cause according to their means, big or little. Contributions may be placed in the kettles or mailed direct to headquarters on Ellis street.

B. Y. P. U. WILL OPEN SCHOOL JANUARY 23

Completion of plans for the annual city-wide training school of the B. Y. P. U., to be held for a week beginning January 23, at the Ponce de Leon Baptist church and the West End Baptist church, featured a meeting of that organization held at the Baptist Tabernacle, according to the announcement Friday of Edwin S. Preston, state secretary of B. Y. P. U.

Mr. Preston stated that on account of the increase in membership and interest in the annual training school, it had been found necessary to conduct the school in two separate churches, instead of one.

CITY EMPLOYEES PLAN OBSERVANCE OF XMAS HOLIDAYS

Employees of the Atlanta city hall went into training Saturday for Santa Claus and Christmas.

They took this step on the heels of announcement of Mayor I. N. Ragsdale that Christmas holidays will begin when city hall closes next Friday afternoon and will end the following Tuesday morning.

Steve Carter will act as Santa Claus and Chief of Construction William A. Hansell will be his first assistant at the annual Christmas tree of the construction department Friday afternoon. The observance is an annual event of the department and all employees and the mayor are invited to attend.

BLEDSOE WINS PRIZE IN VICTOR CONTEST

First prize of $5 in gold for the best essay on "What Victor Red Seal Record I Sell Best, and Why?" was awarded to Roy Bledsoe, local Victor record salesman, last week. The award was made at the meeting of the Victor Record club at the Daffodil Tea room.

With E. W. Dahlberg, popular Cable Piano company official, presiding, the club was given a demonstration of Victor records by E. W. Schnitzler, a factory representative, the event being highly beneficial to the local salesmen.

Addresses were made by M. W. Edwards, factory representative; F. Schwabel, sales manager of the Elyea Talking Machine company, and H. P. West, secretary of the club.

Emory Alumni Chain Banquet On January 25

Emory University, Ga., December 17.—Emory university alumni will celebrate the thirteenth birthday of its establishment as a university January 28 by more than a 100 banquets ranging from Seattle to Key West, Raymond B. Nixon, alumni secretary, has announced.

Atlanta, with probably the largest assembling, will gather approximately 500 to 1,000 alumni in one vast banquet. The speaker of the Atlanta banquet will be heard by the banquet assemblies in other parts of America by radio broadcast.

Arrangements have already been completed by active old grads in Seattle, Washington, Key West, Philadelphia and many more cities for large banquets. Although no definite word has been received yet from the men in China and Korea, these men will likely repeat their customs as in former years.

A special edition of The Wheel, campus publication, will be issued for the occasion featuring stories of Emory's rapid growth and development. These papers will be distributed to alumni wherever the charter day banquets are being staged.

"SHORTY" SINCLAIR, FORMER TECH STAR, WEDS MISS MOORE

Benjamin W. (Shorty) Sinclair, former Georgia Tech football star, now in charge of all hydroelectric plants for the Georgia Power company, and Miss Ruth Moore, popular Atlanta society girl, were married on Thursday, according to an announcement Saturday. They were married in Atlanta and kept their marriage a secret until Saturday, when a postal card was received by friends.

Mrs. Sinclair is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Moore, of 616 Seminole avenue.

LIVING CHRISTMAS TREES

A living tree for Christmas adds enduring beauty and enhancing value to your home. Here is the Spirit of Christmas—of Life and Love and Beauty—a young, upright, living Tree.

Slashing down beautiful trees and shrubs has robbed our woods of their beauty. This vandalism, wanton in destruction, is certainly not the spirit of Christmas nor is it encouraged by any of fair mind or reason.

Hastings' Living Christmas Trees—Indian Cedars, Arborvitae, Junipers and Japanese Cypress—are beautifully formed, Nursery grown, hardy evergreens, with a nice ball of earth well burlapped around the roots. The balls are fitted in green pots or plant tubs, according to size, so they stand without support indoors for Christmas and are ready to plant permanently in your yard after Christmas.

Reserve at least one Living Christmas Tree now for yourself—perhaps one for your best friend. It will be delivered whenever you like.

Prices are $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $5.00

Prominent Women Make Addresses At Baptist Meet

Women of the Second Baptist church met for a day of prayer, and Mrs. Hal F. Hentz, president of the Woman's Missionary and Benevolent society, presided at the morning and afternoon sessions, which were held in the church.

Mrs. Wilbur Jones, superintendent of the Atlanta W. B. M. U. association, was the principal speaker for the afternoon.

Short talks were made at the morning session by Mrs. William Walker Brookes, Mrs. L. L. Olive, Mrs. M. L. Brittain and Mrs. Carter Helm Jones, recently returned from a visit to her daughter in Oklahoma City. Dr. C. W. Pruitt, a returned missionary of the north China division, was the principal speaker at this hour. Dr. Pruitt told of his work with Miss Lottie Moon, who preceded him to this field, with Mrs. James, and of the loss to the mission board caused by the recent death of Dr. Charles Hartwell, who succeeded Dr. Pruitt on his return to America.

A Christmas offering was taken for the Lottie Moon fund in a beautiful Japanese bowl, after which the bowl was presented by the president to Mrs. Wilbur Jones.

Announcement was made that Mrs. Carter Helm Jones would entertain the executive board of the society at the December meeting.

The recent death of Mrs. Ellen Eley, whose grandchildren are active in the B. Y. P. U. and Sunday school work of the church, and the unfortunate accident to Hal F. Hentz, whose wife is the beloved president of the W. M. S., have cast a shadow of sorrow and sadness over the membership.

A Christmas service for both Sunday school and church will be held in the church Sunday, December 18, from 5 to 6 o'clock. There will be special music, a talk by the pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, and a pageant by the Fidelis class of young women at this twilight hour, and the public is cordially invited.

College Park Baptist.

College Park Baptist W. M. S. observed the week of prayer for foreign missions at an all-day service the Tuesday before Thanksgiving, with each of the five circles having an important part on the impressive program.

The Susan Anderson circle told of missionary efforts among the Jews; the Kate McLure circle spoke of woman's work in South America; the Clarke circle emphasized Baptist advance in Japan; missions in China was the subject of the Ayers circle, and the Clifforde Hunter circle gave interesting details of the women of European missionary fields. The society was fortunate to have Mrs. Harvey Clarke as the speaker of the afternoon, because of her years of experience as missionary in Japan.

A delicious lunch was served at noon. The meeting closed with a short business session, the president, Mrs. Henry Wall presiding.

Rehoboth Baptists.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Rehoboth Baptist church of the Georgia association was recently honored by a visit from Mrs. T. L. Lewis, of Atlanta, honorary president of the Federated Church Women of Georgia. This society has had a wonderful growth since its organization in 1888, when Mrs. S. Walker, a returned missionary from China, assisted in its organization. The society is divided into circles and each named for a missionary, as follows: Dr. T. W. Ayers, Miss Alva Gunn, Miss Lucy Wright. Each circle is studying home and foreign mission books. Officers at the present time are Mrs. W. J. Garrett, president; Mrs. George O. Holliday, vice president; Mrs. J. D. Mulligan, treasurer; Miss Pinkie Walton, secretary.

Mrs. James D. Rhodes, mission study chairman of Baptist Woman's Missionary union of Atlanta association, announces that during the coming year the advanced mission study class meets quarterly, the books being studied at home and reviewed only at the regular meetings. The next meeting will be held on Thursday morning, January 5, at 10 o'clock in Rich's conference room. Mrs. Thena White Caldwell will lead the review on the book, "The How and Why of Missions."

Officer of W. M. U.

Mrs. J. C. Lanier, of West Point, vice president of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, who represents Georgia on the board of trustees of the W. M. U. Training school, Louisville, Ky.

Methodist Societies Hold Meetings.

The missionary society of Rome celebrated the harvest day at the church on Monday. Mrs. L. D. Yeargin presided. After the yearly reports Miss Lucy Jim Webb, who has been a missionary in Shanghai, gave an interesting account of her work in the Orient. At the noon hour luncheon was served by representatives from the different circles. The outstanding feature of the afternoon was a talk on missions by Mrs. Paul White. One hundred and fifty guests, among them being Mrs. M. E. Tilly, of Atlanta, and Mrs. J. F. Fowler, of Cartersville, and Mrs. L. M. Awtry, of Acworth, were entertained.

The mothers' class of Park Street church held their annual home-coming day in the classroom Sunday, December 11. Mrs. Brevard Montgomery presiding. The class history was read by Mrs. P. D. Murphy. Former teachers present were presented and brought greetings to the class. The list of teachers who have served are Mesdames George Knott, M. E. Ford, Sybil Florrid, J. H. Longino, Arthur Hale, Lila Ellis. A service tablet was presented to the class on which was inscribed the names of all who had gone out into the broader field of service from its ranks. During the current year there has been a break in the ranks of the class, Mrs. R. E. Barnes having been called home. A memorial service was held for her. Mrs. W. W. Lowy gave a reading, "Why Should We Weep for Those Who Die?" She also sang a solo accompanied on the piano by Miss Marion Hope. A memorial tablet was presented by Mrs. Arthur Hale. The class has made during the current year a most liberal contribution to the building fund for the annex, has erected and equipped a cottage at Mt. Gilead campground, and is helping to keep a student in college and bears the record of never turning down a worthy charity.

The Lily Nelms circle met December 12 at the Wrens Nest, Mrs. B. R. Stallings presiding. Under the new conference rulings all circles are disbanded and reorganized for the new year. The roundup of the year's work showed all pledges had been met, and all obligations met. In the social hour a Biblical contest was presented.

Hospital Auxiliary Holds Meeting.

The December meeting of the Woman's auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital was held on Friday, December 9, in the Joe Brown Connally reception room, with the president, Mrs. James L. Key, presiding. After a short business session, the meeting took the form of a memorial to the late Mrs. E. L. Connally, whose life and services meant much to the hospital, constantly giving as she freely did, of her time and influence, establishing both a reception room and a nurses' library as a memorial to her son, Joe Brown Connally, who died from injuries sustained during the world war.

Beautiful tributes were paid Mrs. Connally by Mrs. M. Dawson, Colonel F. J. Paxon, Mrs. Wilbur Jones, superintendent of the Atlanta association W. M. U.; Miss Jenkins, superintendent of nurses of the hospital; Mr. Franklin, superintendent of the hospital, and Mrs. T. L. Lewis. The principal address was made by Dr. Carter Helm Jones, Mrs. Connally's pastor. The closing tribute was by the president, Mrs. James L. Key.

Calvary W. M. S. Observes Harvest Day.

Calvary W. M. S. observed harvest day with a program Thursday, December 8. Mrs. E. W. Brogdon led the morning devotional on "Harvest Time."

The following new circle chairmen were appointed by the president and the circles were reorganized for next year: Mesdames E. C. Houston, J. W. Marshall, A. R. Marbut, Collier, Blalock, Babb, Gunn, E. L. McCrory, Mullinaux.

Circle No. 1, Mrs. E. C. Wilson chairman, served a luncheon at noon, and the afternoon was given over to the annual reports of the missionary society, Miss Mattie Timmons leading the afternoon devotional.

U. S. W. V. Auxiliary To Give Hospital Party.

United States government hospital 48 will be entertained at a party at 7:30 o'clock Monday evening, December 19, according to a decision reached at the meeting of the Theodore Roosevelt auxiliary No. 2, U. S. W. V., department of Georgia, which was held December 11 at the Red Men's Wigwam, 86 Central avenue. Mrs. H. D. Shaddeau presided. Reports of committees featured the meeting. Mrs. Maggie Waldrip won the prize for securing the largest number of new members for the year.

O. E. S. Chapter To Hold Bazar Monday.

Monday, December 19, Georgia chapter, No. 127, O. E. S., will hold a Christmas bazar at the Hightower Hardware company, 132 Whitehall street, S. W.

Many attractive and useful articles are offered, consisting of hand-made infants' caps, embroidered bridge sets, aprons, scarfs, buffet and vanity sets and numbers of other miscellaneous pieces.

Briefly Told

Among the prominent women present at the memorial service of the Woman's auxiliary in honor of Mrs. E. L. Connally held at the Georgia Baptist hospital, December 9, were Mrs. W. J. Neel, Cartersville, president of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, and Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer.

At the business meeting of the Woman's auxiliary of Georgia Baptist hospital, December 9, the sale of the hospital calendars was stressed, and each church represented was asked to keep these calendars before the ladies until all are disposed of.

Mrs. J. L. Jackson, wife of the pastor of Kirkwood Baptist church, and superintendent of Kate Dawson good will center, is ill at the Georgia Baptist hospital.

The meeting of the first district of Baptist W. M. U. of Atlanta association, held December 13, at Cooper Street church, was largely attended and presided over by the secretary, Mrs. F. D. Burge.

Mrs. A. W. Moore, of Merritts Avenue W. M. S., reports two coverlets quilted by the members at the November meeting, when there were 16 present.

Mrs. Paul Eggli has been appointed leader of the Sunbeams of the Second Baptist church.

The newly elected officers of the W. M. S. of the Merritts Avenue Baptist church are: Mesdames J. L. Smith, president; J. L. Thompson, vice president; W. H. Evans, recording secretary; S. W. Moore, treasurer; G. W. Cox, mission leader; A. W. Moore, corresponding secretary; Rainey and C. A. Seabolt, committee on personal service; J. L. Smith, A. W. Moore and J. L. Thompson, social committee; S. W. Moore, J. I. Thompson and Brownlee, committee on visiting sick; Miss Minnie Thornton, treasurer of building fund, and Mrs. Burger, pianist.

Methodist News of Interest Throughout State of Georgia

The final meeting for the year of the Missionary society of First Methodist church was held at the church on Monday. Mrs. Thomas Latham filled the period of devotion from the book of Jonah. Mrs. John Turner sang a solo accompanied on the piano by Mrs. W. H. Nelms. The report of the nominating committee was adopted with the following officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. Fred E. Thomas; vice president, Mrs. Joseph W. Clayton; treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Jones; local treasurer, Mrs. R. H. Fike; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Woodford Robinson; recording secretary, Mrs. R. L. Lee Miller; superintendent Bible study and mission study, Mrs. J. F. Boyd; superintendent young people, Mrs. J. M. Daniel; social service, Mrs. W. F. Trenary; agent, Voice, Mrs. J. T. Bowden; superintendent supplies, Mrs. John Staton; superintendent children's department, Mrs. Willis J. Davis; social activities, Mrs. C. R. Justi; superintendent publicity, Mrs. J. W. Setse.

St. Paul's Society.

The Woman's Missionary society of St. Paul church met recently at the church, Mrs. T. P. White, vice president, in the chair. The following officers for the new year were elected: President, Mrs. Fred Wishmeyer; vice president, Mrs. W. H. Coppage; recording secretary, Mrs. W. C. Turman; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. O. White; treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Chestnutt; local treasurer, Mrs. G. V. Greene; superintendent publicity, Mrs. W. W. Jackson; superintendent supplies, Mrs. W. C. Butler; superintendent local work, Mrs. S. A. Rudder. The society observed the week of prayer, the young people and the juniors having charge of Wednesday evening prayer service. The November literary meeting was in charge of Mrs. Hamilton's circle. The leaflets were presented by different ladies of the circle. Mrs. A. P. Jordan gave the report of the visit of her circle. Mrs. Woods, chairman, gave a report of the visit to the city mission board meeting. Mrs. Ballenger gave the closing chapters of the book, "Moslem Women." This has proven a most interesting and helpful book.

Fayetteville Missionary Society.

On December 3, in the home of Mrs. W. B. Hollingsworth, the Missionary society of Fayetteville held an all-day study class, the book under consideration being "Moslem Women." Mrs. McBurns gave the review of the book. Mrs. Arthur Hale gave the devotional from the book of Jonah; the last of the minor prophets. Miss Elizabeth Tillman, a gifted pianist, gave two exquisite numbers. Miss Jim Tillman gave several readings. Mrs. Arthur Hale, in behalf of Mrs. Hollingsworth, for her society, presented to Mrs. Watkins, the wife of the retiring pastor of the Methodist church of Fayetteville, a gift of appreciation with the love and godspeed of the auxiliary to accompany her into her new field of labor. Mrs. J. W. Culpepper expressed to Mrs. Hollingsworth for the society their appreciation of all she had meant and stood for in the successful year the society has just closed. A beautiful blooming plant was presented to Mrs. Hollingsworth by the auxiliary. About forty guests enjoyed the hospitality of the president.

Board of Missions.

The board of city missions held the last meeting of the year at Wesley house Tuesday, December 6, at 10 o'clock, with a very good representation from the different churches. This being the time for election of officers the following slate was, presented by the nominating committee and accepted by the board: President, Mrs. Wallace Rogers; vice president, Mrs. John Manget; recording secretary, Mrs. J. W. Hawthorne; superintendent education, Mrs. Hugh Harris; superintendent domestic arts, Mrs. H. C. Montgomery; superintendent house, Mrs. H. W. Dent; chairman business efficiency, Mrs. Joseph W. Clayton; treasurer, Mrs. W. M. Nichols. The president wishes to call attention to a change of meeting place in January, February and March. Owing to the lack of proper heating facilities the meetings of those months will be held at Wesley Memorial church.

Trinity Church.

The Business Woman's circle of Trinity Methodist church meets Monday evening, December 12. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Alonzo Richardson will give a Bible talk on Jonah, and Miss Eleanor Raoul will talk on legislation.

The regular business meeting of Park Street Missionary society was held Monday afternoon at the church. Mrs. DuPont Murphy gave a resume of all the minor prophets which have been the study for the entire year. Reports of all officers were read and approved. The leaflet on "War and Its Prevention" was given by Mrs. D. M. Therrell. Plans were made to send a Christmas box to Miss Bertha Tucker in Mantanzas, Cuba, and also one to Agnes Shoemake, the scholarship girl at Vashti. The pastor, Rev. Marvin Franklin, was present.

Second Baptist School To Hold Twilight Meet.

The Christmas celebration of the Sunday school of the Second Baptist church will take place at the twilight service in the main auditorium of the church Sunday afternoon, December 18. Special music by the choir, singing by the children, a Christmas message from the pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, and a pageant by the Fidelis class will be the special features. The pageant will present the idea of giving, and Christmas morning at 9:30 o'clock the members of the Sunday school will bring gifts, which will be placed in charge of Deacon Ernest F. Brown. Following the reception of gifts, the life of Christ will be shown by moving picture in the Sunday school auditorium. L. A. Witherspoon is chairman of the program committee, John S. Spalding, Sunday school superintendent.

Is the Honor Guest Forgotten?

Once upon a time there was a little child who was to have a birthday and all the friends decided to make a great celebration. For weeks the most elaborate preparations were made, the most exquisite gifts were provided for each other and the spirit of good cheer reigned supreme. In the midst of the festivities it was suddenly discovered that the little child in whose honor the celebration had been planned had been forgotten, no one providing gifts for Him. Friends, are we, too, forgetting the Christ-child? Or are we trying to carry the message of hope and good cheer into the hearts of our fellow men, remembering that "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto Me."

Quitman Club Does Splendid Work.

The December Woman's club meeting was under the auspices of the welfare committee and featured a lecture by Miss Martha McAlpine, of the home economics department, State College of Agriculture, on "Newer Ways With Children." Miss McAlpine is working under the auspices of the Laura Spelman Rockefeller fund of $75,000,000, founded for work with women and children. She gave a review of the child study laboratory at Athens and the study groups of women.

The welfare committee of the club organized the sale of health seals, will sponsor the community tree of light, is training girl carollers who will sing downtown Christmas Eve, the offerings they receive to go to the Georgia Children's Home society. They will also sing for the jail inmates, the county farm and prison. The club recently pledged $500 to the library building fund and at this time appropriated the second $100 to the fund. One hundred dollars has been appropriated for the civic improvement committee to use in park plantings.

Mrs. Charles Boynton Is Supper Hostess.

Mrs. Charles Boynton was hostess at a buffet supper Saturday at her home on Habersham road in compliment to Miss Mary Louise Brumby, president of the Debutante club, and Miss Mary Armstrong, who has recently returned from an extended visit to Europe.

Assisting her mother in the entertainment of her guests was Miss Estelle Boynton, who returned Saturday from Vassar to spend the Christmas holidays with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Boynton.

Miss Rudolph Weds Clayton M. Raymond.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rudolph announce the marriage of their sister, Nell Burke, to Clayton Morse Raymond, of Detroit and Atlanta, which was solemnized November 27, Father Cotter officiating. After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple are at home at 973 Rosedale road.

Miss Mable Dumas Is Honored at Supper.

Misses Elizabeth Boone and Dorothy Taliaferro entertained at a buffet supper at the Hotel Candler Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, in compliment to Miss Mable Dumas, a bride-elect.

Those invited included Misses Mary Frances Witherspoon, Martha Buchanan, Ethel Hancock, Louise Hancock, Marjorie Randall, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. Daniel, Jean Walton, T. C. Stribbling, A. N. Patton, David Cox, Dennis Walters, Judson Mitchell, Mr. Connell and John Woodruff.

'Light Living Trees' Is Slogan Of Atlanta Camp Fire Girls

In order that the poor little girls in Fulton and DeKalb counties might have a merry Christmas, the Atlanta Camp Fire Girls have dressed 200 dolls to be distributed among them through the Family Welfare of Atlanta and the Red Cross of Decatur. Each girl bought and dressed a doll and returned it to Camp Fire headquarters, where they are patiently waiting to make some little heart glad. Several groups in the city have dressed dolls 100 per cent, including Okeewapo and Okeeuda, of O'Keefe Junior High school; Sahdahhee, of Decatur Junior High school; Toheo, of Emory university; Winnona, of Decatur Junior High school; Nepoppew, of Winnona Park school, Decatur, and Atyokwa, of Samuel Inman school. Each girl will receive a leather honor for her ceremonial gown.

Okeewapo, Mrs. Virginia Wade Bolden, guardian, took December as their service month. Twenty dolls were dressed and turned in to Camp Fire headquarters. A candy pulling at the school cleared $27 with which to do their service work and to a family of eight a Christmas tree will be given, including clothing, Christmas dinner, and toys. Following the Christmas slogan of the Camp Fire Girls, "Light the Living Trees," Okeewapo will light a cedar on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Atkinson, 112 Peachtree street. The Cheschamay girls, Mrs. Thelma White Caldwell, guardian, will "Light a Living Tree" on the lawn of Mrs. H. B. White, 1308 Gordon street. Ihaha Camp Fire Girls, Miss Essie Belle Brockman, guardian, will give a Christmas basket to a poor family. The Joel Chandler Harris Camp Fire Girls, Miss Page, guardian, are asking scrap books for the children at the Home for the Friendless. The Netoppew Camp Fire Girls of Winnona Park school, Mrs. Millard Beals, guardian, will sing Christmas carols. The Glenn Chanyata girls will sing Christmas carols and through the Red Cross, care for two poor families. Mrs. Jake Harris is guardian of this group. The Winnona girls of Decatur Junior High school, Mrs. Morris Harralson, guardian, will take care of a poor family and sing Christmas carols Christmas Eve. The Chwagmyt Camp Fire Girls, Mrs. Harry Hall, guardian, will pack a Christmas basket and sing carols for the family whose father is ill. Tenth Street Camp Fire Girls and their guardian, Miss Mollie Whitehead, will visit shutins, singing Christmas carols and giving readings. Sadahhee, Mrs. H. D. Decker, guardian, have made marbleized scrap books for children at the Scottish Rite hospital and will sing carols for them, give a program and "Light a Living Tree."

Chi Omega Honor Football Team Of U. of Georgia

Athens, Ga., December 17.—Members of the University of Georgia football team were entertained at a buffet supper by the Chi Omega sorority, and the citizens of Athens honored the players at a banquet at a local country club Thursday evening.

J. C. Wardlaw, of the Near East Relief, New York city, and formerly on the faculty of the state normal school here, has been elected head of the department of home study to succeed Dr. George A. Hutchinson, who asked to be relieved of the executive work in order that he may have all his time for the classroom. F. R. Brandon, of the Peabody institute, Nashville, Tenn., has been elected adjunct professor of the extension department.

Dr. Alfred Scott, of Atlanta, and professor of chemistry in the University of Georgia, has been elected head of that department to succeed the late Dr. Henry Clay White. H. T. Scoggins, M. S., of Emory university, Atlanta, has been made an instructor in the chemistry department.

Atlanta with 105 students leads in the University of Georgia enrollment, with the exception of Athens, which has 256 students, according to a survey just completed. Savannah, with 60 students, comes next, followed by Augusta with 50, and Columbus with 34. Waycross has 23, Macon 20 and Albany 19. Thirteen states other than Georgia contribute students to the Athens institutions, viz.: Florida, North Carolina, Alabama, Virginia, New York, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Illinois, Louisiana, West Virginia, Mississippi and Tennessee. The report shows that 58 per cent of the students come from towns of less than 10,000 inhabitants, there being 300 such towns sending students.

Ben H. Hardy, Jr., Barnesville, senior in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, has been elected president of the Phi Kappa literary society at the University of Georgia. Other officers chosen are John S. Candler, II, Atlanta, first assistant; M. E. Brinson, Jr., Waycross, second assistant; Sanders Walker, Macon, secretary; Charles L. Hardy, Gainesville, sergeant-at-arms, and Henry Hofferman, Augusta, critic.

Final examinations, marking the close of the first term's work at the university, will begin Monday, December 19, and continue through Thursday, December 22, after which the students will leave Athens for the Christmas holidays, which will be spent at their several homes over the state. The winter terms opens Wednesday, January 4, although students must be in Athens and registered by 5 p. m. on January 3. Registrar T. W. Reed urges that the hour—5 p. m.—be noted, because, as he says, all students not registered by that time will be made to pay a fine.

Professor Robert L. McWhorter, of the Lumpkin Law school of the university, addressed students in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism Tuesday evening on "The Law of the Press." He explained libel and its defenses and defined legal terms with which the newspaper man ought to be familiar. The address was sponsored by the Quill club, at whose meeting, following Professor McWhorter's address, Ben H. Hardy, Jr., Barnesville, made a report on his trip to the University of Kansas as a delegate to the Sigma Delta Chi convention. Installation of a chapter of this professional journalistic fraternity, which is to absorb the Quill club, will take place just after the holidays, it was decided Tuesday night. Dr. S. V. Sanford and Prof. John E. Drewry of the journalism faculty were elected associate members of Sigma Delta Chi, and Mr. Drewry was made faculty adviser of the University Chapter.

Eighteen years of service to the University of Georgia as leader of the band will be completed January 1, by R. T. Dottery, better known to the Athens students as "Fess". When Mr. Dottery took charge of the band prior to 1910, it was not connected with the military department, many of the students had to furnish their own instruments, and the musicians did not accompany the teams as they do today. The Red and Black, campus newspaper, in an editorial in the current issue, says: "Taking control at a time when the band was very small and very ill-trained, Mr. Dottery has worked with it, directed it, and led it to its present position as one of the best college outfits in the south."

The Bulldogs is the name of a new honor club that has been formed at the university, and whose membership is restricted to a few students who are outstanding for their work in the various campus activities. It was founded by Hollis Morris, Roy Jacobson, Atlanta, and Dan Tulley, Savannah, and its present membership includes I. M. (Chick) Shiver, Sylvester; Tom Nash, Washington; Glenn Crafin, Lindale; Jesse W. Drew, Preston; George E. (Babe) Florence, Athens; Felker Lewis, Monroe; Eugene Smith, Columbus, and James Harris, Athens. The insignia of the club is a red hat which is worn slouch fashion. The inner circle of the Pioneer club held a combination social and business meeting Wednesday. This is the oldest woman's club on the campus.

Miss Lamar To Wed Lieutenant Sample.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Lee Lamar, of Pensacola, Fla., and Lieutenant William Dodge Sample, U. S. A., son of Colonel Sample, U. S. A., whose marriage to Mrs. Edward F. Winston, of Atlanta, took place several months ago, is of cordial interest to Atlanta society.

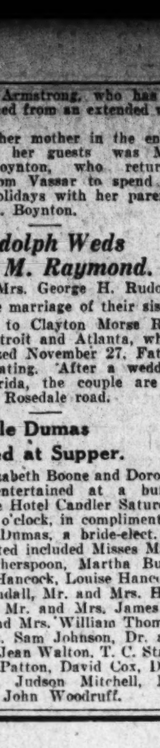

The charming bride-elect has often been the admired guest of Miss Isabel Breitenbucher, president of last year's Debutante club, and was educated at Gunston hall in Washington, D. C. She is a cousin of Mrs. Walter Lane, of Atlanta, and is of the brunette type of loveliness.

Lieutenant Sample is stationed at Pensacola, as instructor in aviation, and was graduated from the naval academy at Annapolis.

Miss Breitenbucher will be among the attendants at the wedding which takes place in the early spring.

Atlanta Chapter U. D. C. To Present Christmas Program

The Atlanta chapter U. D. C. will sponsor a very beautiful Christmas program Tuesday afternoon, December 20, at 2:30 o'clock at the chapter house, corner Juniper and Sixth streets, the president, Mrs. Stafford Seidell, presiding.

The flags will be presented by the veterans, Generals W. D. Freeman, A. J. Shropshire, Arch Avery, J. G. Ernest, W. D. Harris, George W. Wells, Alexander Smith, Thomas J. Buchanan, and others.

Mrs. G. E. Cooper, chairman of music, will introduce Solon Drukenmiller, who will sing a group of songs as only Mr. Drukenmiller can, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Stephen W. Banta. Miss Jean Howell, a gifted reader and a graduate of the Easterlock School of oratory, will read an exquisite story of the Christ Child.

Mrs. Walker Dunson will receive at the door, assisted by a group of the chapter members. Mrs. James Stanley Moore will have charge of the guest book. Tea will be served by Mrs. W. L. Inglis and Mrs. Lester Hyatt. Only reports from the officers will be read as this is a social meeting.

Avondale Estates Social News.

The newly elected entertainment committee of the Avondale Estates Community club has formulated plans for the Christmas season as follows: Friday evening, December 23, a Christmas party will be given and Saturday evening, December 31, a New Year's Eve party will be the attraction for the club members. Mrs. J. E. Okell is chairman of this committee, with Mrs. L. R. Potter, as cochairman, and they will be assisted by Mrs. C. R. Pyburn, Mrs. L. D. Shelnutt, Mrs. C. L. Henry, Mrs. H. C. Antrim, Mrs. Arnold S. Leavitt, Mrs. R. H. Robinson, Mrs. H. W. Schafer, Mrs. W. C. Harris, Mrs. Harold B. Hogan and Miss Elizabeth Catron.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Antrim and daughter, Miss Peggy Antrim, have returned to their home on Clarendon road, after a stay in Tampa, Fla., where they attended the convention of the National Ice Cream association, which was held there. Their young son, Forbes, was the guest of Mrs. J. E. Okell and family, of Kensington road, during their absence.

Miss Elizabeth Catron, of Avondale plaza, will leave soon for Deland, Fla., where she will spend the Christmas season with Mrs. Tom B. Stewart.

Mrs. C. R. Abbott, of Chicago, Ill., has returned to her home after a short visit with Mrs. J. E. Okell, of Kensington road, when she stopped off en route to her home from Orlando, Fla., where she has spent several weeks.

Mrs. D. F. Leake, of Berkeley road, will have as her guest Christmas day, her son, J. M. Ivy, a first classman in the United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y. Mr. Ivy will bring some of his classmen with him to enjoy Christmas with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Beall, of Fairfield drive, have with them now for several days, Mrs. Beall's sister, Miss Jane Broadhurst, who is on her way home from Shorter college, at Rome, and her cousin, Miss Virginia Moreland, who is on her way to Americus from Science Hill college at Shelbyville, Ky.

A group of the ladies of the Avondale chapter, Service Star Legion, visited Base Hospital No. 48 last week and entertained the boys there, playing bridge with them, after which they took a number of the veterans to Stone mountain. Mrs. W. B. Elliott arranged this delightful affair which brought cheer into the lives of these men who are struggling to regain their health.

Mrs. E. R. Avery, of Rock Hill, S. C., is visiting her sister, Mrs. D. F. Leake, of Berkeley road.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Castles, of Avondale road, had with them the past week end, Mr. Castles' sister, Mrs. W. L. McKeown, of Old Fort, N. C., who is spending part of the winter in Atlanta.

Mrs. S. L. Faver, of LaGrange, arrived Thursday to spend the holiday season with her granddaughter, Mrs. William Rogers, and family, of Clarendon road, Avondale.

News of Georgia State Woman's College.

Valdosta, Ga., December 17.—The December meeting of the Student Government association was held in Ashley hall Friday evening. "The Granting of Class Privileges" was discussed by Estha Freeman; "The Function of Classes in Upbuilding Ideals," by Cora Burghar; "Individual Honor and Self Reporting," by Sharon Satterfield; "The Ideal Attitude Toward Punishment," by Lois Sharpe; "The Necessity of Specific Regulations," by Katherine Blackshear, and "The Honor System," by Louise Benten.

Miss Martha Youngblood, who graduated from the college in 1923, and is a member of the faculty, spoke at vespers Thursday evening on "Sources of Happiness," "What Is Its Importance?" and "Where Can It Be Found?" Her answer to this last and most important question was: "Enjoy the little things of life. Find something you like to do and do it."

"Portraiture and Figure Painting in American Art" was the subject of an illustrated lecture presented before the Sororian and the Argonian Literary societies Saturday night.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LX., No. 186. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 18, 1927.

:-: SOCIETY BEAUTIES JOIN RANKS OF ATLANTA MATRONS :-:

The above group presents a trio of lovely figures, all of whom will at an early date be numbered among the city's prominent young matrons. At the upper left is Miss Irene Horton Hart, charming daughter of Mrs. John C. Hart, whose engagement, announced today, to Toulman Williams Hurt is of wide social importance their marriage to take place February 4, 1928. Miss Monica Hilda Ripley, of Seat Pleasant, Md., (at the lower left) will become the bride of Hunter Bell, of Atlanta, at a beautiful ceremony solemnized at 3 o'clock Wednesday, December 21, at Addison chap el, Seat Pleasant. The striking figure at the right of the page is Mrs. Edgar Watkins, Jr., whose marriage was solemnized at high noon Saturday at Grace Episcopal chur ch in Utica, N. Y. Mrs. Watkins was formerly Miss Louise Hatfield, beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Richard Hatfield, of Utica. Photo of Miss Hart by T hurston Hatcher; Photo of Miss Ripley by Harris & Ewing, of Washington, D. C.; photo of Mrs. Watkins is the work of the Bachrach studio.

Rowan-Wellborn Betrothal Bears Wide Social Import

Fashionable southern society finds engaging interest in the announcement made today of the betrothal of Miss Stella de Bondele Rowan, of Jacksonville, Ala., to William Bethune Wellborn, of Atlanta, their marriage to unite two of the south's oldest and most prominent families.

The lovely bride-elect is the beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hoke Rowan, leaders in the social, civic and financial life of Alabama and outstanding citizens of Jacksonville. Mrs. Rowan was formerly Miss Julia Gunter, a belle and beauty of Montgomery, Ala., both the Rowan and Gunter families numbering among their ancestry many of the makers of southern history.

Her father is a prominent figure in the textile industry of Alabama, being connected with Profile Cotton Mills, of Jacksonville.

Miss Rowan attended the fashionable Semple School for Girls in New York and has been an acknowledged belle wherever she has visited since finishing her education. She is the sister of Mrs. Weller Smith ,of Birmingham, Ala., and of Miss Rose Rowan, of Jacksonville.

Mr. Wellborn is the youngest son of M. B. Wellborn, well-known Atlanta banker, and the late Mrs. Wellborn, who before her marriage was Miss Mary Graves, of Rome, Ga. His father, prominently identified in financial circles of the south and east, is the retiring governor of the Federal Reserve bank, of Atlanta, moving to this city in 1914 to assume the chairmanship of the board upon the organization of the bank.

The groom-elect received his education at the University of Georgia where he was a popular member of the Chi Phi fraternity. Later he attended school at Williams college in Massachusetts and upon completion of his education accepted a position with the Citizens & Southern bank, of Atlanta.

He is the brother of Mrs. J. Fouche Matthews, of Anniston, Ala.; Miss Mary Wellborn, popular debutante of this season; John Dent Wellborn and Walter Harry Wellborn.

He will introduce his charming bride to a wide circle of friends, being a popular member of the younger set of society.

The marriage will be brilliantly solemnized in Jacksonville Thursday, December 29, and Mr. Wellborn and his bride will reside at 1559 Peachtree street, during the absence of the groom-elect's father who sails for a European trip January 5.

Week Before Xmas Filled With Gay Social Events

The week preceding Christmas, one of the gayest in many years, is crammed with hundreds of social affairs, the variety of important enterments including the debut party of Miss Anne Kessnich, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Kessnich, who will be introduced at a reception Monday afternoon at the Biltmore, the Girls' Cotillion club scheduled for Monday evening at the Biltmore; the marriage of Miss Louise Cooper and Thomas Hill Tennent, of Cuba, the ceremony being performed Wednesday at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Cooper, on Piedmont avenue; the wedding of Miss Monica Ripley and Hunter Bell in Seat Pleasant, Md., taking place in historic Addison chapel next Wednesday afternoon, and the debut of Miss Mary Louise Brumby and her cousin, Miss Mary Inman Pearce, beautiful granddaughters of Mrs. James R. Gray, who introduces them at a reception at Graystone next Friday.

Miss Ida Nevin Leads Delegates to Hospital.

Miss Ida Nevin, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Nevin, president of the junior class of Washington seminary, led a delegation representing half the class members to the Grady hospital with a Christmas tree. It was decorated and erected in the children's ward and presents were heaped about its base. Children from private rooms and from other parts of the hospital were wheeled into the ward by their nurses and the distribution began.

Miss Davidson Opens Antique Gift Shop.

"In the Shop of Beautiful Things," presided over by Miss Catherine Davidson, at 988 Peachtree at Tenth street, the Christmas shopper will find many novelties to please the fancy. A full line of hammered brass cigarette containers, antique brass candlesticks, hand-painted sofa pillows, gaily and attractively decorated bridge tables, handsome hook rugs, several hand-made quilts of sunburst design and antique mirrors are catalogued in the list of suitable gifts. Miss Davidson, a charming member of the sub-deb set of society, studied decorating at St. Genevieve's convent, in Asheville, N. C., and is thorughly conversant with the artistic side of the business and possesses a thorough understanding of making artistic selections for the shop. She is specializing in antiques and will devote all of her time to the collection of same after the holidays. Among the choice pieces on sale are an old-fashioned walnut whatnot, elegant Paisley shawl and a chest of drawers with a black marble top.

Miss Ruth Hopkins To Visit Atlanta.

Among the attractive young visitors who will add interest to the Christmas parties planned by the members of the college set will be Miss Ruth Hopkins, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who will arrive Wednesday, December 21, to spend the holidays with her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Driscoll, at their handsome new home on Peachtree Battle avenue.

Miss Hopkins is a popular student at Trinity college in Washington, D. C., and she will come direct to Atlanta from the national capital. She has many friends in the city who will be interested in her arrival, having often visited here, and a number of informal parties will be given in her honor.

Miss Hopkins will return to school in Washington January 5.

Miss Hart To Wed Toulman Hurt At Ceremony in February

The announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Irene Horton Hart, known to her wide circle of friends as Doll Hart, to Toulman William Hurt, is of extreme social importance. Both Miss Hart and Mr. Hurt are representatives of prominent southern families, who have played a conspicuous part in the development of a number of southern states.

Miss Hart is the daughter of Mrs. John C. Hart and the late Judge Hart. Before her marriage, Mrs. Hart was Miss Irene Horton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James William Horton, of Augusta. The bride-elect's paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. James Brock Hart, of Union Point.

The bride-elect is a sister of Mrs. Murdock Equen, prominent Atlanta matron, who before her marriage was Miss Anne Hart. Henry Hamilton Hart, George Sibley Hart, of Miami, Fla., and John Collier Hart, Jr., of Milwaukee, Wis., are brothers of the popular bride-elect.

Miss Hart is a graduate of Washington seminary completing her education at Agnes Scott college. She is a member of the O. B. X. sorority and the Girls' Cotillion club. As a member of the Junior league, Miss Hart has been active in the many charitable activities sponsored by this exclusive social organization.

Mr. Hurt is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nimrod Hurt. Mrs. Hurt was formerly the beautiful Miss Blanche Williams. The late Major J. J. Williams, of East Tennessee, was the maternal grandfather of the groom-elect and Mrs. L. R. Sams, one of Atlanta's best known educators and beloved woman citizens, is her maternal grandmother. Mr. and Mrs. Nimrod Hurt, of Alabama, are the paternal grandparents of the groom-to-be.

The groom-elect is an alumnus of the Georgia School of Technology and is a popular member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity. He is past master of the Georgia lodge F. & A. M. Mr. Hurt is prominently identified with Atlanta's social and business life. He is manager and cashier of the Atlanta branch of the Coca-Cola company. The marriage of Miss Hart and Mr. Hurt will be an interesting event of February 4.

Pictorial Award Winner Arrives in Atlanta.

The arrival in Atlanta today of Mrs. Sara Graham Mullhall, the distinguished woman meriting the $5,000 Pictorial Review award for 1925, is of interest to Atlanta society. Mrs. Mullhall will be the guest of Mrs. Chauncey Smith, at her home on Eighth street, coming here direct from New York. Mrs. Mullhall, who received the award for her outstanding work among the unfortunate victims of opium, will be the inspiration for a number of delightful social affairs while in the city.

The story of Mrs. Mullhall is the narrative of a high-born woman who walked without fear in the darkest reaches of life, bearing the torch of redemption to fellow human beings, floundering in the trough of despair. Her recent book, "The Demon Flower," a presentation of the evils wrought by the drug traffic, has awakened the entire nation to the necessity of combatting this menace.

Mrs. Mullhall has done as much, if not more, to relieve the suffering and secure the return of self-respect for the unfortunate victims of opium, cocain, morphine, heroin, than any other person in this country. Through her untiring efforts in this work, she sounded the alarm which aroused congress to the need of action. She was directly responsible for the passage of the federal law prohibiting the importation of opium into this country. Mrs. Mullhall will be in Atlanta through Christmas week.

Miss Hayes Weds W. M. Hollis.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Hays, of Mansfield, announce the marriage of their daughter, Nina Belle, to W. M. Hollis, of Fort Monroe, Va., on December 4, 1927.

The thirty-eighth annual Chanukah ball of the season to be given by the Ahavath Achim sisterhood of the A. A. Synagogue will be held Tuesday evening, December 20, at the Jewish Woman's club, Washington and Clark streets. Dancing will be featured. Admission will be 50 cents.

This is the only time in the year when the Ahavath Achim sisterhood calls on the public for cooperation and it is earnestly desired that a large crowd attend the bull. The sisterhood wishes to thank those who have demonstrated their willingness to help.

Miss Marian Gertman To Entertain at Tea.

Miss Marian Reese Gertman will entertain at tea from 4 to 6 o'clock today at her home at 82 Emory drive.

Miss Josephine Kelly Is Honor Guest.

Miss Josephine Kelly, whose marriage to Herbert Ayers will be an interesting event of December 28, will be honor guest at a number of social gayeties preceding her marriage.

Miss Mary Frances Barnhart will entertain members of the bridal party at the Hotel Biltmore dinner-dance Christmas Eve. On Monday, December 26, Mrs. F. C. Reid will honor her sister with a trousseau tea at her home on Fourth street.

Following the wedding rehearsal Tuesday evening, December 27, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gray King will entertain the out-of-town guests and members of the bridal party at a buffet supper at their home on St. Charles avenue. Miss Marie Kelley was hostess Saturday at an informal tea at her home at Clarkston in compliment to Miss Kins.

CLUBWOMEN URGE USE OF GEORGIA PRODUCTS FOR HOLIDAYS

Atlanta Federation Indorses Promotion of Local Foodstuffs

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Federation, calls to the attention of clubwomen the fact that the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs has, since its inception, indorsed the promotion of Georgia products and states that, recorded through the history of Georgia Clubwomen's activities, there are accounts of the splendid efforts looking toward the promotion of Georgia products, advanced by the late Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, one of the outstanding figures in women's activities in the past.

At the request of the Georgia products committee of the Atlanta Federation, Atlantans are requested to buy their New Year dinner entirely of Georgia products.

Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman have indorsed this movement and only Georgia products will be served at the family dinner table at the governor's mansion on January 1. Tempting Georgia products menus will be published in the daily newspapers by members of the American home department of the federation. Retail grocers in Atlanta will be requested to assist the club women in inaugurating this movement, and all Georgians are urged to cooperate and make this constructive movement a splendid success.

Mrs. Frederick C. Rice, chairman; Mrs. W. Woods White and Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, cochairmen of the Georgia products committee of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, believe that the cooperation of all Georgia women in such a movement will tremendously benefit the farmers of the state and will stimulate and revive the personal interest of Georgia women in the use of Georgia-grown food products the year around.

The economic benefits of such a united movement by the women of Georgia undoubtedly will bring colossal financial results. Mrs. W. D. Williamson, chairman of the American home department of the federation, and Mrs. Ira Farmer, chairman of the home extension committee, will cooperate with the Georgia products committee in making the New Year's "Georgia Products Dinners" successful.

Every loyal and patriotic Georgia woman is hereby invited and urged to participate as individuals in a great united movement to have served simultaneously on thousands of family dinner tables Georgia-grown food products on Sunday, January 1, 1928, as a fitting demonstration of the support of the agricultural activities of the state.

Harvard Instrumental Clubs To Appear Here December 26

Coincident with the arrival in Atlanta of the Harvard Instrumental clubs, which will appear in concert at 8 o'clock Monday evening, December 26, at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, a number of social affairs will be given in honor of the members. The performance is under the auspices of the Harvard Club of Georgia.

Following the concert members of the clubs and officers of the Atlanta Harvard alumni will be guests of H. M. Atkinson at a dinner at the Piedmont Driving club. Officers of the Atlanta Harvard alumni are: S. N. Evins, president; L. J. Elsas, vice president, and W. A. Sutherland, secretary and treasurer.

Upon their arrival in Atlanta the morning of December 26, the Harvard men will be taken on a short trip through the down town section to Stone Mountain as the guests of the local alumni. They will be entertained informally during the day by alumni and friends.

The organization of clubs, which includes 50 of Harvard's most representative men, is composed of banjo, mandolin and vocal clubs, jazz band and specialty groups. The Gold Coast Jazz orchestra, led by Charley Henderson, pianist, will give a number of the newest hits in the inimitable style of this group which has caused many professionals to look to their laurels. Albert Lind, violinist, and Perry Kingsley, ventriloquist, have won an enviable reputation for exceptional execution in individual numbers.

The clubs are noted for the delightful informality of their programs. The concerts, which take on the guise of a semi-social affair, are carried off with a typical collegiate dash. The aggregation is more than usually versatile, and the program will run the gamut from collegiate jazz to some of the more intricate classics, which are successfully undertaken by the mandolin club. "Brahm's Hungarian Dance" and Boyne's "Destiny Waltz" are played with exceptional ability.

The banjo club of 35 pieces plays spirited marches, medleys of popular songs and college selections of a definitely lighter nature. The vocal club, led by Arthur A. Holbrook, will render a number of those old favorites which have never failed to win the hearts of Harvard men.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale at Phillips & Crew Piano company Monday morning, December 19.

Agnes Scott Notes Are of Interest.

The week of December 4-11 was observed at Agnes Scott college as "Religious Emphasis week." Dr. Frank Morgan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Augusta, accepted the invitation extended by the college to conduct the services. Dr. Morgan, who is English by birth and received his education at Oxford, came to this country after the world war to resume his religious work. Last year he secured his doctor's degree at the University of Georgia. The general theme of the lectures was "Christ's Call to Men." He discussed in detail Christ's call to realization, salvation, separation, rest and fellowship.

As a part of the Christmas celebration on the campus the Y. W. C. A. has for the past three weeks been holding "red candle services" in the chapel on Friday nights. These services are short devotionals with emphasis on the Christmas motif. On Sunday night at 8 o'clock the regular "White Christmas Service" will be held in the chapel. Miss Janet MacDonald, of Keyser, W. Va., will give a reading; Mrs. S. G. Stukes will sing and there will be other special music. The public is cordially invited.

The annual community Christmas tree given by the Agnes Scott girls to the children of the Decatur orphanage and the Family Welfare of Atlanta took place Saturday, December 11, at 2:30 o'clock at the college. Children between the ages of four and 12 who will have no other Christmas than that given them by the Agnes Scott girls were invited. This activity was sponsored by the social welfare committee of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Augusta Robers, chairman of this committee, was in charge of the entertainment.

B. O. Z., the short story club of Agnes Scott college, met on Monday, December 5, at the home of Mrs. C. W. Dieckmann, 635 Erie avenue, Decatur. Two stories were read at this meeting, "Twenty-Four Hours," by Evelyn Becker, of Atlanta, and "Going to Paris," by Edith McGranahan, of Durham, N. C. It was decided that several books on short-story writing would be studied during the coming months.

The faculty of the French department entertained the French club of the Alumnae house December 5. Mrs. George Hayes, who is a French woman and the wife of Dr. Hayes, the head of the English department, spoke on Christmas customs in France, after which French Christmas carols were sung.

The "Messiah," Handel's beautiful Christmas cantata was presented by the Choral society in the chapel, Sunday, December 11, at 3 o'clock, under the direction of Mr. Lewis Johnson. The artists were Misses Mary Buttrick, Eunice Curry Prescott and Vaughn Ozmer and Walter Herbert. The singing of the "Messiah" at Christmastide is one of the most loved traditions at the college.

The "Gitana," presented by the Agnes Scott Glee club Saturday night, December 10, in the gymnasium auditorium, was enthusiastically received by a large audience. The operetta, composed by Joseph Roekel, and directed by Mrs. Lewis Johnson, was characterized by colorful costuming effects and excellent vocal work. The leading roles were sung by Virginia Miller, Huntington, W. V.; Vivian Bryant, Decatur; Ruth Thomas, Bedford, Va., and Mary Ruth Rountree, Summit. They were accompanied by violinists and harpists and assisted by the special chorus of the Glee club.

Miss Betty Hood Is Entertained.

Miss Betty Hood, who has spent the past two years at school and traveling abroad, has been the guest of Miss Nancy Kiser at her home on Peachtree road for several days.

Miss Kiser entertained twelve guests at Erlanger's following a dinner party Saturday evening. Other parties were given this charming visitor.

GEORGIA DIVISION, DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Montezuma, president; Mrs. S. G. Lang, Sandersville, first vice president; Mrs. Frank Exley, Savannah, second vice president; Mrs. W. T. Bankston, Reynolds, third vice president; Mrs. Powell Cotter, Barnesville, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles E. Reid, Montezuma, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Julian Lane, Statesboro, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Craig, Augusta, registrar; Miss Mildred Rutherford, Athens, historian; Miss Lillie Martin, assistant historian; Miss Rebecca Black DuPont, Savannah, recorder of crosses; Mrs. I. Bashinsky, Dublin, auditor; Mrs. Lee Trammell, Madison custodian of world war records; Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville, state editor; Mrs. Loula Kendall Rogers, Tennille, poet laureate.
Honorary Presidents—Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta; Miss Anna Carolina Benning, Columbus; Mrs. Ida Evans Eve, Augusta.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

By Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor, Ga. Div. U. D. C.

The official report of Mrs. W. T. Bankston, of Roberta, appears on the page today and shows most efficient service. Mrs. Bankston received the $10 prize offered by the general organization U. D. C., for the best C. of C. papers. This was a distinct compliment to Georgia. When one learns that her work was made beautiful for the mere sake of love of meritorious labor and not for reward the honor is still greater. Mrs. Bankston was not cognizant of the offer of the prize until she received notice that she was the winner.

A list of books given by the Georgia division at the Covington convention is published today. Mrs. Powell Cotter, of Barnesville, sends a letter asking all who failed to get proper recognition as to their donation of books on this list to communicate with her at once and give her the necessary information. This is most important that her records may be complete. Mrs. Cotter is the brilliant recording secretary of the Georgia division, U. D. C.

The Mary Anne Williams chapter at Sandersville, has perfected a plan whereby it may compete for the star chapter requirements in a methodical and systematic manner. Each month a committee is appointed to arrange the program and to see that certain of the star chapter requirements are recognized, and compliance made. This month the chapter specialized on the veterans at the Soldiers' home and the Washington county veterans. Also the Mrs. Norman V. Randolph relief fund for needy Confederate women was considered. A pleasing part of the Christmas program was the writing of Christmas cards to the veterans. A little remembrance was given for the most inspirational and cheering card. Mrs. George Evans, Sandersville, was chairman of the Christmas program and made much for the pleasure of the newly perfected plans.

Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby Installs Officers.

Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, worthy grand marshal of the General Grand chapter, installed the O. E. S. officers in Porterdale chapter, in Porterdale at the meeting last week.

Mrs. Maude Arnold, deputy of the Stone Mountain district, served as grand marshal; Mrs. Jessie Allison, grand chaplain; Mrs. Annabel Capes, deputy of the Atlanta district, was the soloist of the evening. She was accompanied by Mrs. Kate Massey, acting grand organist.

Mrs. Susie Gatlis, the retiring matron, received a beautiful past matron's jewel.

Mrs. Ashby gave a talk on Truth and the Good of the Order. She received personal gifts.

Several members of Golden Star chapter in Covington and other chapters were present. A banquet was served and a social hour enjoyed.

Children of Confederacy Director Wins General U. D. C. Prize

Mrs. W. T. Bankston, of Roberta, who won the prize offered by the general division, U. D. C., for best Children of Confederacy papers. Mrs. Bankston is the retiring third vice president of the Georgia division and director of the Children of Confederacy. Mrs. Bankston's report at the recent state U. D. C. convention held in Covington was among the highlights of the conference and is published in full below. Photograph of Mrs. Bankston by Allen's studio, Macon, Ga.

The following is the official yearly report of Mrs. W. T. Bankston, of Roberta, Ga., retiring third vice president of the Georgia division, U. D. C., and director of the Children of the Confederacy:

"In closing my two-year term as your director of the Children of the Confederacy I wish to express to each of you my appreciation of the honor you have bestowed upon me. In discharging my duties I have written 264 letters, 76 postcards, programs, minutes and official letters to all the chapters and U. D. C. official family. In registering new members for Georgia this year I feel that I have not accomplished half what could have been done, and I hope the time is close at hand when every U. D. C. chapter shall have a children's chapter. I registered 187 new members. We are really entitled to 10 more, as Sylvania sent 10 sets of papers to Miss Daffen, our third vice president general, through mistake. This makes Georgia's total 1,559. Through the efforts of our enthusiastic state organizer, Miss Adeline Baum, three new chapters have been organized and one reorganized—Cartersville, 26 charter members; Rome, 8; Lithonia, 16, and Eatonton reorganized, with 7 members. Tallapoosa has assured me they will be fully organized by Christmas. All information has been sent Millen and Kingston, and hope to have them organized soon. Talbotton planning to reorganize.

"The following are chapters which have sent in new members: Dublin, 8; Valdosta, 9; Sylvania, 8; Elberton, 60; Savannah, 1; Roberta, 7; Cartersville, 41; Camilla, 4; Decatur, 2; Marietta, 11; Rome, 10; Athens, 3; Lithonia, 16, and Eatonton, 7. I am sure you will be interested to know that the Varina Davis chapter at Marietta, Ga., has the honor of enrolling Louise and Elizabeth Manget, of Huchow, China. May, through these, the cause which we represent not only be spread through China but other foreign countries also. Have demitted one member from the Jackson chapter to the Florida division.

"One hundred and seventy-five historical meetings have been held and 25 birthdays have been observed. We have two scholarships valued at $175, known as the Mildred Rutherford scholarship and N. B. Baum scholarship. When the call came to help the flood sufferers, your director sent a duplicate letter of Mrs. McKenzie's to each chapter, $11.75 being donated to this cause by different chapters. The Georgia division has raised $4.50 toward the Father Ryan memorial fund; $67.40 has been collected for dues. Twenty-five veterans' graves have been marked by the Children's chapters—Milledgeville, 12, and Roberta, 13.

"I cannot conclude my report without telling you of the most successful conference held in the town of Elberton. The success of this conference is due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Harry Bell and her coworkers. Not a single effort was spared to make each delegate thoroughly enjoy the conference. We have not time for a detailed report—this will appear in the minutes—but mention should be made of the visit to the silk mill. This was educational as well as enjoyable.

"Every chapter in the state should organize a C. of C. If we want the spirit of the U. D. C. on through the ages, the children we must train as we would have them go—'As a twig is bent so the tree will grow.' It is through their own organization that they will imitate their elders and hand down in turn the spirit, the vision and the high ideals which we have as a heritage from the past. It is true theirs will be a new south, but let it be a south which, although progressive, is not forgetful of the past.

"In behalf of the Georgia division, Children of the Confederacy, I wish to thank the Georgia division, U. D. C., for its generous donation of $100, which made possible the publication of our minutes. We hope you will see fit to contribute again, for without your aid it will be impossible for the C. of C. to publish its minutes. In concluding my service with you as director of the Children of the Confederacy I want to again thank you for the many words of encouragement which have come to me from officers and chapter leaders, and may my successor be shown the same courtesies which have been accorded me."

List of Books Published For Rabun Gap Nacoochee School

Mrs. Powell Cotter, recording secretary of the Georgia division, U. D. C., issues the following request:

Those who were in Covington remember how enthusiastically the books and contributions for the Emily Hendree Park Memorial library at Rabun Gap Nacoochee school were donated. I tried very hard to write as fast as the books were called, but it was almost impossible for me to record name of book, author, donor and after the one whose memory was to be honored. So I feel sure there are mistakes in the list. Will you who made donations write me at once if there is a mistake, or if you prefer a different wording for your gift? Following is my list:

"History of Baldwin County," donated by Mrs. S. H. Cook, of Milledgeville, Ga.; "Lanier, the Musician," by Mrs. Walter Lamar, donated by the Sidney Lanier chapter, Macon, Ga.; "War Memories," donated by Mrs. Horace Holden, of Athens, Ga. Social Notes From Brookhaven.

Mrs. Norman C. Butts has returned from a motor trip to Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Chatham announce the birth of a little daughter on November 27, who has been named Nellie Virginia.

The Methodist Sunday school will have a Christmas tree at the church Friday evening at 7:30. An interesting program is being planned.

The Brookhaven Junior High school will give a Christmas tree to its pupils Wednesday afternoon. Names have been drawn for the gifts and there is an air of mystery throughout the whole school these days.

Mrs. W. M. Hanna, one of Brookhaven's most popular matrons, has launched out into the business world, having opened this week Ye Delicatessen Shoppe next door to Burnham's pharmacy. In connection with her shoppe, she has fixed up an attractive rest room which she trusts the ladies will use when waiting for the street car. Her friends wish her much success in her new undertaking.

The Matrons' club was entertained by Mrs. Henry Cox, Jr., at her home on Fernwood drive last Friday afternoon. Prizes were won by Mrs. C. A. Dibble, Sr., and Mrs. Streckfuss. The honor guest of the afternoon was Miss Estelle Lindsey. The club members present were Mrs. Folds, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Bain, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Cadora, Mrs. Surratt, Mrs. Sills, Mrs. Streckfuss, Mrs. O. A. Dibble, Sr., Miss Lila Cox, Mrs. Henry Cox, Sr., and Mrs. Henry Cox, Jr.

The Brookhaven P.-T. A. held a daddies' meeting in the school auditorium Tuesday night. The fourth grade, Miss Burbridge, teacher, gave a splendid program consisting of Christmas carols and recitations which was highly entertaining. The association feels particularly grateful for the grading which has been done to the school grounds. Arbor day was observed. The third grade had the largest number of parents present and was awarded the prize. A large crowd was present.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Garrett spent last week-end with their daughter, Mrs. Davis, at Winder.

Mrs. Howse and son, John Cheek, left Thursday to attend the funeral of Mrs. W. H. Puckett, of Cumming, the stepmother of Mrs. Howse.

Worthy Patrons To Give Dance.

Wednesday evening, December 21, a benefit dance ill be given at Garber hall, corner of Peachtree and North avenue, sponsored by the Worthy Patrons' club. The public is invited.

Masons and members of the Order of Eastern Star are especially invited, as the funds derived from this dance will be used for the Christmas shower for the children of the Masonic Orphans' home at Macon, Ga.

Miss Julia Eckford Gives Heart-Dice Party.

Miss Julia Eckford entertained her Washington seminary pupils at her studio in the Blackstone apartments Saturday afternoon. Heart dice was played, the prize for the highest score being French stationery. The favors were foreign, having been brought by Miss Eckford from Paris last summer.

Those present were Misses Epsie Dallis, Octavia Riley, Marion Calhoun, Betty Huff, Lilie Pace, Virginia Cleveland, Elizabeth Everitt, Mary Lee Donovan, Willie Stubbs, Laura Maddox, Joan Root, May Bernie Alston and Emily Mathews.

Capitol View Churchmen To Give Banquet.

Men of the Capitol View Presbyterian church will entertain with a banquet at Vaughan's tea room on Monday evening, December 19, at 7:30 o'clock. A number of good speakers will be present.

Ruth finds valuable suggestions for the last week of Christmas Shopping

"Just the Kind of weather For Pneumonia!"

WINTER brings with is so many days that are spoken of as "just the kind of weather for pneumonia." Damp, cold days with a murkiness in the atmosphere which is very penetrating.

It is hard to keep children indoors, especially during the holiday season. They are scouting about to see what Santa Claus brought Bobbie or Mary or Fred. Shooting fireworks takes them out in the night air and often in their excitement they forget their warm wrap. Colds are very prevalent during this season.

BE PREPARED! On your shopping list write CHENEY'S EXPECTORANT and buy a big bottle, which will cost 60 cents at your druggist, and at the first sign of cold give the child a dose according to directions on the bottle.

CHENEY'S EXPECTORANT gives instant relief and will save your child from spending probably many days indoors due to illness during the holiday season.

His Gift.

JUST visit Parks-Chambers and any one of the wonderful gifts you find there will be ideal for "him."

The smoking jacket pictured above will be a gift that any man would appreciate. They have sport gifts, golf bags from $3.00 up to $40.00; clubs, $2.50 up to $15.00; golf knickers; in fact, any article of sports wear that would delight the heart of a boy or man.

Leather novelties, such as wardrobe trunks, from $25.00 to $40.00; cowhide Gladstone bags, from $21.50 to $45.00; men's fitted cases, $5.00 to $25.00; military brushes in cases, $2.50 to $12.00; leather bill folders and cigarette cases.

Then should you wish to give something in the jewelry line to your father, your brother, or your sweetheart, there are jewelry gifts such as belt sets, cuff links, knife and chain, dress suits and tuxedo sets. Everything that would appeal to the heart of a man can be bought at this store, for there is nothing that a man appreciates more than something useful from a man's store such as Parks-Chambers.

For the Women of Unerring Taste.

L. CHAJAGE offers for Christmas week a special section of the most luxurious furs, silver fox, pointed fox, ashes of roses and natural fox. But the scarf that caught my eye and appealed to me most was of red fox. There is no woman that could fail to be overjoyed at the thought of having one of these handsome neckpieces as a gift on Christmas Day, because a neckpiece adds chic to any costume and to be ultra-smart one must have this necessary addition to her wardrobe. L. Chajage offers this presentation of luxurious furs during the coming week at special Christmas prices, and every one who contemplates purchasing a really fine fur should visit L. Chajage, 220 Peachtree street.

Printed Quilted Things For Xmas Gifts.

WHAT more rare and beautiful for her Christmas gift than a soft, shimmering negligee or a warm, cozy bathrobe—two things that express unspoken tributes to her loveliness? You couldn't select a gift that would mean more to her—particularly if she's young and pretty and has all a woman's love for dainty finery.

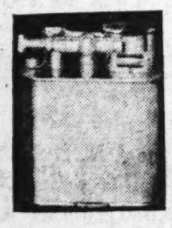

H. G. Lewis & Company can supply every want in this line. Out of its gorgeous and colorful stock of magnificent robes de chambre, every taste can be complied with and every price-class taken care of.

A bathrobe such as those I saw at H. G. Lewis' of quilted printed rayon lined with the softest of material and padded with the warmest of fleecy down would be a delight and comfort on these chilly mornings. Then, too, while traveling they are almost a necessity. The negligees of satin, chiffon, and other silks trimmed in ostrich are truly things of beauty, they have an assortment of pink, orchid, rose and a rainbow of colors.

Then I saw some of the daintiest pillows, of taffeta, rayon, satin, brocaded silver and metallic cloth trimmed in lace and French handmade flowers, pillows of every size and shape, that would add a note of luxury to any well-appointed boudoir. These pillows are being offered this last week of Christmas shopping for unusually low prices, from $2.95 to $6.95.

Before buying all of your gifts see the lovely things at H. G. Lewis & Company, 102 Whitehall street, S. W.

Get out the old cigar box,
Give me a Cuba stout;
For things are going crosswise
And Maggie and I are out.

YEARS ago Rudyard Kipling sang of the love of a man for Lady Nicotine. Ever since Sir Walter Raleigh introduced the soothing weed to the white man it has brought solace and comfort to man in his weary hours.

The pipe, the cigar, the cigarette and all the accessories of the smoking den are close to his heart. As gifts, smoking things make a deeper appeal to a man than any other article. Somehow they are intimate and express a tender solicitude for his comfort and relaxation.

For that reason the Royal Cigar Store at the corner of Forsyth and Walton streets, with its tremendous stock of wonderful smoking things, offers the solution to every feminine problem as to what to buy for "his Christmas."

The Royal Cigar Company offers every type of pipe from the cheapest that's appropriate to the best that's made. It has metal cigarette cases ranging from 50 cents to sterling silver for $18, and leather and other kinds of cases.

There are lighters in known and approved makes from $2 to $25; cigarette jars from 50 cents to $5; desk lighters, humidors, flasks, pouches and a wide assortment of gifts that would delight the heart of any man. Aside from the regular line of cigars, cigarettes and tobacco, they carry Benson, Hedges, Shepherd's, State Express, which are imported from England, and a complete line of imported cigars, including the Corona cigars, which sell for $13 a box.

A Gift to Yourself.

GREETING the holiday season with an exquisite permanent wave, Marcel wave, or finger wave, is an appropriate gift to yourself.

And the operators at the Rose Beauty Parlor, 76½ North Forsyth street, will please you, I am sure.

Mrs. Cooper and Mrs. Bostwick are experts in every line of beauty culture. They have operated the Rose Beauty Parlor for over a year and have gained the confidence of their patrons—because of their excellent work as beauty culturists.

They give the Eugene Permanent Wave and are experts in this new art for making milady more beautiful—for the once straight hair will be transformed into a head of soft, beautiful curls.

Mrs. Bostwick and Mrs. Cooper have a number of assistants. Marcel waves, finger waves, facial massages and manicures are given with equal skill. I heartily recommend the Rose Beauty Parlor, 76½ N. Forsyth street.

The Christmas Gift That Gives Service.

CHRISTMAS dinner more luscious than ever . . . and so much easier to prepare. Savory surprises that just make an impromptu party. A bountiful reserve of foods for unexpected guests. These—the very essence of the holiday spirit—made pleasantly possible by a General Electric Refrigerator.

Why not have the supreme satisfaction of one of these wonderful conveniences to help solve the always impending problem of keeping enough food in the best condition so it won't mean continued shopping through Christmas week. It protects food from the killing chill of winter and the bacteria-breeding heat of summer.

The Alexander-Seewald Co., 577 Peachtree street, is offering a special Christmas sale of General Electric Refrigerators and the best of terms for your convenience. $10.00 cash and balance in 12, 18 or 24 months.

I am sure that the up-to-date housewife couldn't think of anything they had rather have for Xmas than one of these beautiful General Electric Refrigerators for the home in which they pride.

These refrigerators are on display at the Alexander-Seewald Co., Erlanger Theatre building. You are welcome at any time.

Toys.

JUST one week until Xmas then all the little children will be happily playing with the toys Santa Claus brought them. But if they aren't durable it will mean many a heartbreak.

Hightower Hardware, at 100 Whitehall, has been furnishing toys to Atlanta's children for 32 years and they specialize in their most attractive and durable line of wheel toys. They have bicycles, tricycles, wagons, scooters and kiddie kars; also small desks for children and doll furniture at all prices.

This isn't just inexpensive Xmas stock but is the usual line of toys handled the year around at Hightower's.

The Gift Embodying the Spirit of Christmas, the Poinsettia.

AT DAHL'S, one of the south's most widely-known florists, you will find an unlimited supply of poinsettias, cycleman, roses, chrysanthemums and other lovely flowers. I feel as many others do that there is no Christmas without flowers, and the poinsettia, with its red petals, holding its head high as if to catch the spirit of the day, embodies the thought of all that Christmas means to us.

I would suggest that you order a basket from Dahl's, 72 Broad St., N. W., for the one you hold nearest and dearest to your heart on Christmas day. Dahl's has decorative baskets and candles surrounded by Christmas decorations that would add a glow of warmth and cheer to your home on this day of days. Then, too, there are rare pieces of statuary, vases and candlesticks that were imported by Dahl's from Italy that would delight the heart of a connoisseur or lover of exquisite.

Maison Maurice—

THE store where the ultra smart women of Atlanta have their hats fashioned on the head—hats that the smart world is wearing.

Then for Christmas Maison Maurice is showing accessories for the woman of discerning taste—hand bags, boutonnieres of metallic flowers, exquisite violets, roses and feather flowers. These flowers are unusual and smart and range in price from 50c to $3.50. Large bouquets of Palmer violets with long stems that seem to almost live. They enhance the loveliness of a fur coat or collar.

There are bags of every size and designs—antelope, suede, leather, velvet, and some are trimmed in reptile.

Handsome dresser sets of tortoise shell and mother of pearl—overnight bags.

Novelty bridge sets, pen and pencil sets, little ash trays decorated with a dog whose head bobs from side to side; also atomizers, exquisite perfume bottles. But to me the most desirable gifts of all are the lovely toilet sets. Some have comb, brush and mirror—others have the complete dresser set, including the manicuring set.

I would suggest that you go to Maison Maurice before selecting your gifts and look at the lovely things they have on display. Their gifts are reasonable, and exquisite, in keeping with the usual smartness of the Shop of Maison Maurice.

Gifts for Everybody at Cox's Prescription Shop.

A BOY friend asked me the other day where he could get something in the way of a Christmas gift for his girl that was a bit different but beautiful and inexpensive. He was a young chap, sensible . . . and with the same thought in his mind that hundreds of other fellows are thinking. At COX'S PRESCRIPTION SHOP, I told him, next to the Howard Theatre, you will find worlds of things that are the loveliest gifts you could ever wish to buy and costing just a few dollars. And I mentioned to him in particular the very novel, hand-made French dolls, a direct importation, which may be purchased for $2.50 to $7.50. Wearing fluffy tulle skirts and in dancing poses, these dolls are adorable for the boudoir.

Among the many other things shown are cigarette lighters with a unique feature of lighting when opened, priced at $5.50. Others $4.00 to $7.50. Cloisonne vanities, dorines and cigarette holders are priced $5.00 to $15.00. Kent brushes, the finest in the world, are priced as low as $3.50. Take your Christmas list to Cox's Prescription Shop and see how many appropriate gifts you will find there and how many beautiful things you may purchase that are inexpensive. This will save you much time in shopping about and will be a pleasure to you for there you will find a variety of gifts which is almost unlimited.

China—the Desirable Christmas Gift.

THERE'S almost as much pleasure in selecting Christmas gifts as there is in giving them—when the selecting takes place in Dobbs & Wey. Practically everything worth while in beautiful china and glass is displayed there, continually offering suggestions that go a long way toward solving the Christmas problem.

Dobbs & Wey have five dinner sets of English porcelain. Some are beautifully decorated in white and gold, some in artistically bordered decorations and others decorated in most attractive floral designs.

The prices on these sets have been cut immensely, which is quite unusual to find standard merchandise reduced just before Christmas.

You will notice that Dobbs & Wey carry a wide assortment of attractive Christmas suggestions including many pieces in Tiffany bronze.

A most practical and acceptable Christmas gift is a navy blue umbrella. The curved handle is of snakeskin. The ferrule and tips of the ribs are of gray composition.

A youthful bar-pin is an acceptable gift for a girl. A very attractive one is of blue stone and marcasite.

Unusual Christmas Gifts

ARE to be seen in the Gift Shop on the fourth floor of M. Rich & Bros. Co.

Gifts from Austria . . . jewel-like, significant . . . each one selected and offered in a collection of unusual prestige.

Austrian cigarette boxes. One that I saw was of ebony glass ornamented by a single cameo surrounded by cut steel that resembled brilliants. The price was $14.95. A cloissonne cigarette box with match box, and ash tray to match, imported from Japan. The price is $6.50. From Italy two peacock table ornaments of Italian ware. A cigarette box of tortoise shell and on the top a perriot singing to the music of his mandolin for the lady of his dreams. Trays of gorgeous Italian tapestry covered with glass, $12.95 and $7.95.

Crystal trees, fashioned into lamps by a tiny globe hidden in the glass foliage, $12.50.

And from England there are statues such as two dogs of Stratfordshire ware, and many other beautiful ornaments of this ware. Two ornaments that were especially unique were duck book ends of cracker ware, $15 for the pair.

Lamps of pewter. These are very popular now. There were bowls, sets of ash trays, all of pewter.

One lamp that especially attracted my attention was of wrought iron and ornamented with the head of a dolphin. The shade was of parchment with a little old "Godey" print for decoration.

These gifts I have mentioned and many other interesting gifts are to be seen at the Gift Shop on the fourth floor of M. Rich & Bros. Co. So before selecting your Christmas gifts see these things I have told you of.

Do You Really Want a Permanent for Christmas?

WHY not see Mr. Rich, the south's modern hairdresser, for he is a specialist in Eugene permanent waving.

Just think, Mr. Rich can give you a permanent that will enhance your loveliness, a soft, exquisitely swirled coiffure—molded to the lines of the head, the kind of coiffure that gives to you that lovely gift, "youth," such are the permanent waves given by Mr. Rich at the Artistic Bob Shop, located on the balcony of Jacob's Main Store at Five Points.

Mr. Rich has as his assistants 13 trained operators, each an expert in some certain line of beauty culture.

The permanent is the foundation of the coiffure, but much depends upon the skill of a fingerwave artist, such as Mr. Rich, who sets and molds the waves into soft, undulating waves that go to enhance the beauty of a chic bob.

A Christmas Tour.

IF you have never enjoyed the pleasure of a cruise plan to make one this winter or spring. Delightful ones to the West Indies, the Carribbean and Mediterranean. You'll enjoy sailing under summer skies, over waters blue, and the sight-seeing in strange lands. For this is a pleasure cruise exceeding every expectation. Luxurious comfort, perfect service and strange ond thrilling sights. Fascinating, beautiful, gay and mysterious. What more could one desire?

John M. Born, 1108 Candler building, can give full information and help you arrange your trip.

A New Bedroom Suite for Christmas.

IF YOU have a shabby room in your house which must be refurnished sometime, what better remembrance could you have of this Christmas than to do it now, making this room so fine and new that it will give you and your house real joy on Christmas day.

At the Carroll Furniture Store, 137 Whitehall street, you will find Christmas gifts of furniture made by masters at the art of fashioning exquisite things. Beautiful bedroom suites, living room suites, and dining room suites, occasional chairs, in fact, anything in the way of house furnishings that will beautify and glorify your home. For furniture is a gift that "keeps on giving" and each year when you receive your gifts most of them will perish before the next year rolls around, but a Furniture Co. will last you a lifetime.

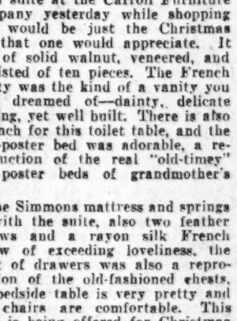

I saw the most wonderful bedroom suite at the Carroll Furniture Company yesterday while shopping that would be just the Christmas gift that one would appreciate. It was of solid walnut, veneered, and consisted of ten pieces. The French vanity was the kind of a vanity you have dreamed of—dainty, delicate looking, yet well built. There is also a bench for this toilet table, and the four-poster bed was adorable, a reproduction of the real "old-timey" four-poster beds of grandmother's day.

The Simmons mattress and springs go with the suite, also two feather pillows and a rayon silk French pillow of exceeding loveliness, the chest of drawers was also a reproduction of the old-fashioned chests, the bedside table is very pretty and the chairs are comfortable. This suite is being offered for Christmas for the exceptionally low price of $129.75. To give this suite to one of your family or to yourself for Christmas would be an achievement worthwhile. Some present of this kind is so much more satisfactory as a result of combined family efforts than are the less seriously considered Christmas odds and ends upon which so many families find they have frittered away their individual resources, and nearly as much time and money to boot. So why not give the family a chance to join you in loosening the purse strings, and starting your house with a new room.

The Carroll Furniture Store has dozens of exquisite French sofa pillows, of every color and size, wonderful lamps, of every color and design, standing lamps, boudoir lamps, bed lamps, and table lamps. All of them were selected with the taste and discrimination that is characteristic of the furniture carried by Carroll's.

Think over what I have said and pay a visit to the Carroll Furniture Store tomorrow and see the wonderful things on display there.

Hosiery—As a Gift.

IF you would choose a gift to please a woman's fancy, visit the Mystyle Hosiery Shop, 57 Whitehall street, 116 Alabama street, and select for her a box of Rollins Runstop hosiery. These may be purchased in single pairs or in a box of three pairs in any of the fashionable colors you may wish. The splendid hosiery sold at this store comes from the largest manufacturers in the world and will give you far better service than one expects of chiffon hosiery.

Every woman adores beautiful silken hosiery and will thrill with the joy your gift will bring if you have made this choice for her. Rollins Runstop Hosiery may be purchased in two qualities, $1.50 for a single pair or $4.00 for a box of three pairs and $2.00 a pair or $5.50 for a box of three pairs. Shown in all the newest shades for the 1928 season. You may check off many names on your list with Rollins Runstop Hosiery.

A bouffant skirt and a deep V-neckline distinguish a sophisticated frock of satin. A narrow belt with a jeweled buckle is a chic detail.

Photomatom
Pictures of Your Loved Ones.

HAS your little boy or girl asked you the question, "What must we give daddy for Christmas?" And you wonder just what will be the thing to give that will bring a happy smile to his face.

The photomatom will solve this problem.

Just stop at 142 Peachtree while you are shopping and in the remarkably short time of eight minutes you will have beautiful pictures of your child all ready to go into the little leather folder and baby's Christmas present to her father is complete for the price of 50 cents for eight pictures. Enlargement in different sizes for $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00. These pictures are very satisfactory and I am sure that there is nothing that would make a more acceptable gift.

Unique Gifts for the Lovers of Beautiful Things.

THE Vera-Grace Studio, 524 Peachtree street, is the unusual gift shop. Quaint lamps from distant countries, beautiful glassware, clear and sparkling; vases, pieces of pottery, pictures, reproductions from paintings by the old masters, can be found at the Vera-Grace Studio. Then there are tiny delicate things for the new baby, adorable and dainty. All of these gifts, most of them made by the hands of artists who love their work and to whom the fashioning of these unique gifts is the "labor of love," have contributed to the shop of Vera-Grace so that Atlantan's can purchase the unusual treasures of many countries and not have to go abroad to find them.

Flowers From Weinstock's.

THERE is no gift that expresses more fully the sentiment of Christmas than delicate, fragrant flowers. They seem to breath a message that is too subtle for words. Lovers from time immemorial have sent flowers as a token of love and affection.

During the Christmas festivities there could be nothing more appropriate than flowers as a gift to one's "lady." And don't forget Mother's Christmas basket of poinsettias or roses or maybe chrysanthemums. The house can be made more beautiful with flowers from Weinstock's on Christmas Day.

* * * *

Permanent Wave for a Christmas Present?

WHY not give her a beautiful, soft, fluffy wave such as Mr. Allen at 57½ Whitehall street can give. Mr. Allen does not give "just a good wave"—he is an expert, therefore he gives a wave that is perfect, and transforms straight hair into soft, undulated waves.

Mr. Allen uses the Eugene and Fredericks methods of permanent waving.

Expert beauty work of all kinds is assured at Mr. Allen's Beauty Salon. Mr. Allen thanks his hundreds of friends for their patronage during the year and wishes them a merry Christmas.

Furniture of Exclusive Design Would Be the Christmas Gift Ideal.

VISITING Duffee-Freeman Furniture Store I saw handsome radios of every description and design. They are of such well-known makes as Atwater-Kent, Stromberg-Carlson and the R. C. A., made by the Radio Corporation of America. These radios range in price to suit almost any purse. This would be an ideal Christmas gift that would be a joy to the whole family.

And whave you ever thought of giving furniture to members of your family, such as a beautiful bedroom, dining room or living room suite. Either of these would enhance the loveliness of one's house and bring joy to the one receiving such a gift.

There are lamps of every description, small bedside lamps, table lamps for the living room, standing lamps. In fact, one of the most beautiful collections of lamps can be seen at Duffee-Freeman Furniture Company. One can never have too many in one's home. They brighten and add warmth and color that nothing else will give.

There are magazine racks from $4.75 up, ash trays, smoking sets, humidors, fire screens of gorgeous, harmonizing colors. Gifts that could not help but delight the heart of one who is so lucky as to receive any one of the things I have mentioned.

AT SALONS where fashions are created the chic ensemble is emphasized by furs.

Ideas that are new, fashions that are lovely, style that is undisputed—these are the things a woman seeks. And these are the things she finds in Chamberlin's beautiful furs.

Indeed it is quite amazing to see their wonderful display of coats and chokers priced lower than ever before. I want to mention especially the squirrel coats dyed cocoa. They were marked down to $398.00, and now I find them still further reduced to the almost unbelievable price of $329.50. This is truly a remarkable value and I feel is an opportunity of which every smart young miss or matron should take advantage.

I have never seen such a large assortment of pointed fox as on display at Chamberlin's, and they are beautiful, running in all sizes and prices. One does not often see pieces as up-to-date and smart as these offered at such reasonable prices for they are indeed a pleasure for the eye to behold.

Nothing could win the heart of fair lady quicker than presenting her with one of these luxurious chokers as a Christmas gift, and nothing could be more useful and enriching.

There is no accessory more essential to the wardrobe of the ultra-smart woman of today than a pointed fox neckpiece. It seems to give the needed touch to any modish costume.

So before you select all of your gifts be sure to visit Chamberlin's Fur Department, where you will undoubtedly be satisfied.

To My Many Friends and Readers:

I am unable to meet all personally—I can't clasp you by the hand and wish you the season's greetings—so I take this means of saying Merry Christmas to all.

A real old-fashioned greeting
These feeble words I say,
Just to wish you Merry Xmas
In the real old-fashioned way.
The same old-time remembrance
That's been wished to you before,
With a happier Happy New Year
Than you ever had before.

State Publicity Chairman Issues Scrap-Book Directions

Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, state chairman of publicity, sends the following directions regarding scrap-books from the manager of the scrap-book exhibits.

National Exhibits.

Ten (10) publicity books will be accepted from each state as follows: Eight local association publicity books, one council publicity book, one district publicity book. The books for the national exhibit will be selected from the publicity books exhibited at the state convention.

Important—Please observe carefully the number and kinds of books called for. Only those listed in the call will be exhibited.

Each state press chairman must arrange for the delegates attending the convention from her state to have the books returned. The national bureau will not assume this responsibility. Gold stars will be placed on all books securing a specified rating.

The following suggestions for making publicity scrap-books are issued: 1, Bear in mind that this is to be a publicity book, and not an association scrap-book, and that the material must be legitimate publicity. 2. Books should not exceed 12x16 inches, should be hung from the top and open upwards. 3. On the cover or on the first page, give the period covered by the publicity, as "May 1927 to May 1928." 4. Mark each clipping with name of paper in which it appeared and the date it appeared. If notation is made on the clipping use pencil as ink blurs; if made on the leaf of the scrap-book, use ink. 5. Make the book as attractive as possible and as artistic, keeping in mind that it is a publicity book, and that writing of articles with pencil or with ink is not publicity. Only such notations as are necessary to identify the article should be used, but mounting or outlining of articles, scrolls, or any arrangement which call especial attention to an article, or which will add to the appearance of the book is entirely permissible. 6. Give some thought as to the content, selecting the clippings carefully, using preferably those with new publicity ideas. The first consideration in rating the book will be quality and not quantity. 7. Arrange clippings in proper sequence, letting announcements be followed by write-ups or following a project through. 8. Make use of pictures which have had publicity. These give life to the book. 9. Arrange book in three divisions: (a) Publicity from the association; (b) Publicity concerning the association from other sources; (c) Membership publicity.

The first division would contain only publicity sent out by the association; the second would contain publicity which had been given through some channel other than the association—for example, a write-up by the district or state press chairman, an article in some magazine concerning the work the association had done, and the third would be publicity which went only to the members of the association or to the school patrons. This is necessarily limited publicity, and cannot be classed as general publicity. In this last group might be included samples of the artistic notices sent out to members, and samples of programs sent to members.

10. Some of the recognized channels for publicity are newspapers, school or church papers, educational journals or other periodicals, state bulletins, posters displayed in public places, placards in windows and on automobiles, handbills, radio talks. If radio talks are put in, notation must be made of the date given and over what station, but it is not necessary that the subject matter shall have been published.

Books will be rated on arrangement, neatness and type of material used. The following basis is suggested for rating: Legitimate material, 20 points; appearance, 10 points; arrangement of articles in proper sequence, 10 points; good announcements and write-ups, 20 points; originality, 10 points; use of photographs, 10 points; unusual publicity, that is, other than regular meetings, 20 points. Total, 100 points.

Boys' High P.-T. A. Meets Tuesday.

The parent and student body of Boys' High school are invited to attend the December meeting of the association Tuesday evening, December 20, at 7:30 o'clock, in the Military building. John Hancock, president, will be in the chair. The program on this occasion will be of unusual interest, consisting of selections by the Boys' High orchestra, and "The Wonder Hat," a one-act play, by the Dramatic club of the school. This play has the distinction of having won the prize in a recent contest of one-act plays under the auspices of the Marietta Y. W. C. A.

At a meeting of the executive board of the association Tuesday afternoon Mrs. R. K. Moore announced that a number of periodicals had been given the patients of Battle Hill sanitarium recently; and she asked the parents who have magazines to please send to the office of the school for distribution to hospitals.

Mrs. Henry Bauer, first vice president and chairman of the board presented H. O. Smith, principal of Boys' High, who told of some of the needs of the school. Reports were made by Mrs. J. L. Rankin, chairman of child welfare; Mrs. William Kingdon, Mrs. George Price and Mrs. Philip Essig, who spoke of plans for the enrollment of a larger number of parents of the association.

Capitol View P.-T. A. Daddies' Meeting.

The December meeting of the Capitol View P.-T. A. was a daddies' meeting which was held in the Baptist church building.

Dr. Cutts welcomed the association to the church. Christmas carols were sung by a group of pupils from the higher grades of the school. The speakers of the evening were Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state president of P.-T. A., and James Barron.

Mrs. Jeter spoke of the four different phases of P.-T. A. work. Mr. Barron told of the school situation in Atlanta.

The count of the parents awarded the attendance prize to high 2d grade, Miss Ragsdale, teacher.

Calhoun P.-T. A. Reports Meetings.

There was an interesting meeting of the Calhoun P.-T. A. Tuesday. After reports by the various committees the sixth grade children of Miss Silvey's class gave an entertainment. The sixth grade children sang Christmas carols, accompanied by Fannie Lee Miller on the violin. The grade count showed Miss Silvey's class to be the winner.

Pre-School Circle Gives Christmas Party.

The pre-school circle of Pryor Street school held its regular meeting in the form of a Christmas party Thursday. First on the program was a song, "Mighty Lak a Rose," by Harry Lay, Jr. A poem, "The House by the Side of the Road," was read by Mrs. Glover. She also explained the origin of the poem. Several selections were given on the violin by Miss Hermina Brum, accompanied on the piano by Miss Lucile Brum. Mrs. L. Kuniansky sang "Afterwards," and also read a story, "The Clever Child." Claudine Blackmon gave a recitation, "A View on Matrimony." Several contest were held and prizes were won by Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Montgomery and Claudine Blackmon.

The mothers were invited to the dining room, where lunch was prepared for them. Twenty-eight mothers were present.

Davis Street P.-T. A. Reports Meeting.

Davis Street School P.-T. A. met Thursday afternoon. James P. Barron, president of the Atlanta Public School Teachers' association, gave a forceful talk regarding the welfare of the Atlanta public schools and made an earnest plea for increased revenues for them.

A Christmas program was presented by children of the various grades. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Timmie, on account of illness in the family, the minutes were read by Miss Lucile Settle, teacher of the high and low third grade. Mrs. Barrett, Better Films chairman, was appointed delegate to the fifth district meeting.

The membership drive is creating much interest, the Reds, Mrs. Mitchell, captain, are in the lead. The count of mothers gave the prize money to the kindergarten and the Howard theater tickets to the low sixth grade.

Weston P.-T. A. Gives Supper.

A delicious oyster supper, sponsored by Weston P.-T. A., was served at the school house Friday evening. Immediately after the supper the guests were entertained with a negro minstrel which included several good numbers. Among them was a reading by Miss Sadie Coram.

Miss Sarah Hewett was voted the prettiest girl present and received a beautiful cake presented by the P.-T. A.

Miss Postell Addresses W. A. Bass P.-T. A.

"The Seven Objectives of Modern Education" was the message brought by Miss Mary Postell, assistant superintendent of schools, to the mothers of William Bass Junior High at their recent meeting. The objectives, "health, worthy home participation, active participation in all that pertains to physical welfare, vocation, wise use of leisure, the three R's and books" are these objectives. "To attain the first six of these, the key to the way we find in books, said Miss Postell. She stated that to know how to read orally, silently and speedily is the key to the seven objectives.

A group of boys and girls under the direction of Miss Pierce sang two selections. Master Victor Kingdon, dressed in Dutch costume, showed the costumes worn by boys and girls of other lands. Mr. Smith greeted the mothers. The prizes went to Mrs. Woodward, Miss Christian and Miss Frank Taylor.

Warm Springs Inn Plans Dance.

Warm Springs, Ga., December 17. Plans are being completed for the new year's eve dance at the Warm Springs Inn Saturday, December 31. There will be dancing from 9 until midnight, when a supper will be served to all the guests.

The inn, which is to be open throughout the winter, is to be used for the dance instead of the summer dancing pavilion, and will be gaily decorated for the occasion. The big fireplace in the lobby will be filled with glowing logs and the inn will have a holiday appearance.

Warm Springs, which has been a popular resort since anti-bellum days, has more recently come into prominence since Franklin D. Roosevelt makes his home there. He has been interested in its development for several years. Society from all over the state has for some years past been attending the summer dances at the Georgia Warm Springs, but this is the first season of winter social activities.

Decatur P.-T. A. Holds Initial Open Meeting

The first open meeting of the present school year for parents of high school pupils was given by the Decatur P.-T. A. in the high school auditorium Friday night, December 9.

The feature of the meeting was an address on music in the public schools made by Miss Elizabeth Lawrence, director of music in the Decatur High school. Miss Lawrence declared that the importance and benefits of music, and especially chorus singing, have never been recognized in Georgia, as it has in other states. She made a plea for better facilities for teaching music in the schools.

In connection with the address, a projecting machine was used to throw songs on a screen, and the audience sang patriotic airs. Professor O. L. Amsler, principal of the high school, urged the association to raise money for the purchase of the projector as part of the high school's equipment. He declared that it would be cheaper than the annual purchase of song books.

Misses Anna Harwell and Agnes Adams played two violin duets, Miss Irene Leftwich accompanying them, and Miss Leftwich played two Rubinstein numbers on the piano. Vaughan Ozmer sang two solos.

Kirby Freeman, business manager, and Miss Hallie Fairman, editor, made a plea for more liberal support of "The Broadcaster," the high school publication.

Mrs. W. H. Bowen, president of the association, presided at the meeting, and Mrs. Frank Harwell had charge of the program. Committee reports were made by various chairmen.

J. C. Harris P.-T. A. Indorses Resolution.

The December meeting of the J. C. Harris P.-T. A. held in the auditorium of the school Tuesday evening and dedicated to the fathers of the children of the school, was the outstanding meeting of the year. About 400 were present and Dr. Sutton delivered a forceful address.

An important feature of the meeting was the indorsement by the audience unanimously of a resolution urging the city government to set aside not less than 30 per cent of the total revenues for the support of the schools.

Following Dr. Sutton's address and the words of appreciation by Mrs. Thornton, principal of the school, and Mrs. Spinks, president of the association, the resolutions to which reference has just been made were offered by Mrs. Arnold Gregory, meeting with unanimous support and very enthusiastic applause.

Early in the program of the evening Mrs. Harry McCowan, talented pianist of College Park, gave a piano number and Mrs. Modena followed with two song numbers.

The count of parents showed Miss Carnes winner for the upper grades and Miss Ragsdale for the lower grades. Other attractive prizes were awarded those holding the lucky numbers—among them was a beautiful cake donated by Mrs. McCorley, which was drawn by one of the daddies, Mr. Elsner, a box of candy donated by Dr. and Mrs. Guffin went to Mrs. Fowler. The prize donated by Mrs. Stephen was drawn by Mrs. Allen. Mr. Spinks drew the prize donated by Mrs. DuBose. Mrs. Peyden drew the silver spoon donated by Mrs. Turner. The lovely basket of flowers by Mrs. Stallings was presented to Mrs. Sutton.

Oakhurst P.-T. A. Daddies' Meeting.

Thursday evening a large and enthusiastic audience was in attendance at the daddies' meeting of the Oakhurst P.-T. A. The president, Mrs. William Schley Howard, made the fathers feel much at home with her bits of humor.

Miss Mamie Barnes, the principal, welcomed the "daddies" and spoke of the work of the school.

A splendid Christmas program was rendered by boys and girls of the second, third and fourth grades. Sprightly elves with alphabet blocks about their waists danced here and there until the letters on the blocks formed Christmas greetings. "The Christmas Wish" by the third grade gave some interesting thoughts on contentment. "The Spirit of Christmas," by the fifth grade, with its wealth of Christmas carols delighted the hearers.

A delightful musical program was given by Mrs. Mabel Daniels, Miss Vivian Bryant and Miss Mary Lee Marlowe. Mrs. A. S. King gave the association plans for repairing and increasing the playground equipment. The P.-T. A. has for its goal this year the equipping of a modern playground. The count of parents gave the attendance prize to Mrs. Hopkins' fifth grade. Mrs. Howard presented Mrs. Hopkins, teacher, and Mrs. Weisiger, class mother, each with a beautiful cake for having the largest number of fathers present.

Home Park P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Home Park P.-T. A. meeting Wednesday afternoon was a veritable trip through "toyland." The kindergarten children, representing the whole gamut of toys in Santa's pack, carried mothers back to long ago Christmas times.

The primary and elementary grades did their bit toward spreading peace on earth, good will toward men, with their Christmas carols and stories.

A more material phase of Christmas is being taken care of by Mrs. Sam Harris and Mrs. P. A. Snyder. They plan a party with substantial souvenirs for the less fortunate children of the school.

On behalf of the school Miss Perry Henderson, principal, thanked the association for the attractive framing of the Joel Chandler Harris picture presented to the school by the Atlanta Georgian.

On the third Friday night in January daddies' meeting will be held, at which time Professor Willis A. Sutton will address the association. A special child welfare program will be given.

The hospitality committee added a festive air to the meeting with their red crepe paper surprise bags.

Low and high kindergarten and high 3 tied for attendance prize.

John Carey P.-T. A. To Give Christmas Party.

The John Carey P.-T. A. met Thursday at the schoolhouse. Those present arranged for an elaborate Christmas tree for the children Thursday, December 22. This will be the first year of the John Carey school and the patrons of the school will try to make it a memorable Christmas for the children. The next meeting will be held on the first Thursday of the year 1928.

Parent-Teacher Meetings

The December meeting of the Highland P.-T. A. will have two features. In addition to the usual talk, which in this instance will be on "Recreation," by Miss Lucy Adams, the school children will present a Christmas program. The meeting will take place in the school auditorium Wednesday, December 21, at 3 o'clock.

The P.-T. A. of All Saints meets Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, December 19, in the chapel. Mrs. De Los Hill will be the speaker for the afternoon. All are urged to be present.

The R. L. Hope school P.-T. A. meets at the school on Piedmont road, Tuesday afternoon, December 20, promptly at 2:30 o'clock. All interested mothers cordially invited to be present.

The Edgewood P.-T. A. meets Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 in the school auditorium.

The executive board of Edgewood school meets Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the school auditorium.

The Joe Brown Junior P.-T. A. meets at the school Monday evening, December 19, at 7:30 o'clock. The program for this month is adolescent reading and there will be some very interesting speakers on this subject.

The English Avenue P.-T. A. will have a daddies' meeting Monday night, December 19, at 7:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. An unusual program of interest has been prepared. All members of the association and friends of the school are urged to be present.

The pre-school cricle of the Whitefoord Avenue school will have a Christmas program at the usual monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon. A prize will be given to the winner of the health contest. All mothers of the community will be cordially welcomed.

The executive board of the Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. meets in the school auditorium, Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. All chairmen of standing committees and grade chairmen are urged to attend.

The Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. meets in the school auditorium Wednesday, December 21, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Charles Foster will be the speaker and a full attendance is urged.

The Tech High P.-T. A. meets Tuesday evening at 7:45 on the second floor of the Chamber of Commerce building. All members and friends of the school are urged to attend. The Tech High orchestra will play for this occasion and a rare treat is promised all those who attend this meeting.

The James L. Key P.-T. A. meets at the school Tuesday afternoon, December 20, at 3 o'clock. A splendid holiday program has been arranged, and it is hoped that all the patrons will attend.

S. M. Inman P.-T. A. will hold its Christmas meeting Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. This will be the monthly meeting and all friends and parents are invited to the class room to enjoy a Christmas program.

The Moreland P.-T. A. meets Tuesday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock in the school auditorium. An attacting Christmas program has been arranged and every member is asked to come and bring a 10-cent gift. All business will be omitted at this meeting.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. Honors Teachers.

The Kirkwood P.-T. T. met Wednesday afternoon in the school auditorium. At the monthly luncheon given the teachers by the association there were three visiting members of the board of education, W. D. Hoffman, D. M. Therrell and W. W. Gaines, Superintendent and Mrs. W. A. Sutton and the president of the association, Mrs. F. T. Bridges. Mr. Sutton introduced the visitors, and each responded with a short talk. The association enjoyed Mr. Sutton's talk on "The Home Life of the Child." Among many splendid points brought out, Mr. Sutton urges the parents to give each child a definite task to perform, a definite time to play and an opportunity to do what he or she likes best to do. All enjoyed the Christmas carols sung by six Kirkwood mothers.

The January meeting will be a daddies' night meeting, to be held January 10, the second Tuesday night of the month. The speaker will be Hon. E. D. Rivers.

Mrs. R. P. Thrower and committee gave a Christmas party to the faculty. Gifts were delivered to each teacher by two little messengers. In turn, the teachers gave a pleasant surprise to the mothers. There was "Santa Claus," drawn by two tiny reindeer, bringing such useful article for the kitchen. Each visitor received a gift, as did the mothers who held "lucky numbers."

The grade prizes were won by Miss Florence Deale, low 6-1, and Miss Irene Young, low 1-1.

Rabbi Marx Addresses Commercial High P.-T. A.

"How to employ your leisure time" was the theme of an inspiring address delivered by Rabbi Marx at the Commercial High School P.-T. A. meeting held Tuesday in the school auditorium. A record-breaking number of parents was present and the increase in the number of daddies was particularly noticeable. The attendance was partly the result of a new idea in getting parents to come to meetings, an idea that originated in C-2. Instead of merely sending out written invitations, a committee from the class, usually about three, divides the number of parents equally and calls them by telephone. First attendance prize went to Miss Ballard's class, A-1, and second prize was won by Miss Parks' class, C-2.

The members voted a cash contribution to the Better Films committee, to aid in its Christmas charity work.

Several selections were offered by the Commercial High orchestra.

Dr. Houghton Addresses Lee Street P.-T. A.

Dr. W. H. Houghton made a very forcible talk to the mothers and teachers of the Lee Street school P.-T. A. Tuesday afternoon stating that education meant the perfecting of the body as well as the training of the mind. Dr. Houghton urged the mothers to help their children by setting the right example in their mode of living rather than by merely giving them good advice.

Miss Wesley urged all the parents to keep the children busy during the Christmas holidays.

Pupils of low and high four delighted the audience with a Christmas play and several songs.

Attendance prizes were won by low four, Mrs. Brooke's class, and low two, Miss Shaw's class.

English Ave. P.-T. A. Is Addressed By Supt. W. A. Sutton

Much interest and enthusiasm were shown at the English Avenue P.-T. A. meeting Friday afternoon at which Dr. Willis A. Sutton addressed the association. Dr. Sutton stressed cooperation, health, scholarship and character.

Dr. Gaertner, of Oglethorpe university, was a guest of the P.-T. A. and responded to his introduction with a brief sketch of the early settlers of Liberty county, Georgia, showing how their fortitude and strength of character made them compare most favorably with the Pilgrim fathers of Massachusetts.

Other interesting features of the meeting were talks made by representatives from the different classes, telling about such school activities as banking, Red Cross, safety, library work and tree planting. At the business session it was voted that the association give a donation of $5 to the better films department to help defray the expense of the Christmas tree this year for needy children.

Mrs. T. C. Smith resigned as chairman of the better films committee and Mrs. W. E. Jones was elected to fill her place.

The count of parents gave the prize to Miss Freeman's and Mrs. Williamson's classes.

Grove Park School To Have "At Home."

The Grove Park school will have an "at home" Wednesday, December 21, at 12:30 o'clock. All interested mothers are invited to be present as there will be a demonstration of classwork in each room. At 1:30 all mothers and teachers will meet in the assembly hall, where demonstrations of second grade work will be given by Miss Frieda Embry, Miss Frances Scott and Mrs. Kate Horne.

Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Lena Harris Cox, principal of Grove Park school; Mrs. Carl M. Lancaster, second grade chairman for Miss Embry's grade; Mrs. W. G. Mills, second grade chairman for Miss Scott's grade, and Mrs. J. O. Mitcham, second grade chairman for Mrs. Horne's grade.

Rev. Harold Shields, of Gordon Street Presbyterian church, will bring a message of cheer and inspiration suited to the Christmas season. Mr. and Mrs. B. Bernard have extended to the seventh grades their annual invitation to be their guests Tuesday afternoon, December 20, at their home on Edwin place. Mr. and Mrs. Bernard have traveled extensively and have collected valuable curios and antiques which are of great educational interest to school children.

Fulton High P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Fulton High school P.-T. A. met Thursday afternoon at the school. Mrs. John D. Humphries presided. The program was arranged by Miss Isabel Dew, faculty adviser of the Girl Reserves. Following the opening song, Miss Annie Mae Walker read the Scripture. A skit, arranged by Miss Era Foley and featuring all the activities of the organization, was presented.

Miss Sarah Ezell, Girl Reserve secretary, of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A., was the principal speaker of the afternoon. In a very interesting way she outlined the purposes and the work of the club.

Highland P.-T. A. Announces Program.

May: Prayer and pledge; business; annual reports; election of officers.

Pre-School Dept. Hears Address By Mrs. Clifford Walker

The pre-school department of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council held the December meeting Wednesday in M. Rich & Bros'. school room. Mrs. Clifford Walker, national pre-school chairman, spoke of the interest and enthusiasm found in the Atlanta circles. Mrs. Walker gave a brief outline of the proposed new by-laws and outline of work for this department. Reports of the chairmen of the various schools showed much activity and increased attendance. Formwalt and Pryor reported 28 each in attendance, nine, ten and twelve were reported by a large number of circles; the time was when five constituted a circle.

Mrs. J. C. Malone presided in the absence, due to illness, of the council chairman, Mrs. H. P. Parks. Instructive toys and books were on display under the direction of the following committee: Mrs. T. C. Bazemore, Mrs. J. C. Caldwell and Mrs. Henry. Mrs. Z. V. Peterson displayed and explained the pre-school scrapbook.

Mrs. Malone conducted Miss McAlpine's study class, Miss McAlpine being unable to attend. Kirkwood won the book offered by Mrs. J. C. Malone for the largest number attending from any one school the council pre-school meeting.

Peeples Street School Holds Exercises.

Appropriate Arbor day and Joel Chandler Harris exercises were held at Peeples Street school recently. Distinctive honor to the memory of Georgia's illustrious writer of children's stories, and instructive information regarding the tree, formed the program given by pupils of the school. A white dogwood tree was planted on the school grounds in honor of Mrs. J. Q. Hooper, the efficient president of the association. After the presentation Mrs. Hooper expressed the wish that this tree be known as a "Love Tree." Much joy, too, was shown when a portrait of Mr. Harris was presented to the school through the efforts and generosity of the Uncle Remus association, the Georgian and Mrs. Hooper, who donated the lovely frame. The principal accepted this splendid gift in behalf of the school, and expressed thanks to all who assisted in any way to secure such an appreciative addition to the school. It was regretted very much that the parents couldn't attend on account of lack of room in the auditorium.

Fifth District P.-T. A. Board Issues News

The Fifth District Parent-Teacher executive board calls the attention of district chairmen and local associations to the following: The next district meeting will be held at the Henry Grady hotel, Wednesday, January 4. Reservations should be made with Mrs. Henry Bauer. Meeting will begin promptly at 10 o'clock. A full program has been planned and delegates are requested to be on hand at the opening hour. District dues of 81 should be sent to Mrs. F. H. Jackson, Ben Hill, Ga.

Pre-school circles are expected to send representatives to the district meeting. A circle is entitled to send its chairman and secretary, or their alternates, and one delegate for every fifty members.

Attention is called to the fact that no district chairman should send out a plan of work or any letter concerning the policies of the Parent-Teacher association unless it has been presented to the executive board and accepted.

The parliamentarian was instructed to bring in an amendment to the constitution providing that no district chairman should send out a plan of work unless it had been accepted by the district executive board, or unless it was a plan sent out by the state chairman.

In order that district publicity might be handled more efficiently, it was voted that the district would pay for the typing of articles by district chairman, and also for articles to be sent in by the publicity chairman.

Plans for furthering the sale of the cook book are to be made a feature of the district meeting.

Mrs. George Price, director of the department of home service, requests that all parent-teacher workers include books in their Christmas gifts.

O'Keefe Parents Hold Meeting.

The country reared lad developes into the most normal man, declared Kendall Weisiger, child psychologist, at the Parental Educational meeting Thursday evening at O'Keefe Junior High school, Mrs. P. G. Hanahon, presiding. Mr. Weisiger spoke in the absence of Dr. Nedigate Owenshy, who is conducting these meetings which are held the third Thursday in each month and are open to the public.

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

EVERYTHING considered, Four Women venture to say the Petrel Follies staged by Oglethorpe's orchestra and Dramatic club in the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium last week, was about the most successful and professional amateur entertainment given here in years. The program, not too long and boring, was done with enthusiasm and no end of esprit, and the curtain was rung down at 10:15 o'clock. For devising and directing the show credit goes to Earl Blackwell, as he proved so efficient that everything went off exceptionally smoothly and harmoniously. So insistent have been the demands for a return engagement, the prospects point to the Petrel Follies being presented at the Erlanger the middle of January. And if this proves true, Atlantans certainly will have an opportunity to see a high-class production for the small sum of one dollar, and at the same time, financially encourage a zealous, earnest group of college girls and boys striving with all their might and main to match J. T. Lupton's endowment fund for Oglethorpe university.

The curtain went up on an entrancing street in sunny Spain. Miss Robert Harbour, with all the illusive charm and fascination of a Castilian beauty, wearing a stunning costume, flashed across the stage carrying a tamborine which played an important part in her execution of "The Dancing Tamborine" number, a graceful speciality in which this talented girl excelled beyond expectations. She was followed by Blanford Eubanks, singing "Cherrie Berrie Be," and when he swung into the chorus, ravishingly beautiful Spanish girls, their graceful forms draped in gorgeous, colorful shawls, and accompanied by a male chorus, dressed in black velvet suits, sashed in red, joined the star in singing the lilting tune, their toes twinkling in the mazes of the dance, the ensemble numbering Misses Angel Allen, Mary Gunter, Ruth Brock, Evelyn Branch, Theodosia Hunnicutt, Mary Harris, Gertrude Murray, Betty Stribling, Louise Madden, La France Montcrief. Bill Perkins, Puss Alleman, Alan Watkins, Bob Shepherd, Dwight Horton, Jake Sutton, Murphy Judd, Stuart Gould, Fred Griffin.

It was a great temptation for the audience to rush en masse and buy pretty Harriett Hasson's violets, as she sang appealingly about the sale, tossing the fragrant blossoms over the footlights from a basket swinging from her arm. There were shouts of laughter over impish-looking and acting Miss Louise Madden burlesquing Miss Hasson, with the song entitled "Le Vegetabler," and throwing bunches of turnips in the direction of the spectators. Picturesquely charming was the "Old-Fashioned Garden" number, again featuring Blanford Eubanks in a vocal gem, and artful little Miss Helena Callaway, wearing an old-fashioned costume made of white tulle, a perfect replica of the girl of the sixties. When the curtain parted it disclosed three swings, occupied by the loveliest girl imaginable seated in each one, Miss Angel Allen in the center dressed in blue tulle, while flanking either side were Misses Carol Thompson and Betty Stribling gowned in pink. A glorified chorus, wearing old-fashioned gowns of rainbow-colored tulle, added a magical Ziegfeld touch to the specialty composed of Misses Evelyn Branch, Louise Madden, Mary Louise Harvey, Ruth Brook, Harriett Hasson, Virginia Risk, Alan Watkins, Murphy Judd and Lyman Fox.

The petrel pep dance smacking so strongly of the professional, so tricky and intricate were its snappy steps, was executed by the entire company, with Dwight Horton singing the "Varsity Drag," and the college colors, gold and black, reflecting in the costumes. Blanford Eubanks sang the "Fraternity Dream Girl," and as each frat was mentioned a beauteous girl glided across the stage. Miss Evelyn Branch, in pink chiffon, represented Delta Sigma Phi; Miss Angel Allen, gowned in white, symbolized a Kappa Alpha; Miss Marion Wolff, her white gown encrusted in rhinestones, stood for Alpha Lamba Tau, while Miss Helena Callaway, in gold and white, was a Pi Kappa Phi girl.

Miss Mary Buchanan's interpretation of Texas Guinana was a meritorious and clever impersonation, and she "got over" in grand style the spirit of life in a New York night club. Her comments on those in the audience including Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, Dr. Nicholassen and Parks Rusk were rich, rare and racy, and she called upon the spectators to give Misses Ellen and Ann Lane Newell the glad hand because of their recent return from an extended sojourn in Europe. The applause shook the auditorium rafters. With the abandon and savoir faire for which the celebrated red-haired Texas Guinan is famed, this tall, vivacious Miss Buchanan, her head crowned with natural red hair, eyes sparkling with merriment and enjoying to the fullest the part she played, took command as hostess of the cabaret scene, and brought out every ludicrous situation with artistic genius. Handsome Miss Eugenia Buchanan made a generous contribution to the program in singing "M' Man," and "My Heart Stood Still," her rich, golden voice filling the auditorium with the appealing tones of her exquisite voice.

"It Was Only a Sunshower" proved a decided hit, sung by Puss Alleman in a yellow slicker, accompanied by gay and diminutive Miss Carol Thompson, enveloped in a jaunty blue slicker and hat, holding aloft a small umbrella. Misses Helen and Olive Parrish, the twins who are the toast of Oglethorpe university, recited in chorus "The Congo," and did a very skillful comedy skit, introducing Ziegfeld's shadowgraph, which has the audience guessing to this very moment. And, as to the fashion show, with clothes from George Muse Clothing company, Miss Elsa Prater almost stopped the performance when she appeared in a gold metal cloth evening coat, worn over a gown scintillating in gold sequins, and having for a background an effective blue curtain. The Merry Widow waltz was really splendidly danced by Mary X. Gunter, costumed in black tulle, and a stylish white wig covering her own hair. Having for her partner Puss Alleman, as the intriguing "Prince Danilo," Louise and Paul Madden, sister and brother, achieved perfection in their "Bowery Dance," the tacky red plaid skirt, and red-plumed hat worn by the girl being equaled by the tight blue sweater, patched trousers and tough looking cap set on one side of Mr. Madden's head. Indescribably lovely was Miss Mary Harris and enveloped in pink chiffon and carrying a large ostrich feather in her hand, accompanied by Jake Sutton in the "Pink Lady" number. "The Butcher, the Baker, the Candlestick Maker," all of whom were in love with Marie, rounded out a distinctive program. Frank Inman, rendering the song and the cast being as follows: The butcher, Major Guthrie; the baker, Murphy Judd; the candlestick maker, Bill Perkins; Marie, Betty Stribling; the old man, Fred Griffin. Betty Stribling, as Marie, declared the man that would win her "must be big and strong like the butcher you know, with curly brown hair like the baker, and to capture the prize he must have big blue eyes just like the candlestick maker."

The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, they kept up a very high pace until a little bald man with the look of a Quaker just put them all out of the race. Now Marie would explain that it wasn't his money, for that never entered her mind, but the neighbors all thought that her selection was funny and that love was indeed very blind.

The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, they all kissed the beautiful bride and each one declared that he wouldn't forsake her no matter what fortune betide.

ALTHOUGH the original bridal plans of Miss Louise Gay Stubbs were changed last week by the illness from pleurisy of her fiance, William Barnes, of Ottawa, Ill., who is a patient in St. Luke's hospital in Chicago, just as soon as the groom-to-be is well again the chiming of wedding bells will invite the guests to St. Luke's church on Peachtree street to witness the ceremony, and perhaps the date selected by the lovely bride-elect will be that of January 12, the one on which her mother plighted her troth in the same edifice in 1905.

Though the flowers used in the church will probably not be the same, pink roses and small white hyacinths having given way in the world of decorators to more gorgeous and more exotic blooms, just as the messaline and Bruges lace of her mother's day have been succeeded by Callot satin and transparent velvet, which strike the mode of today.

In the list of attendants will be noted the names of the children of those who served the bride of yesterday, including Miss Sarah Peel Watts, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Watts, of Charlottesville, Va.; Mrs. Catherine Gay Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Inman Sanders; Misses Ethel and Sarah Kunzig, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Kunzig, of Mount Vernon, N. Y.; peremptory army orders cancelling the appearance in this array of pulchritude of gracious Mrs. William Saffarans, the former Miss Douglas Paine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, who left only last Friday with Lieutenant Saffarans for distant Panama, where they will join exclusive military circles at Fort Clayton.

Miss Stubbs left early last week for Chicago, where she spent her appointed wedding day with her fiance(having been accompanied north by Mrs. Allen F. Moore, of Ottawa, Ill., who will act as one of her attendants.

ALATELY acquired foreign resident of Atlanta, who, by the way, is the last word in Parisian chic, is "N'Aimez Que Moi," recently arrived on the S. S. Minnekahda, now residing at No. 1 Clifton road. Perhaps you have seen him airing his canine highness along the trails of Druid Hills in the company of the lovely Newell sisters, for he is the petted protege of Miss Anne Lane Newell, who purchased him in Paris last August. An impressive and lengthy pedigree assures one that he is an aristocrat of the highest order, belonging to the Griffon Belgique clan, and his tiny, smudged features we are reliably informed, are further assurance of his noble birth and rank.

Like his charming mistress, he was fitted for a complete wardrobe in the smart Parisian ateliers before sailing for America, and on warm days you will see him wearing a stunning crimson sweater, knitted to his exact measurements. When the weather is very cold he dons a handsome brown fur coat for his daily walk.

You've scarcely ever met such a traveled person as N'Aimez, as he is called by his intimates. Like a great many others of the fashionable world, he journeyed down to St. Jean de Luz, near the Basque coast, for August, a child's ticket being purchased for him on the French "wagon lit." He travels de luxe in an attractive wicker basket, fashioned by a skilled French craftsman, and following his stay in the Basque country he toured the chateau country with his mistress. In preparation for his sea voyage to America he was enrolled on the ship's list for canine passengers and made the trip most comfortably and luxuriously, sharing a stateroom on the Minnekahda with his beloved mistress.

Miss Newell distressingly declares that she does not believe America agrees with N'Aimez, though he has never been a robust, healthy dog. Three times while she was in Paris she sent him to Versailles to the Pension Pour Les Chiens for treatment. There he had a special nurse and received the best of care until his aristocratic, canine digestion was improved.

This tiny, brown, curly bit of fuzz truly lives up to his charming French name, which, when translated, means "Love Only Me," for all of his affection is reserved for his owner, who returns it in full measure.

ALTHOUGH the 1927 football season is past history faint rumblings continue to be heard from that never-to-be-forgotten Tech-Georgia game. The latest of these stories deals with the four-year-old son of a loyal alumnus of the University of Georgia. For weeks preceding the game the young son had heard nothing but Georgia's chances of triumphing over Tech. A few days ago when the fond parents returned home from a shopping expedition they were informed by the nurse of little Billy's misbehavior. Among the naughty pranks reported was that the mischievous son had beaten a neighbor playmate with a stick and driven him into his own yard.

Quick as a flash Billy replied: "Yes, I did, daddy, 'cause Jimmy was goin' 'round here clainin' that Tech beat Georgia." (Note: The father admits that he has never told his son the true outcome of that famous game.)

JUST when everybody thought all the winter brides and grooms were rounded up until springtime, the tinkle of the telephone bell conveyed news over the wire that one of the fairest of the fair will announce her engagement Christmas day. But, as Four Women have "crossed their hearts and hoped to die," the secret will remain a secret until Santa Claus arrives.

The bride-elect is one of three attractive sisters, and she is endowed with her full share of charms and was listed in the coterie of last season's debutantes.

The future groom is regarded as a perfect Adonis, and is a representative of a family whose name is worshiped by Georgians, his grandfather's name being enshrined in the hearts of Atlantans and people from all over the world journey here to see where once he lived.

TRULY expressing sentiment were the hundreds of exquisite blossoms surrounding Miss Florence Eckford at her "coming out" party. Those having the privilege of attending the brilliant receptions Thursday did not realize that the lovely debutante had faced a perplexing situation just before the reception hours. The question was, which of the many bouquets would she choose to wear on this memorable occasion? Each card enclosed bore the request that the debutante honor the sender by wearing his bouquet.

Beautiful Miss Eckford, who is an exact replica of Gladys Glad, the Ziegfeld Follies girl whom Flo himself declares to be the most beauteous creature in the world, appeared at the party with nine orchids garlanding the left shoulder of the debbie, and for the information of the reader not understanding the language of flowers, an orchid, its translation means "A belle—whose qualities, like her charms, are unequaled."

Mrs. Armor Attends Important Conference in National Capital

M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Tate, has returned home after attending the National Temperance council, which is composed of 31 temperance and reform organizations, and the convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, both held in Washington, D. C., and at which great gatherings she was a speaker. Through the courtesy of Senator William J. Harris she attended the opening session of congress and witnessed the interesting ceremony of swearing in the new senators.

The National Temperance council was a conference of leaders, bishops, presidents—LL. D.s, D. D.s, and other kinds of doctors. The conference lasted three days, with Dr. Ira Landrith, of Nashville, Tenn., presiding over the council, and Dr. A. J. Barton, of Atlanta, over the executive sessions.

One of the features was the luncheon at the Raleigh hotel given by the "continuation committee." At that time the following call to the colors was presented by Dr. Daniel Poling, president of the World's Christian Endeavor organization and editor of the Christian Herald, who presided, and was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted: "The nation is approaching its great period of political discussion and decision. The crisis in constitutional overnment demand a national offensive. Organization must be made adequate for the occasion. We call for a realignment of our forces and a unified command. Prohibition is not a theory; it is a fact. The practicability of its enforcement where not vitiated by corrupt politics has been proved. That it is a good law has been demonstrated. By it labor has been enriched, business enlarged and the public's savings vastly increased. Morally it is the greatest social adventure in history. Politically it challenges a free people to carry out their own mandates. At its worst prohibition is immeasurably better than legalized liquor at its best, and it is the settled conviction of a large majority of the nation's voters that it shall be carried into full effect. We stand for the enforcement of all law. The issue joins in the eighteenth amendment. The personal liberay argument is specious. Personal liberty must wait on public weal and walk with law. To concede that enforcement is impracticable is to condone nullification. The alternative is ordered government or anarchy, and the constitution of the United States is not a jest."

"The friends of prohibition and law enforcement demand positive declaration in party platforms. They will strive to defeat office seekers who are either negative or silent. Representative leaders of 25,000,000 women who have been added to the electorate since the eighteenth amendment came into force have joined in the declaration of 3,000,000 organized young people that 'no candidate not outspokenly committed to the eighteenth amendment and its enforcement can have our support or votes.'

"We call upon the American people to repudiate all state and national party platforms that deal only in glittering generalities with law enforcement. We will oppose and vote against candidates in both parties whose promise is fair and dry but whose official performance is wet.

"The matter is more than a domestic issue. The hope of every other people awaits the outcome of our struggle and the organized 'trade' abroad iniates with the illicit traffic at home to destroy our achievement. In this when we strengthen America, we serve the world. Let propaganda be answered with truth. Release the facts. Let complacency make way for militancy. Mobilize the public conscience. Then shall 'reverence for law and political religion of the nation' become a reality in governm..at. And we invoke upon this cause 'the considerate judgment of mankind and the favor of Almighty God.'"

Mrs. Armor's Ovation.

When Mrs. Armor was introduced at the A. S. L. convention at the Mayflower hotel, the great audience rose to its feet and cheered, and all along through her speech they clapped and laughed, applauded and cheered again and again, and when she finished the whole audience rose and cheered for several minutes. Bishop Darlington, of the Episcopal church, prayed the opening prayer at that session, and prefaced it by a ringing declaration for prohibition for himself and his church. Dr. Harris, "pastor of the most aristocratic and exclusive Methodist church in Washington," presided and spoke strong words of welcome and encouragement. Bishop Nicholson, of the Methodist church; Senator Morris Sheppard, and Mrs. Armor were the speakers.

Mrs. Armor told of the thousands of young people to whom she has spoke during the past year and their cordial reception they gave her message, and to that audience of leaders she said: "I bring you a message to the young people of America. Take it to them in full confidence and in this great cause and they will respond more fully, more enthusiastically than their elders, for America never had more intelligent, worth while and patriotic young people than she has today. Tell them we are fighting for three things dearest to their hearts, the honor of the flag, the safety of democracy and the glory of God."

Plans for Future Fight.

This nation-wide rally for observance and enforcement of prohibition planned to meet the challenge of the wet forces threatening constitutional government. Delegates from local, state and national church and temperance organizations met for information, council and action. The most able, informed and eloquent speakers in America discussed every vital phase of the fight against alcoholism. Among these were Senator Sheppard, Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, Harvey Ingham, Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran, Assistant Attorney General Mabel Walker Willebrandt, and Colonel Patrick Henry Callahan. The temperance forces of America are united in the belief that prohibition is the best method of dealing with the liquor problem, and they will work in accord with this belief.

Akins Furn. Co. Display Attracts Attention

The above photograph shows the beautiful Christmas display window of the Akins Furniture Co., at 262 Peachtree street, strikingly illustrating the big exhibition of Christmas merchandise at this new store.

The Akins Furniture Co., which has for its slogan "A Good Furniture Store," opened for business in Atlanta about thirty days ago with a large stock of beautiful furnishings, showing the very latest designs in suites and odd pieces that the furniture market affords.

In speaking of their Christmas trade, Byron Akins, head of the business, said:

"One of the big influences in our excellent business is the fact that every piece of merchandise in our stock is brand new and many of the designs bought only a few weeks ago will be shown at the spring furniture market."

In addition to Mr. Akin's, Bob Scott and Morris Meisel, all well-known local furniture men, are connected with the firm and cordially invite their friends to see them at this new location.—(adv.)

THE BELLAMY TRIAL.

"The Bellamy Trial." By Frances Noyes Hart—Quite the most absorbing novel of the year is Frances Noyes Hart's latest novel, "The Bellamy Trial," recently published by Doubleday, Page & Co. Mrs. Hart is the daughter of Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, and publisher of the Washington Star. She lives near New York, her husband being a prominent attorney of that city. The rotogravure section of today's Constitution carries the reproduction of a small camera picture taken of Mrs. Hart and her two lovely children.

"The Bellamy Trial" was written for publication in the Saturday Evening Post, which completed the serial only a few weeks ago, attracting widespread attention throughout the country.

The book was published immediately upon the completion of the serial and every indication points to its being the best seller of the fiction stories of the Christmas season, with the probability of its being a record breaker for the next year.

The conception and the development of the story is somewhat unique in literature. A mysterious murder occurs. Guilt points to Mrs. Susan Ives, the wife of aprominent business man of the community in which the tragedy occurs. Circumstantial evidence indicates that an "affair" existed between Mrs. Ives and Stephen Bellamy, the husband of the murdered woman, whose body was found in a secluded unoccupied cottage on a near-by estate to which it was proven that Mr. Bellamy and Mrs. Ives had driven on the evening of the murder of Mrs. Bellamy. Both were indicted.

After a thrilling recital of the story of the finding of the body of Mrs. Bellamy, and the antecedent relations of the various individuals and family involved in the affair, the story is unfolded with the trial of the case, and the development of the evidence of the various individuals and families It is, in effect, a court reporter's stenographic reproduction of the proceedings of the trial, a chapter being devoted to the developments of each day.

As the witnesses are examined, one after another, the guilt one day is apparently fixed upon the defendants, Mrs. Ives and Mr. Bellamy. The next day they are both apparently not only completely vindicated but exonerated, with the character of each untainted. The guilt is apparently shifted to another quarter. Then again both Mrs. Ives and Mr. Bellamy appear to become involved in the tragedy, but the next day's proceedings apparently show the guilt to be in an entirely different direction. Thus the curiosity of the reader is aroused with each day's proceedings, until finally the guilt is definitely fixed.

We say nothing of the verdict of the jury, nor of the ultimate fixing of the guilt for the murder of Mrs. Bellamy, for the reason that to do so would deprive those who have not yet read this remarkable story of the thrill that follows the unravelling of the mystery.

In telling the story Mrs. Hart has manifested an intimate acquaintance with court procedure and with legal details that would do credit to an eminent attorney. Indeed, it is doubtful if one attorney in a dozen could have handled a case involving real, instead of hypothetical facts, with the same ability that has characterized the author's treatment of the Bellamy case from the standpoint of either the prosecution or the defense. The trial is marked by many legal technicalities, but they are so developed as to hold the keen interest of the lay reader, while from the standpoint of the legal profession there is manifested an amazing knowledge of the intricacies of court procedure.

Mrs. Hart had already won her spurs in literature before the publication of "The Bellamy Trial," but this story puts her in the front rank of American novelists and whets the appetite of the public for her next venture.

EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

This is an unconventional picture of Edgar Rice Burroughs in riding costume, taken on his ranch, Harzana, near Los Angeles.

"Tarzan" Burroughs was a range rider in his younger days and was noted, far and wide, for his courage and skill in breaking vicious horses. His favorite recreation is riding and scarcely a day passes that does not find him in the saddle. (The "Tarzan" books are published by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.)

THE GULF OF YEARS.

The Gulf of Years.—A Canadian story of thought, action, love and faith. By Watson Griffin, F. R. G. S., who is well known for the work he has done in the literary field. "Canada, the Country of the Twentieth Century," "Canada and the British West Indies," "The Land of Waterways," and many other books have been contributed as well as articles on the Canadian questions which have been published by leading British and American magazines.

The introduction gives the reader a summary of the lives and thoughts of a group of Canadians living in and about the village of Downmount. It is a chronicle of Canada but not the Canada of the rushing waters, the lumber camps or the hunting grounds. The author has located the scene of action in a district of the Canadian southland from Niagara Falls to Hamilton, Ontario, and while it is not a geological record the geologist will feel very much at home among the descriptions which might cover a million years and yet "are but as yesterday when it is past."

Among the many characters the author has created to make this a complete and appealing story none stand out with the same dignity as Dr. Jackson Ruther, the people of this little village had the habit of counting distance by saying "I walked from Ruther's to Wurtelle's." You forget that the characters are not alive, that you are not one of them, enjoying their pleasures, love affairs, and sympathizing with them in their sorrows. It is a story of fiction and yet you forget it for you become so absorbed in the story and the people that it becomes a real incident in your life. (The Point Publishers, Toronto, Canada.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Crime and Punishment.—By Fyodor Dostoevsky. Translated by Constance Garnett. Introduction by Dorothy Brewster, assistant professor of English, Columbia university, in which she says: "The story may be taken quite naively as one of the most thrilling of detective stories. Or just as naively—but more solemnly—as a Christian drama of sin and retribution, or into it may be read psychological, philosophical, and even metaphysical significance to the limit of one's capacity for such sepeculation." (MacMillan company, New York.)

The Secret of Father Brown.—By Gilbert K. Chesterton. Illustrations by Frederick Dorr Steele. This is a new series of adventures and mysteries solved by the skill and quick wits of Father Brown, who ranks next to Sherlock Holmes in English fiction. The stories are not only puzzling but thrilling and while they have a delightful, humorous twist they are real stories, some of which appeared in Harper's magazine and have not as yet been forgotten.

Father Brown played an unforgettable part in the story of "The Man Who Knew Too Much." (Harper & Bros., New York.)

Gritney People.—By R. Emmet Kennedy. A delightful collection of the intimate life of the negroes of Gretna, La., a rural town on the banks of the Mississippi river, opposite New Orleans.

There is no fake or fiction about these characters—they are very much alive and who act and talk in their own picturesque way. On this occasion as many times before they all gathered at the cook shop which belonged to Aunt Susan for a Sunday jollification, and the author has given them permission in this book to tell in their own way the good times they have. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

The White Flower. By Grace Livingston Hill. How was Rachel, a pretty auburn-haired girl, to know that the ad in a certain daily paper was not true? Why should she doubt that there was no dear old lady out in the beautiful state of California advertising for a bright young girl for a companion?

This is the interesting story that comes just in time for a holiday gift from the pen of one of the most popular writers of clever fiction. Mrs. Hill wrote "Job's Niece," which was running over with thrills, and the reader, young or old, will not be disappointed in her latest book. (Lippincott's Book.)

The Castle Rock Mystery. By George Gibbs, author of "The Up-Grade," "The Flame of Courage," etc. The reader who knows Mr. Gibbs' style of writing will prepare for a different mystery story from the many that is being written now.

Several times the reader thinks he has solved the mystery but even Joe Brock, who tells the story, finds himself rather confused for it is a mystery with thrills and twists from beginning to end and enough complications to puzzle the proverbial Philadelphia lawyer. The detective in this case is a quaint old Pennsylvania Dutchman, and he, too, is a new type, quiet and subtle, but with a quaint sense of humor. (Appleton's Book.)

The Mating of Doris Dinsmore. The story is woven around a college girl and the daughter of a country doctor. It is another story of the discontented country girl with her small home surroundings who goes to New York to earn her living. She soon meets a young man who persuades her to marry him—the story from here is another first-class mystery story. (The Stratford Company.)

The Verdict of You All. By Henry Wade. This is a detective story in which the complete plan is staged and unraveled with an "intricate precision that recalls the ratiocination of Poe." While Mr. Wade is a new writer of detective stories he is a clever writer and well knows how to stage his plot. (Payson & Clarke, New York.)

The Sower of the Wind. By Richard Dehan. This story is divided into four books—"The Sowing," "The Growing," "The Ripening," "The Reaping." The story is woven around Gaspar Barboas, Anglo-Spanish Hebrew pearler of western Australia. Driven from England he turns up in Droone, a strange settlement on the Australian coast. This is the beginning of a wierd, but thrilling story of power and beauty—haunting. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

Tarboe. The Story of a Life. By Gilbert Parker. The publishers write: "Mr. Parker's latest novel is not only one of absorbing and dramtic quality, but it is a literary tour de force."

Tarboe is considered perhaps the most accomplished gambler of his period, therefore the author has given an analysis of his complex character and an account of his many adventures.

He presents so attractive figure that one regrets that he is not an old colonial gentleman, or a sport with a long line of royal ancestry behind him. There were many love affairs in his life but only one which touched his heart and of whom he said when the news came that she had passed on: "She is happy now, I know. She was a flower, and she is in the garden that has no end. I remember her, and I live on."

The author closes his story with a message to any critic: "If you would see one who has descended low, but has ascended high, There is the man." (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

MAN'S KNOWLEDGE.

The Outline of Man's Knowledge. History and Science and Literary—Art and Religion and Philosophy. By Clement Wood. This is the fascinating story of man's amazing achievements told in lively, narrative form.

There are two questions in the introduction which have a very strong bearing on the contents of this book: What is the individual's object in life? What is the collective aim of the civilized society in which the individual lives?

The object of this book is to present to the reader the story of all the important knowledge that man has gained in every field since the dawning of civilization. It is really six volumes in one and is as entertaining as any fiction story. There are 728 pages, including 14 full-page illustrations and three double-page decorative maps. (Lewis Copeland Co., Inc., West Fifty-seventh street, New York. Price, $5.)

WHY DO WE SMOKE?

This Smoking World. By A. E. Hamilton. Decorations by M. J. Gallager. Now that the peculiar habit of tobacco smoking has acquired all the modern frills of cigarettes which do this or prevent that, pipes that are no longer mellowed, crusted bowls of briar but highly scientific instruments for a "clean smoke," one writer pauses and asks the pertinent question, "What is it all about?" Why do we smoke? What is the history of this curious human custom? What is to be said in favor of the "weed"—or against it—by the psychologist, the physician, the economist, the sociologist or the militant reformer?

Do women wish to smoke because it has become a fad, or does the cigarette satisfy some instinctive desire?

These are the questions which come up in the minds of everyone on the subject of tobacco. They are the questions in the minds of everyone the subject of tobacco. They are the questions which Mr. Hamilton answers in "This Smoking World." This is a fascinating subject that Mr. Hamilton has treated in a manner which makes it even more fascinating than it appears at first glance. His attitude is impartial and scientific. His style is characterized by a sustained interest and a buoyant humor. (Century's Book.)

DETECTIVE STORIES RECEIVED.

The Revenge of Fantomas. A new Fantomas novel by Marcel Allain, author of the Lord of Terror, etc. The translation is by Alfred Allison. (David McKay's Book, Philadelphia.)

The Black Pawn. By Bruce Norman, author of "A Thousand Hands." Colored jacket by Beth Morris. The mystery is the International Union of Chess Players and the villain is Matthew Caul, the great philanthropist. What game is more innocent than chess? The story is worth reading. (The Dial Press, New York.)

The House of Disappearance. By J. Jefferson Farjeon. Colored picture jacket by Carroll Snell. A most interesting mystery story by the author of "The Green Dragon." (The Dial Press, New York.)

The Melody of Death. By Edgar Wallace, author of "The Green Archer." This is another fascinating mystery story. (The Dial Press, New York.)

The Starvel Hollow Tragedy. By Freeman Wills Crofts. Any lover of mystery stories will read this from the first chapter to the last—the plot is unusually clever. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

THIS, THAT AND THE OTHER BOOK.

Tom Mason's Book of Wit and Humor. This is just the book to make somebody smile by presenting it to them as a holiday gift. The author, Thomas L. Masson, is well known as the former editor of Life and present editor of "Short Turns and Encore" of the Saturday Evening Post. This book is one of his most amusing and entertaining achievements, containing much of his original work. (J. H. Sears & Co., New York.)

Breaking Into the Movies. Edited by Charles Reed Jones, former editor of Photoplay Journal and other movie magazines. This book should be of value to the scenario writer, a star, director—it is the textbook of motion-picture industry. It is filled with interesting data on the subject of how, when and why you get into the movies. (Unicorn Press, New York.)

Any Girl Can Be Good Looking. By Hazel Rawson Cades. This is not an advertisement of current fads and fancies but it is a valuable handbook that will continue to be worthwhile to its owner as the years roll on from girlhood to womanhood. (Appleton's Book.)

Just Between Us Girls. The intimate diary of an awfully sweet person. By Lloyd Mayer. Illustrations by George Clisbee. "She speaks . . . yet she says nothing." A book that will entertain "Us Girls" all through the holiday season—and perhaps longer. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

Etiquette at a Glance. By Anne Steese Richardson, well known and appreciated through her lecture tours and articles in popular magazines, has become the guide, philosopher and friend to thousands of readers. Any girl, or even woman, who will read what the writer has to say on etiquette will be up to date in all social affairs. (Appleton's Book.)

I've Got Your Number! By Doris Webster and Mary A. Hopkins. It consists of 25 questions for men and women. While the book is primarily intended as a pastime, it is based on sound psychology.

Read the book, of course, and the next time you are in a party of two or more people select your victim and try it out on him. You will not miss it very far. It's in the book! It is the greatest book of entertainment that has been published this season. The members of the Century company's staff have found it to be a real pleasure on week-end trips and at a house party it can't be beat when it comes to fun and humor. Don't take my word for it—try it yourself. (The Century company, New York.)

CURRENT MAGAZINES RECEIVED.

The American Review for December has for its frontispiece a picture of the president and his cabinet. Under the progress of the world many interesting subjects are discussed, and under the heading, "Leading Articles," everything is talked about from the ever new question of the war to prosperity. The list of fine writers, the live questions selected for discussion, the reproduction of leading cartoons, with up-to-date illustrations, makes it one of the most popular magazines published in the U. S. A., for which special credit is given to its editor, Albert Shaw.

Scribner's Christmas number with its beautiful cover presenting a picture of the Madonna, has for its frontispiece "Au Cafe" from the painting by Manet. There are the usual list of splendid writers, Don Marquis, author of "Old Soak," leading with a story entitled, "The Flea, the Pup and the Millennium," with illustrations by Author Dove. This is a most valuable edition to the reader who likes articles of study and with a little humor now and then.

World Traveler. December issue carries on its front cover one of the most attractive prints from a colored engraving by W. N. Gardiner after the original by W. Hamilton. Among the other pictures pleasing to the eye at this time are "The Carol Singers," "Christmas Comes Around the World," is a most attractive article with its illustrations, and there are still others which will add to the special interest that hovers around the library table during the holiday season. It is one of the most up-to-date magazines.

Beautiful Atlanta Belles Make Bow To Society

The above photograph presents two of the season's most popular and admired debutantes, Miss Florence Eckford, left, and Miss Gertrude Harris. Miss Eckford, the beautiful young daughter of Mrs. F. Burgess Eckford, was formally presented to society by her mother at a brilliant reception given at her home on Peachtree circle Thursday afternoon. She is seen wearing the exquisite French gown, combining a seafoam blue moire bodice with a bouffant skirt of blue and pink tulle, in which she received the several hundred members of society at the lovely affair. Miss Harris, charming young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Harris, made her bow to society at an elaborate reception given by Mrs. Harris at her home on Oakdale road Wednesday afternoon. She is seen wearing her debut gown, a strikingly becoming model of softest ivory satin, fashioned with a tight bodice and a smartly draped skirt of the bouffant type. The lovely photographs are the work of the Little studio.

College Students Will Be Invited To Local Homes

Boys and girls attending college in Atlanta will be guests for dinner in homes of Atlanta citizens, shortly after the schools begin their work after the Christmas holidays, according to the plan of the Inter-Civic council. By cooperation of the council, which is comprised of the various civic clubs of the city—Civitan, Kiwanis, Rotary, Exchange and Lions—and the chamber of commerce, with the college authorities who are preparing lists, it is assured that each student will receive an invitation to dinner in an Atlanta home. By this means the dormitory students will have an opportunity to become acquainted with a new phase of the life in Atlanta and will have a chance to make friends with Atlanta people whom they otherwise would not know.

Those boys and girls whose fathers are members of the Lions club in another city will be entertained in the home of an Atlanta Lions club member, while sons and daughters of Civitans will be guests in a Civitan's home. The other clubs will follow this plan and each member will have for Sunday dinner a college student away from home.

Those whose fathers are not members of such organizations will not be neglected, however, for the plan is for each guest to take a roommate or other friend with him. The sons and daughters of club members who are day students in Atlanta colleges will invite their friends from out-of-town to have dinner in their homes, and in this way it is believed that each "boarder" will be given a bit of "home life."

The plan was suggested at a recent meeting of the Inter-Civic council by Cator Woolford, who has for years been interested in educational activities, and Colonel J. C. Woodward, chairman of the educational committee of the chamber of commerce.

"Atlanta is overlooking a very important factor in her growth and progress," said Mr. Woolford. "We have thousands of college students within our gates, all of them potential citizens of Atlanta. What do they do when they are graduated? How many of them remain in Atlanta to enter a business or professional career?

"We are anxious to bring new citizens to Atlanta. Here is the best possible field. But to make these boys and girls love Atlanta and desire to live here, we must let them see more of the city than the college campus, the streets and the theaters. Let us welcome them into our homes and make them feel that we like them and want them. And from my own experience I know that every family which plays host to college students will enjoy it fully as much as the guest."

Officials of Georgia Tech are completing a census of students whose fathers are members of civic clubs, and other colleges are at work on similar lists. It is expected that within a short time every out-of-town student will be invited to dinner at the home of some Atlantan.

Harvard Musical Units To Appear Here on Dec. 26

The Harvard Instrumental clubs, numbering 50 pieces, will make their first appearance in Atlanta on December 26, according to announcement Saturday by S. N. Evins, president of the Georgia Harvard club, under whose auspices the concert will be given.

The musicale is to be held at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium at 8 o'clock in the evening, the program lasting about an hour and a half. The Instrumental clubs include the Banjo club of 35 pieces, which will give medleys of popular songs and college numbers, and the Mandolin club which will give a group of classical selections.

Led by Arthur A. Holbrook, the vocal club will render a group of old college favorites, particularly those of Harvard. The Gold Coast orchestra, Harvard's jazz group, will present a group of the latest popular hits. Albert Lind, Harvard violinist, will be heard in a group of classical numbers. Perry Kingsley, ventriloquist, will round out the program with a comedy turn "Tommy and Nemo."

The personnel of the Harvard clubs will arrive in Atlanta on Monday morning, December 26, will be taken to see Stone mountain, and will be entertained informally by officers of the Atlanta Harvard alumni, which include Mr. Evins, president; L. J. Elsas, vice president, and W. A. Sutherland, secretary and treasurer.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale Monday morning at Phillips & Crew Piano company.

PAINT BRUSH AIDS AS RADIO ACCESSORY

Chicago, December 17.—(AP)—Probably in no place more than radio is the old adage "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" worthy of sharp attention.

For example, dust is one of the biggest enemies of the receiver. An ordinary paint or typewriter brush is the best remedy. With it variable condensers and other parts of the set may be kept clean, avoiding worries that creep in if the dust is allowed to accumulate.

ROGER HILL PLAYS POLYNESIAN HARP AT WGST MONDAY

WGST, the Georgia School of Technology radio station, presents a program Monday night, December 19, from 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock on a wave length of 270.1 meters or a frequency of 1110 kilocycles by Roger Hill.

Hill is at present a special student at Georgia Tech, where he is busy absorbing more physics, mathematics and electrical engineering with a view of still further improvements in sound generating apparatus. He has been associated for a number of years with motion picture and vaudeville work, is an active member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and an honorary member of the American Projection society. He has patented numerous improvements in movie apparatus and has pending a number of additional patents covering novel tricks performed with light and sound.

The instrument which Hill plays was designed by himself as well as developing the playing technique. The instrument is variously known as the super-steel guitar, Polynesian piano and South Sea harp. The instrument has 17 strings, comprising a five-string Hawiian guitar in combination with the first 12 strings of a concert harp. Through ingenious technique, both are played simultaneously. The instrument was especially designed for radio broadcast work and has a built-in microphone directly linked to the sound board, through which delicate overtones, which would otherwise be inaudible, are added to the music producing a tone quality of surpassing beauty.

The super-steel guitar has been heard over WJZ, New York; WRC, Washington, and other radio stations in the east, but this is the first radio performance in which the improved microphone has been heard.

FEW COLLEGE STATIONS TO FEEL BOARD AX

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Few, if any, college stations will feel the ax of the federal radio commission when it starts its program of wholesale elimination of broadcasters in February.

Merit of program will be a primary factor in the selection of stations which will be allowed to remain. In this regard, the commission believes that the college stations give invaluable service. The agricultural colleges and experimental stations, particularly, are regarded as fountain heads of new scientific data.

In the new allocations effective December 1, the operations of several college stations were changed, some being restricted to daytime broadcasting. Although some have protested, members of the commission contend that most of the colleges prefer the daytime schedule.

The commission, however, is unsympathetic with the attempt of some college broadcasters to leave their legitimate field of instruction and contribute to the interference problem by broadcasting entertainment programs during the evening.

KOA Celebrates Birthday.

Denver, Col., December 17.—(AP)—Three years old on December 15, station KOA will celebrate with a presentation of the comic opera "The Mikado," to be given the following night. December 15 is KOA's silent night. The opera broadcast will open at 8:30 o'clock and be followed by a varied program.

Radio Amateurs Train To Assist U. S. Navy

From the ranks of the radio amateurs are selected the men who are making up the Volunteer Communication Reserve of the United States Navy. They include some of the country's best amateur operators and enlist to aid Uncle Sam in case of war. Prominent among the units in this organization is the U. S. Naval Communication Reserve of the seventh district at Orlando, Fla.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Some of the best amateur radio operators in the country will be available for immediate service to the United States in the event of war.

Selected men from the ranks of radio amateurs are being enlisted for four years in the volunteer communication reserve of the navy.

Operators with a commercial license of extra first grade may qualify as chief radiomen in time of war; those with first-grade licenses as radiomen first class; those with second grade licenses as radiomen, second class; amateurs first grade a radiomen second class, and amateurs second grade as radiomen third class.

One of the noteworthy examples of the development of this branch of the naval reserve is the growth of the units in Florida, Commander J. A. Schofield, of the naval reserve, says.

In February, 1925, Captain C. D. Stearns, then commandant of the seventh naval district, began organization of the communication reserve in his district. At that time there were one officer and two enlisted men in the district. The personnel now is 84 officers and men and the reserve has acquired 24 radio transmitting and receiving stations, in various Florida cities.

Units of the communication reserve have been established in Orlando, Jacksonville, Fort Myers and Tampa, Fla. Each unit reports by radio to the master control station at Orlando on Thursday nights. The navy department, through the cooperation of the department of commerce, has assigned two navy call letters to reserve radio stations. They are NRRG at Orlando and NRRQ at Jacksonville.

Men who enroll in the reserve are given an opportunity to become acquainted with expert radiomen in all parts of the United States. Each year a selected number are given shore radio station duty with full pay for two weeks, and in some instances radiomen have been sent on summer cruises on board navy destroyers, where they have been assigned to stand radio watches at sea.

The enlistment age is from 18 to 35, but fans of all ages apply, from 16 to 70, Commander Schofield says.

WESTINGHOUSE AIDS IN SHORT WAVE FIELD

For the winter season of 1928 the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, through its principal station, KDKA at Pittsburgh, will continue with undiminished vigor its extensive program of short-wave transmissions.

Shore-wave transmissions have been featured at KDKA for the past five years, during which its programs have repeatedly been repeated in Europe, South Africa and far-off Australia.

From 8 to 10 o'clock every night except Sundays throughout the winter the pioneer station's programs, in addition to being broadcast on the regular wave length of 315.8 meters, will be transmitted simultaneously on 27 and 62.5 meters and occasionally on 42.95 meters.

This does not mean that Westinghouse is taking up the short wave as a definite part of its regular routing, as the company announces its short-wave activities are confined exclusively to experimental transmisions, carried on for the sole purpose of acquiring data as to the carrying power, losses and quality of the lower wave bands.

Possessors of short-wave receiving sets in many distant parts of the world listen in regularly for KDKA'S transmissions and numerous reports of clear reception pour in to the station's headquarters from these listeners.

Radio engineers of the Metropolitan Vickers Company, Ltd., receive the transmission in England and frequently arrange for their rebroadcasting.

The short wave is making possible the Westinghouse program of transmission to the arctic and sub-arctic regions this year, which take place at 11 o'clock, eastern standard time, January 14 and February 19. The posts of the Hudson's Bay company, and the northwest mounted police have installed short-wave sets to receive the programs.

A number of radio amateurs in Australia attempt to hear KDKA regularly, and although they sometimes experienced interference they very frequently report hearing KDKA clearly.

In Mexico City, KDKA'S programs are regularly picked up by a short-wave receiver, and rebroadcast over VZE of the Mexican federal department of education. The first rebroadcast took place August 1 and it has been continued weekly ever since.

In Johannesburg and other cities in South Africa, KDKA'S short-wave transmissions are heard clearly and are occasionally rebroadcast.

The best reception of KDKA'S short-wave transmissions is reported from the Pacific coast. In the territory between Pittsburgh and the western states, however, the short-wave transmissions are scarcely audible.

KDKA'S short-wave transmissions are made on wave lengths of 27 meters, 42.95 meters and 62.5 meters. For the present Westinghouse has abandoned transmissions on a wave length of 2.5 meters, which is considered too low to be of any practical value. All Westinghouse transmitters, irrespective of frequency, are crystal controlled.

EYE ON AERIAL SAVES FANS MANY WORRIES

Chicago, December 17.—(AP)—Ailments are many if the radio set is not given the proper attention. And little troubles may soon develop serious consequences.

The antenna should never be forgotten as it is the source of many difficulties. It must not run parallel to high-tension wires. It should be well insulated and the lead-in free from contact with any grounded object.

An aerial that is too long will make the receiver tune extremely broad. A good remedy is to keep the fundamental wave length of the aerial around 200 meters.

Lightning arrestors becoming shorted are also a source of worry.

DISTRESS SIGNALS CLEAR RADIO PATHS

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Radio signals of distress always have the "right of way." International radio-telegraph regulations expressly prohibit radio emissions in the band from 460 to 550 kilocycles which might drown out emergency calls sent on 500 kilocycles. These calls include signals of distress, alarm, security or urgency.

No charges may be collected for radiotelegrams of immediate general interest which fall within the following general classes:

Messages of distress and replies.

Advices originating from mobile stations regarding the presence of icebergs, derelicts, mines, or announcing cyclones, storms, etc.

Advices announcing sudden phenomena threatening aerial navigation or the sudden appearance of obstacles in airdromes.

Advices originating in mobile stations telling of sudden changes in the location of buoys, operation of lighthouses and apparatus in the buoy service.

NEW SERIES OF TALKS IN RADIO FARM CLASS

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—The department of agriculture will release a new series of radio talks on farm marketing. This series forms the regular Wednesday broadcast of the farm school. The farm school is broadcast by 56 stations each Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Mondays are devoted to crops and soils programs; Wednesdays to farm economics and Fridays to live stock and dairy problems.

The schedule of the talks on marketing follows: December 21, "Standards in Marketing;" December 28, "Inspection and Marketing;" January 4, "Market News;" January 11, "Warehousing an Aid to Marketing;" January 18, "Packages in Marketing;" January 25, "Shipping to Market;" February 1, "Financing Marketing;" February 8, "Advertising in Marketing;" February 15, "Direct Marketing by Producers" (parcel post).

The Monday and Friday programs will continue the same series now in progress. The soils and crops program follows: December 19, "Sweet Potatoes, Proper Care and Better Fields;" December 26, "When and "Sweet Potato Treatment;" January 9, "Value of Improved Pasturage;" January 16, "Measuring and Marketing Farm Timber;" January 23, "Seed Testing;" January 30, "Control of White Pine Blister Rust" (United States except gulf coast. "Preparing and Planting the Farm Gardens") southern United States.

FEDERAL RADIO BODY CLEARING AIR LANES

New York, December 17.—(AP)—Clearer air lanes are in prospect, with a minimum of heterodyning and with broadcast stations less numerous.

Reassignment of the wave lengths of the more powerful transmitters, now in effect, and the prospective elimination of possibly 300 stations, bid fair to accomplish the announced plans of the federal radio commission.

The United States, with 694 stations, long has had a super-abundance of transmitters. The difficulty that has brought much interstation interference dates back to 1927 previous to the passing of the present radio law.

Since the advent of the federal radio commission, a slow process was set in motion to cut down the stations from the more than 700 that existed. Most of the ideas put into use necessitated numerous wave-length changes, including the latest whereby 25 channels were cleared to enable increased distance and more quiet reception.

Much favorable comment came with the inauguration of the clearing plan, while some radio authorities expressed an adverse opinion. These complaints were centered around the fact that a number of cleared channels are used by stations broadcasting chain programs.

Replying, the radio commission pointed out that some of these channels necessarily would got to chain stations because of the quality of their programs. The commission added, however, that these chain programs seemed to be greatly favored by the listening public.

"Should a marked repetition of programs result," the commission said, "and evidence be presented that certain stations were not operated in the maximum interest of the listeners, their position would be weakened in favor of other broadcasters."

With the changes in effect, some improvement was noted in the distance reception in the New York and other areas, while in some respects considerable heterodyning was still noticeable at certain places.

Elimination of possibly 300 transmitters within the year, the radio commission stated, would be taken as a further step to enable full public utilization of radio possibilities. Surviving stations are to be determined by standards set up by the radio law, which are based on public convenience, interest and necessity. Priority in the field is to be a second consideration.

Accomplishment of this plan, it is stated, is to come through a gradual rather than by a sudden process. Included will be a clearing of 25 additional wave-length channels.

Showman Needed To Exploit Broadcast If It Is To Survive

:: LETTER TO MERLIN HALL AYLESWORTH ::

In order that our readers may have the benefit of the balance of the open letter from Gordon Whyte, associate editor of Metronome, to Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting company, in regard to the future of radio broadcasting, The Constitution is publishing herewith, the conclusion of the missive.

Two other installments of the letter have appeared to date and a number of comments have resulted. If you have any comment to make address your letters to the Dial Twister. A number of readers have discussed the letter so far this week. The conclusion is as follows:

Such broadcast programs make one wonder that there are not more like them. The listener's ears are assailed with a mixture of speech and music without coherence, without novelty, and, generally, totally lacking in the most elementary attributes of showmanship. One wonders why this is so, until one is convinced that there is no showman in command.

There seems to be many splendid technicians, there seem to be plenty of good musicians, there seem to be skilful publicity men, there seem to be excellent advertising solicitors to be found in the broadcasting stations.

The one person lacking, and to us, the most important, is the showman. His absence is so marked that when he does happen to drift into the broadcasting station, as in the case of entertainments noted above, he stands out like Cyrano's nose.

From what one hears on the radio one is led to believe that much of the entertainment is produced in a haphazard way and with little or no regard for the commonplaces of showmanship. Else why should one hear the Ballet Egyptien of Luigini, surely a time-worn piece of music, played five times in one week from one of the stations of your chain?

Why is it necessary for one dance orchestra to follow another and broadcast the same numbers as those played by the preceding band?

Why is it that one hears a popular piece of music played and sung as many as four times in one night?

These are faults which anyone with a primary sense of showmanship would correct and they are just the things which are making broadcast listeners say "All radio programs are alike."

Does not the execrable English spoken by many announcers indicate lay supervision? Do not ludicrous misstatements, such as the one recently made by the announcer at a Waldorf-Astoria concert that Fritz Kreisler's "The Old Refrain" was "a charming old Irish melody" make the station ridiculous in the eyes of the knowing? Would a showman tolerate such lapses from the primary principles of showmanship?

Mind you, Mr. Aylesworth, it is not in the spirit of carping criticism that we mention these faults. We are not unforgetful of the many excellent programs which have been presented by such stations as those controlled by you. We are not unmindful of the many events of public importance which have been brought right to the fireside of millions, who otherwise would not have enjoyed them, by such companies as yours. It is because these things have been so well done that we want to see the general level of broadcasting raised.

The plain truth is that radio broadcasting presents many evidences of being self-satisfied and complacent. It looks as though most program directors are convinced that they have reached the pinnacle of broadcasting achievement.

As a matter of fact, the listener is slowly becoming fed up with the same old round of broadcast entertainment and is sensing the want for something different. In our opinion the time has come to nip this in the bud.

At present the listener has hardly become articulate. He is only murmuring. The time will come when he will register his protest by turning off his rheostats and leaving his set unused. That would spell calamity for broadcasting, the keystone of the radio industry. The one thing which will restore the listener's regard for radio, the one thing that will quicken that regard into high satisfaction, is the application of showmanship in generous measure to the broadcast program.

Radio broadcasting may be many things, but first it is entertainment. No one has a higher regard for the educational and cultural features which you have given to the public than we have, but even these have been effective in direct proportion to their entertaining value.

This must ever be to the fore in all programs, else many listeners will seek some other station for entertainment. Entertainment must be in the hands of a showman, if it is to be truly and continuously entertaining. At the present moment radio needs a showman badly.

The radio showman has such possibilities presented to him as never before offered themselves in any entertainment field. He has an audience of millions, he has technical facilities of the highest order, he is able to come to the very homes of his listeners, he has the whole world to choose from for talent, he has the opportunity to instruct as well as to entertain. That is a prospect to attract the greatest of showmen.

It is true that the radio showman must be a man of wide knowledge and elastic sympathy. He must sense the beauty of the Rhapsody in Blue as well as the majestic architectonics of the Bach Mass in B Minor. He must feel as sympathetic to the cadences of the modern foxtrot as to the lilt of Delibes Coppelia. He must know the field of grand opera and write both I Promessi Sposi and Tristran and Isolde. He must know his Gilbert and Sullivan, his DeKoven and his Victor Herbert. He must know the musical comedy of Leslie Stuart and Gus Luders as well as he does those of Vincent Youmans and George Gershwin. He must be as sympathetic to the music of Ravel and DeBussy as he is to Beethoven and Brahms. In other words, he must have a wide taste and a large knowledge of all music.

Your radio showman must have more. He must know the drama, he must know the Frogs of Aristophenes and LesHannetons of Brieux. He must know the comedies of Shaw and the tragedies of Goethe. He must know that W. S. Gilbert wrote a brilliant series of plays, as well as the Libretti for Arthur Sullivan's music. He must know the subtleties of the vaudeville stage and the methods which made Vesta Tilley, Harry Lauder, Arthur Prince, Albert Chevalier, Harry Kernall, James Thornton, Exra Kendall, George Fuller Golden, Belle Baker and other vaudeville artists supreme in this field.

He must know the novels of Dickens, Thackeray and Trollope. He must know the poetry of Burns, Shelley, Kipling and Masefield. He must know that Kant was a philosopher, Faraday was a psychist. In short, he must be a man of wide culture.

Such a man would make radio something to be marveled at from the standpoint of entertainment. Such a man will be hard to find.

Perhaps you will have to be satisfied with something a little less in your showman. He is to be found, though, and radio cries to the high heaven for him.

We are convinced that a showman will come into radio sooner or later. We feel sure that he is necessary right now for the listener and for all those depending on the radio industry for a livelihood. May we hope that these words may speed that day.

Yours faithfully,
GORDON WHYTE,
Associate Editor.

RADIO AND AVIATION DEPARTMENT URGED

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—Sol Bloom, democratic representative from New York, who is sponsoring a bill to establish a department of the air to control government aviation activities, says he plans to include the supervision of radio in the proposed department.

REP. SOL BLOOM.

Mr. Bloom is of the opinion the various radio activities could be better coordinated under a separate department; that in its present status with commerce, the navy, army and other government branches using it in divers ways, there are too many conflicting policies. More separate and active control is needed, he says.

It would be the duty of the radio department, under Mr. Bloom's plan, to encourage and assist in the development of radio inventions which would benefit the public.

WORLD'S LARGEST STATIONS ARE HERE

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—The three mightiest broadcasts in the world are located in the United States.

WEAF at Bellemore, N. Y., KDKA at Pittsburgh and WGY at Schenectady, N. Y., each have a capacity of 50,000 watts and lead the field.

The most powerful stations outside the United States are at Moscow, Russia, and at Motala, Sweden, each operating on 40,000 watts.

A survey made by the electrical equipment division of the department of commerce shows that 685 of the 1,116 stations throughout the world are located in the United States. Europe has 196, North America, outside the United States, 128; South America, 52; Asia, 18; Oceania, 28, and Africa, 9.

Daventry, Eng., has a 16,000-watt station and a station of power ranking above 40,000 watts is reported to be under consideration in the Netherlands.

The biggest station in Canada is one of 1,800 watts at Calgary. In Argentina, among the powerful stations are two of 5,000 watts at Buenos Aires.

In foreign countries governments own and operate 77 stations; associations and institutions, 87; commercial and industrial establishments, 69; broadcasting companies, 127, and private citizens, 33.

Set Building Made Easy

BY WILL SMITH.

Practically every set builder in the country has been eyeing askance the rapid development of the A-C receiver for, unless parts manufacturers stepped into the breach, the man who builds his own would soon be playing with an obsolete and practically useless plaything.

At least, that is the way many of us felt after building the various models and circuits that have been offered for our pleasure and amusement. However, it looks very much as if we now can build our own A-C set.

The kit, to be known as the B-T Power Six, complete in so far as the vital parts are concerned, is being put on the market by the Bremer-Tully Manufacturing company of Chicago. The Alexander-Seewald company of Atlanta, are distributors of the new kit in the southeast.

For selectivity, volume, simplicity and tone quality the whole country recognizes the outstanding superiority of the B-T Power Six. Its world-wide record wherever set-building is known is the same.

By purchasing the parts listed you may change your Power Six to a real A-C job.

The B-T "A" transformer replaces the "A" battery. It possesses the same merit which has distinguished B-T in all their transformer manufacture, and has receptacle for plugging in B-power unit, so that panel switch controls everything.

"A" transformer with eight feet cord and plug, $7.50.

"A. C. Power Six" wiring diagram, full size blue prints and instructions (showing full details of wiring, or changing old set to new), $1.00.

Additional parts required:

1 No. 11 B-T special 25,000-ohm resistance, $2.50.

1 625-ohm fixed resistance, 75 cents.

1 8-ohm center-tap resistance, 35 cents.

1 40-ohm center-tap resistance, 40 cents.

(B-T supply all of the above.)

(A five-point socket for 227 detector required.)

No High Resistance Used.

The trouble due to variable high resistance is eliminated by B-T's new and exclusive method by which no current of any amount flows through the volume control. The largest resistance used is only per cent of that required with previous methods.

Tubes.

The best available tubes for A. C. current are Cunningham or Radiotron. Use four 226 or 326, one 227 or 327 and one type 112 or 171.

A schematic drawing of the new set will be run in these columns next Sunday with instructions on how to build the receiver.

Ford and Glenn Back.

Chicago, December 17.—(AP)—After an absence of nearly a year Ford and Glenn, popular entertainers via the air, are returning to WLS. Known as the "Lullaby Boys," the two come back to be identified exclusively with the station with which they started April 12, 1924, except for occasional tours to other studios.

Small Home Easily Convertible To Two-Family 'Income' Design

Raising the Bungalow Roof Gives Opportunity to Duplicate Interior on Second Floor; Plan Features Efficiency.

BY L. PORTER MOORE,
President Home Owners Institute, Inc.

This plan is an actual and concrete example of a home which may be definitely built with future enlargement in view. It is a creation of William Draper Brickloe, of Easton, Md., member of the American Institute of Architects, and nationally known small house designer, and the plan number is 288-S. The alternate plans give either a convenient and compact small bungalow or an income-producing duplex home, which should bring a substantial revenue for the owner, intended to be the occupant of the lower apartment.

The home is described and the method by which it is transformed set forth in Mr. Brickloe's book, "The Small Home," wherein he says: "Later on we may jack-up the roof and build in a second story precisely like the first, with a balcony porch at the front and a service stairway at the rear. Our tenants will use the front entrance and stairway; we will enter by way of the arched porch. Of course, we may build the entire apartment house right away, if we can finance it." The addition increases the cubic capacity of the plan from 24,000 to 30,000 feet.

Alteration Doubles Capacity.

The second floor lay-out duplicates that of the first floor, sharing the same notable features of convenience and simplicity. Every room is amply lighted and ventilated, and the ease of each apartment's care is well illustrated by the efficient plan scheme of the kitchen. Here a drainboard sink under the window, a built-in, chimney-fed waste incinerator, space for the automatic electric refrigerator, and the adjoining porch and breakfast nook will not only lighten housekeeping tasks but lend interest and pleasure to otherwise dreary hours.

Large closets are an excellent feature of this home. Another item in its planning which will be appreciated in actual occupancy is the wall lay-out, which intelligently provides for furniture where it is best accommodated, eliminating interference with windows, doors and radiators.

The construction is intended to be either terra cotta or concrete block finished with stucco. Metal lath on frame construction would somewhat lower the building cost.

The outline of the specifications recommend by Home Owners' institute to make enduring the livable qualities of this home is as follows:

Masonry—Concrete footing under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be poured concrete or concrete block made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with waterproofing compound. Chimneys of common brick, all flues lined; fire places of selected brick. Provide ash dump with clean-out door in cellar.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney, with receiving hopper doors located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage or trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine, white pine for exterior millwork and interior trim, oak floors, steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications.

Stucco Work—All exterior walls finished with three coats of Portland cement stucco in metal lath, concrete block or hollow tile. Final coat colored and textured as directed.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all finishing hardware for doors and windows, for closets and casework. The contractor will furnish a correct list of hardware and is to put it on in a careful, workmanlike manner. All hardware on exterior openings to be of brass or bronze.

Casement Windows—Steel casement windows may be used at owner's option.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or even wood lath. We suggest you obtain alternate bids on metal lath and wood lath. Insulating lumber or plasterboard may be used if desired by owner.

Metal Work—Gutters, with rainpipes, valleys and flashing to be 16-ounce copper.

Roofing—Roof of slate-surfaced, asbestos or coppercoat shingles, colors as selected. Western red cedar shingles at owner's option.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electric wiring from meter to all outlets including all panel boards, junction boxes and other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Tile Work—Tile floors and wainscot in bathrooms, with built-in china accessories.

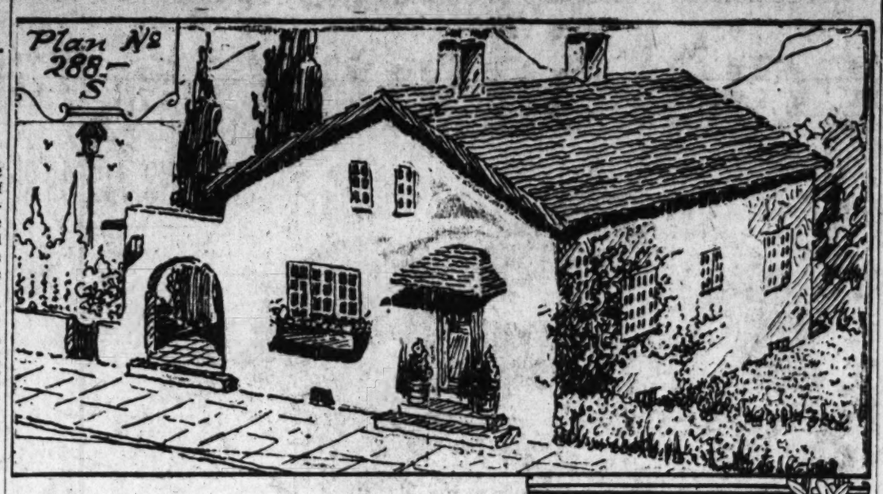

Plumbing—A complete system and fixtures ready to use shall be provided, as shown on plans and in accordance with local regulations. Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hot water heater. Where sewer connections are not available, use of reinforced concrete septic tank recommended.

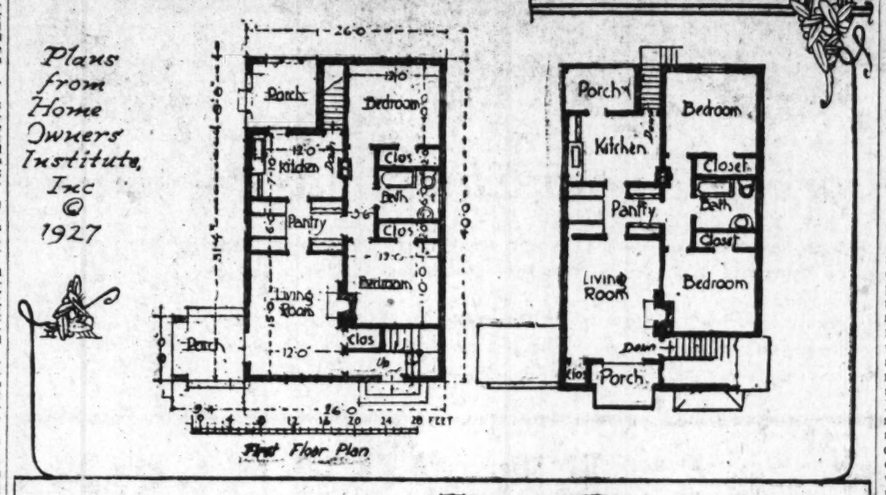

Heating—Steam, hot air or hot water boiler; coal, oil or gas fired.

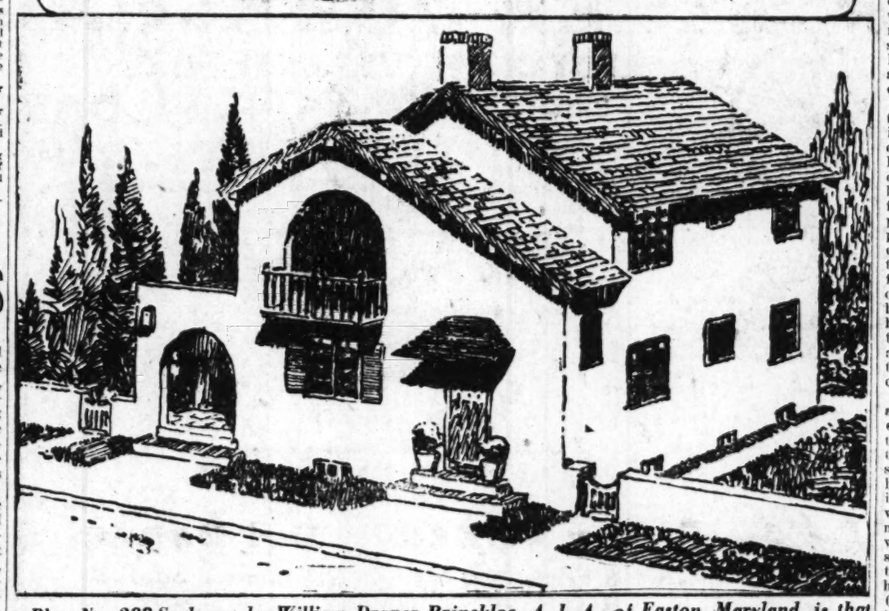

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace, and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

Bungalow Design Which May Be Enlarged

Plan No. 288-S, drawn by William Draper Brinckloe, A. I. A., of Easton, Maryland, is that of a one-story home which may be enlarged into a comfortable two-family design after the original home has outlived its limitations. Complete blueprints and specifications of our home plans, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost

Upholstery Fabrics---How To Select

When selecting upholstery fabrics here are four important points to consider: (1) Color. (2) pattern, (3) durability, (4) texture.

1. Color. All the fabrics in one room, that is to say the floor covering, the draperies and upholstery, should harmonize in color. Here are a few practical suggestions for upholstery fabrics suitable to accompany various color schemes:

With blue as the dominant hue in color scheme:

Two pieces in blue, or better, two tones of blue. One piece in pattern showing blue, yellow, rose and related colors. One piece in solid rose or two tones of red. One in stripe of blue, gold and rose. One piece in yellow (gold, cream or straw color).

With mulberry dominant: Two pieces in mulberry—plain, two tones or striped. One piece in pattern—mulberry, soft green, yellow, orchid, etc. One piece in light green of two tones or green. One piece of gold or dull yellow. One piece in stripe of mulberry and associated colors.

When rose is dominant: Two pieces in rose—plain, two tones or stripes. One piece in green. One piece in pattern; rose, green, yellow and orchid.

When green is dominant: Two pieces in green, plain or two tones or green. One piece in pattern—green, red yellow, etc. One piece in red or two tones of red. One piece in yellow, or stripe of yellow with other associated colors. One piece in orchid.

2. Pattern. Some of the upholstery fabrics in every living room should be figured. If there is already much pattern in the other element of the room—for instance, the walls and ruf, or the draperies and rug—then the pattern in chair and couch should be small, and most of the other chairs should have plain coverings. But remember that a stripe will contrast with both the plain and floral fabrics and can be used when other figured materials are taboo. And its tailored smartness adds to a room what the French call "du cachet," that is to say, a very individual touch, expressive of good taste, refinement and distinction. Obviously, the pattern on chair coverings should be in scale with the size of the chair, small geometric patterns being best suited to slender furniture, such as Sheraton and Duncan Phyfe, while larger figures are more appropriate for wing chairs, couches and cogswell chairs.

3. Durability. This is the point that I wish to emphasize, as through ignorance or plain human love of color, one often sacrifices it to mere looks. In reality, neither beauty nor durability need be sacrificed if one knows the wearing quality of the different fabrics, and those who must practice economy will thus be able to purchase beauty for as long a period of time as may be consistent with the money invested. It is evident that fabrics which combine the maximum of beauty with the maximum of durability represent a considerable outlay; but if one can afford to pay the price, these fabrics are well worth having as, on account of their long service, they turn out to be cheaper than the other.

First Group. Beauty and Serviceability: Everybody knows mohair, everybody has mohair; usually plain taupe, rose taupe, brown or mulberry; this is the most durable of all upholstery fabrics and can stand even the hard usage to which it is submitted in hotels and Pullman cars. Some women are afraid of it on account of moths; but a few simple precautions will eliminate all fears in that respect: (1) Keep your mohair furniture exposed to the light, as moths hunt dark corners to lay their eggs; (2) brush the upholstery, especially the seams, folds and corners regularly every two weeks as this will destroy the eggs before they hatch out; (3) spray the furniture occasionally with one of the so-called moth-proofing liquids which, though powerless to kill the eggs and larvae, at least gives the fabric a slight odor which the moth dislikes and which weeps it from settling there to lay its eggs.

More pleasing of texture and pattern is mohair frise or frieze (customarily pronounced free-zay, although the dictionary makes it rhyme with sneeze). It, like plain mohair, is made from the hair of the angora goat, and though costly, represents 20 years' worth of service and quality-appearance.

Frise is also made of linen (linen frise), and comes in a great variety of colors; the best qualities rank with mohair frise in price and durability; but lower grades are made and priced accordingly.

Another wonderful fabric is wool tapestry; the best hand-woven quality outwears even mohair, but is expensive. Other grades are lower priced and come in very handsome patterns and colors; don't overlook these next time you buy upholstery furniture.

Third group, less expensive fabrics. Cotton tapestries are often developed in small geometric figures, while some have floral figures in charming colors on a light background. These fabrics cost from $3 a yard up, and the better qualities are very durable. Cotton velours which is often combined with the latter, is also desirable, fairly durable and inexpensive.

Ratine (pronounced rat-i-nay) is a loosely-woven rough-textured fabric of wool or cotton. Its colors and patterns are usually good and its durability is in proportion to its price.

Rep comes in woolen, cotton or rayon weaves, in many varied colorings and in stripes. It stands for low cost and long wear. The newest weaves have possibilities that you may not suspect and I advise you to investigate into them. Rep is a good fabric for portieres where cretonne is the drapery fabric.

Denim, like rep, has been very much improved lately as to color and pattern, and is equally durable and inexpensive.

Printed fabrics: Cretonne, glazed, semi-glazed or plain chintz, toile de Jouy, hand-blocked linen, are very much the vogue for hangings, slip covers and tailored upholstery, by reason of their crisp colors and smart patterns. Genuine toile patterns, because they were originally designed by artists, are always desirable for slip covers, hangings, wall panels and for the end-boards of beds. They are suitable in early American, English and French interiors. Some new designs, however, are purely American in character, representing Independence hall, Mount Vernon, George Washington crossing the Delaware, and others; they are priced as low as 60 cents a yard and if used tactfully have a quaintly decorative charm.

4. Texture. All the fabrics in one room should harmonize in texture as they do in coloring.

Faience Tile Walls and Floors Supreme in Beauty, Durability

In addition to being colorful and beautiful, faience tile walls and floors in the home have the supreme quality of absolute desirability.

Comparative tests by university engineering laboratories have shown that well-made faience tile will far outwear most types of stone.

GORDON ST. BAPTIST TO PRESENT PAGEANT

"The Adoration Pageant" will be presented by the Gordon Street Baptist Sunday school in the church auditorium at 8 o'clock next Thursday evening, December 22. The pageant is a beautiful adaptation of the Christmas story and will be accompanied with music by a large chorus choir and a junior choir, it is announced.

At the completion of the pageant, members from each department of the Sunday school will present "White Gifts to the King," in the form of an offering for the church building fund. The departmental superintendents have prepared unique ways for the offering to be presented and each will be in white.

Friction Devices Balance Window Without Weights

Many firms now make several varieties of sash balances or sash sustainers which operate by friction against the casing, instead of the usual sash cord or chain with its necessary weights and pulleys.

The devices are usually constructed of non-corrosive material, and the friction is maintained by a spring which presses outward. Shrinkage is accommodated by the same means.

Bakelite Safe Material For Home Electric Unit

Moulded switch plates and receptacle plates of bakelite are increasing in popularity for the home as their advantages in safety, durability and good appearance become known.

Bakelite being a non-conductor, shocks to the user of the switch are prevented in the case of short circuit, and the material is entirely proof against the effects of time and atmosphere.

Woman 101 Dies.

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 17.—(AP) Two weeks after she had celebrated her one hundred and first birthday, Mrs. Ophia Maul, of German birth, who had lived in the United States seventy-six years without learning to speak English, died here today.

Contrasting Shutter Gives Life To Color Scheme of the House

It is frequently the case that when the home is first built necessarily stringent financial limitations prevent the incorporation of many features or tion from storms.

The architectural type which best embellishments which later can add much to the livability and attractiveness of the house.

An embellishment of this sort which may seem, offhand, non-important is that of outside blinds or shutters, nowadays more useful for their addition to architectural balance and interest than for their original purpose of protection lends itself to the addition of the shutter is the colonial, but if proportion permits shutters are quite as appropriate on any modern adaptation of design.

The colonial shutters may be of either the louvre type or the solid blind of batten construction, usually pierced with some sort of characteristic design. Diamond, crescent, pine tree, candelstick and many other designs symbolic of the colonial era are popular and appropriate, but an individual design is probably best. Thus, one householder has pierced his shutters with the outline of a sloop, as he is a yachting enthusiast.

Probably the only considerations to be watched in the matter of installing shutters are good construction and appropriateness. Appropriateness taken in the matter of tasteful adherence to truth. For instance, the familiar abomination of individual shutters attached to the outside window in a grouped unit is one of the most common evidences of lack of discrimination in home decoration. It is axiomatic, in this light, that ornamentation should have its foundation in good usage. One shutter on the outside of the unit can serve no possible purpose.

The usual color scheme for the shutter is a simple green, contrasting pleasantly with the usual white of the colonial house. However, a declaration of freedom in color is now in vogue and many rather startling hues are used for shutters.

The shutter is particularly effective where long reaches of wall are pierced by comparatively small windows. They relieve the monotony of the expanse and accentuate the architectural values of the window.

Gallery Gets Fund.

Washington, December 17.—(AP)—A donation of $100,000 has been received by the Corcoran gallery of art here from Mrs. William Andrews Clark, widow of the former Montana senator, to defray expenses incident to the organization of the institution's biennial exhibitions of contemporary American oil paintings.

It is neglect, not weather, that is more often responsible for the rapid decline of your buildings.

Mostly, it is negligence in not selecting good quality paints.

BAZEMORE NEARS 16TH YEAR AS MORTICIAN

T. C. Bazemore, president of the T. C. Bazemore company of widely-known funeral directors, this month is completing his sixteenth year of service in this particular line and is receiving many tokens of the high esteem in which he is held by Atlantans.

Each year of his service has been marked by the inauguration by Mr. Bazemore of some new and distinctive improvement in equipment and service, these being the result of a close and intensive study of problems of the mortician and a keen insight into the finer details of the profession.

Mr. Bazemore heads the company bearing his name at Capitol square and Washington street and offers a modern and completely equipped funeral home which attends to every detail of the proper handling of funerals.

In addition, the company provides the most up-to-date ambulance service. It is open day and night and gives prompt answer to calls of every kind.

SAMARITANS TO HOLD HOLIDAY SCRIPT DANCE

A special holiday script dance will be given from 9 to 12 o'clock Thursday night by the Good Samaritan club at Communidad hall, Ivie and Gordon streets, it was announced Saturday. Music will be supplied by the Atlanta Bell Hops orchestra. H. J. Bridgewater and Newman Laser are on the committee in charge. Dr. and Mrs. George Brown, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gillett and Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Taylor are the patrons and patronesses of the dance.

THROWER BUILDING POPULARITY GROWS

With purchase of the old Austell building by M. L. Thrower, the change of its name to the Thrower building, and completion of an extensive campaign of remodeling and improving which has made the structure more attractive and convenient from basement to top floor, popularity of the building among business concerns is rapidly growing.

This was the announcement of the management Saturday, which pointed to the Thrower building's central location, new elevator service, excellent management, expert janitor service, daylight rooms, generous heat, basement garage and maid service as features that are drawing many prominent firms and individuals to the structure.

A number of rooms which have been divided into small space compartments now are available, the management stated, together with a few large rooms. M. L. Thrower, 6 Forsyth street, N. W., is agent for the Thrower building.

FREEMAN TO LEAD SPECIAL ST. MARK'S SERVICES FOR DEAF

Rev. S. M. Freeman, evangelist to the deaf from the North Georgia conference, will preach at St. Mark's church at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. He resumes his series of services after his recent recovery from a serious operation.

His subject will be the dedication of the temple by Solomon. Text: "I Was Glad When They Said Unto Me, Let Us Go Into the House of the Lord."

The entire service will be in the sign language, song, prayer, sermon, without the utterance of a sound, in the beautifully expressive signs of the deaf.

All the deaf people and their friends are invited to Mr. Freeman's services, which he will conduct regularly now each Sunday morning.

St. Mark's church has featured this work for some years past with wonderful results in the conversion of the deaf, nearly all of whom now in the city are church members. A Bible class is conducted as part of the regular Sunday school work.

ANNIVERSARY EVENT FOR GREENBERG & CO.

Sam R. Greenberg & Company, funeral directors, now are celebrating the first anniversary of their removal into their new business home at 95 Forrest avenue, N. E., where the popular head of the company is receiving messages of good will from his many friends and patrons.

Sam R. Greenberg, who has held the office of president of the Southeastern Funeral Directors' association and who is prominent in many business and civic enterprises, is in charge of the company and is one of the most experienced morticians in Atlanta.

Long engaged in this work, he formerly was president and secretary of the old Greenberg & Bond company. Associated with him is Pat Bloomfield, one of the best-known morticians in the city.

"We now are prepared to render service that is better than ever," Mr. Greenberg said in speaking of the anniversary event. "Our funeral home is one of the most modern to be found anywhere, and in addition we offer ambulance service of the finest type."

BICYCLE DEMAND REPORTED HEAVY BY BERRY COHEN

Following receipt recently of a solid carload and a half of bicycles, velocipedes and junior cycles, Berry Cohen, well-known operator of the bicycle shop that bears his name at 116-118 Edgewood avenue, Saturday reported record sales during the past ten days.

Mr. Cohen and his brother, Sol Cohen, whose bicycle shop at 816 Gordon street, S. W., serves the West End section, has a big stock of beautiful Iver-Johnson bicycles, velocipedes and junior cycles and this week are expecting a continuance of the heavy Christmas demand.

"Our stock of Iver-Johnson wheels in every color and style makes a double appeal to every body and girl," Berry Cohen, who, with his brother, is a native Atlantan, said Saturday. "In addition to the pleasure of the gift, one of our wheels brings with it the assurance that the owner can drop into our shop and get adjustments made free and learn all about his or her machine. We cordially invite the general public to visit us before Christmas and inspect our wonderful stock."

HANFORD MACNIDER LEAVES BY PLANE FOR WASHINGTON

After a night's rest in Atlanta, Hanford MacNider, assistant secretary of war, hopped off for Washington, D. C., Saturday morning in his biplane, "The Spirit of Unrest." Mr. MacNider was en route from a visit to Texas army posts to his headquarters at the capitol. The plane was piloted by Captain R. G. Erwin.

RUDOLPH S. ADLER HEADS ARCHITECTS' EXAMINING BOARD

Election of new officers for the ensuing year was announced Saturday by the Georgia state board for the examination and registration of architects, which passes upon the qualifications of entrants into the profession and provides certain regulations covering architectural work within the state.

Rudolph S. Adler, of Hentz, Adler & Shultze, was elected president of the board after serving for some time as secretary. Philander P. Scroggs, of Augusta, was elected vice president, and Eugene C. Wachendorff, of Atlanta, secretary. Other members of the board are G. Lloyd Preacher, the retiring president, and E. O. Smith, of Columbus.

Mr. Adler's firm, formerly Hentz, Reid & Adler, is one of the most widely known in the south. Hal F. Hentz, its head, is president of the Atlanta chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

TICKETS ON SALE IN ANY QUANTITY AT FOUR FOR 30

Street car tickets in any quantity are available at the rate of four for 30 cents, according to announcement Saturday by the Georgia Power company, which issued the following statement:

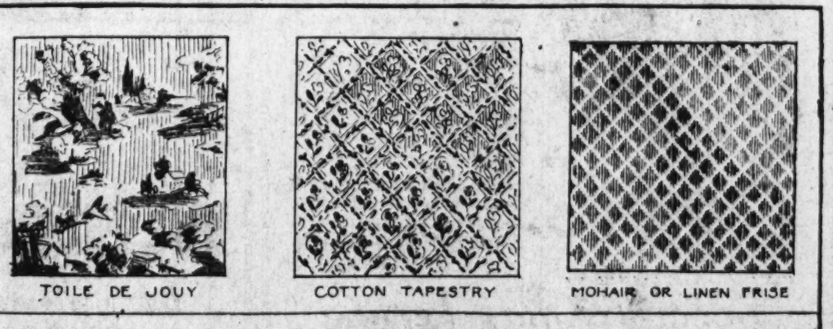

"Due to some misunderstanding, the impression seems to prevail that 7 1-2-cent tickets may be bought only in blocks of four for 30 cents on the street cars and that it would be impossible to buy tickets in larger quantities except at company offices. The 7 1-2-cent tickets may be purchased in a minimum block of four for 30 cents, or as many blocks of four as desired on street cars or at company offices.

"The company offices are located at 76 Marietta street, 59 1-2 Broad street, 821 Gordon street, 1162 Euclid avenue, 979 Peachtree street, 3055 Peachtree road and 142 Sycamore street, Decatur."

Chief To Visit U. S.

Forum Meeting of Music Club Will Be Held December 21

The "Forum Series" of the Atlanta Music club, Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president, will be lead by Mrs. Jane Mattingly in the regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Elsas, 1403 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., Wednesday morning, December 21, at 11 o'clock. Mrs. Mattingly will be assisted on the program by Mrs. Benjamin Elsas, soprano; Miss Eda Bartholomew, pianist, and Miss Rubye Head, pianist. The subject, "The Polyphonic Period," is the third chapter of the season's study course in music understanding, "Epochs in Musical Progress," by Clarence Hamilton and adopted by the National Federation of Music Clubs. Mrs. Mattingly has given considerabl. research to the text as well as to the illustrative compositions which promises a program of rare interest.

Miss Head will open the program with Bach's "Bourree," from "Third 'Cello Suite" and "Two Part Invention, No. 8." Mrs. Elsas will sing Handel's "Angels Ever Bright and Fair" and Bach's "My Heart Ever Faithful." There will be two famous numbers, "Largo" from "Xerxes," and "Hallelujah Chorus," from "The Messiah," reproduced on Victor records. Miss Bartholomew will close the program with Bach's "Fantasia and Fugue in A minor."

At the conclusion of the musical program, the open forum will be held when every member is invited to ask questions on the subject and anyone present may render the answer. The informal discussion is one of the special features of the "Forum Series," of which Mrs. De Los L. Hill is the general chairman. Everyone holding a gray membership card is entitled to attend. The method of penalizing absentees has been abolished. Guests may attend and admission tickets for 50 cents may be procured at the door.

BLUE-RIBBON FICTION

by LAWRENCE PERRY

Chaperoning a Subdeb Is a Strong Woman's Job, and Lorna Was Only a Junior at Vassar Herself, and in Love, So She Was Handicapped.

"Go ahead and dance," she said darkly. "I'm going to knit for awhile, I've had quite enough—quite."

AVICE WALTON looked about the car after the porter had stowed various impedimenta. At length, in the course of a poised, commanding, in short, a thoroughly flapperish survey, her eyes, which were gray, became fixed.

"Lorna"—she turned toward her cousin in the chair facing hers, leaning forward, whispering excitedly—"change seats with me, will you, like a duck? This darned thing won't swing around."

"Why?" Lorna Mulford surveyed the other girl sedately.

"Why, because"—Avice made some device of readjusting the position of a hat box to the end that she might remain in the aisle—"because he is sitting back there, facing you."

"Who?" Lorna glanced down the car and met the eyes of a man of perhaps thirty.

He was personable. Averting her face as quickly as she did, Lorna caught this impression—distinctly personable. And, moreover, in those eyes she had caught a most obvious and expressive twinkle.

This annoyed her, because it was so clear that the maneuvering of her cousin, her whispering, and Lorna's involuntary glance in his direction had been interpreted as indicating interest in him.

He was the sort of man, she apprehended, who was accustomed to command all the feminine interest that was good for him. And that twinkle was, so she would have it, more than a bit satirical.

"Please, Lorna."

Lorna frowned.

"Avice, I want you to sit down and behave yourself. You're making a spectacle. Sit down in your own chair, and for the love of Pete act as though you had seen a man or two in your life."

"Lorna!" Avice eyed her with menace. "I have half a mind to sit on the arm of your chair."

Lorna smiled, painfully as one who, not without difficulty, is sympathizing with the puppyish vagaries of youth.

"You'll do exactly as I tell you; if you don't, the bargain is off and I'll leave you cold. You don't imagine for a moment that I'm stuck on this job, do you?"

Avice, intimidated, became docile at once.

"All right, Aunt Mim." She made a little face and sat down. "Of course, the trouble is you want to look at him yourself."

"O, do I, indeed! Who is this middle aged gentleman who has excited you?" Lorna smiled over this sentence; recalling that sardonic twinkle, it rather pleased her.

"You think you put over a fast one, don't you? Well, you didn't; He isn't middle aged. And if he is, what difference does it make? Anyway, he isn't. He is John Cumberland, Alice Cumberland's uncle—one of those uncles, you know. Oceans of money and"—Avice's eyes widened—"and he's a bachelor."

"Really?" Lorna yawned ostentatiously.

"Yes, really. I met him when Alice gave that house party at Greenwich during Easter vacation. He just dropped in. He danced with several of the girls—danced with me twice. So I know, Lorna, if you'll just change seats I can make him remember me." Struck by a new thought, she half turned, looking over her shoulder.

"It's all right, isn't it, to bow to a man; that is, if you've really met him—and I really have, you know—even if he doesn't show signs of recalling me. Perhaps he is diffident, or—"

Lorna laughed.

"Diffident! How little you know about men, my child."

Avice, her lips pursed thoughtfully, studied her cousin.

"Do you know," she remarked at length, "you're wonderful! You not only look like a perfectly good chaperon but you talk like one. Listen, do you feel like one?"

"Really, I do," Lorna was frowning. "Actually, I feel ages old. And do you know, my dear, viewing you as I have been doing, from a chaperon's angle, you do seem a silly, trifling, and inconsequential little thing. Am I like you, I wonder—normally?"

"I don't know what you are, but I suspect you're going to be a hideous bore." Avice picked up a magazine, turning the pages with irritable rapidity.

"You brought all this on yourself, anyway."

To this Avice made no reply. Nor could satisfactory reply have been made, for certainly this present situation was all of her own making.

An inmate of Miss Standish's famous school for girls, which stands among the venerable elms and mellow stone walls of a Connecticut village, she had been invited by the—just at present—man among men, Tommy Forbes, a junior, for the house party week-end at his university.

There must, of course, be a chaperon, Miss Standish's school being what it was, and Avice had engaged a maiden aunt, Miss Mimosa Mulford, for the role. As fateful chance had it, Miss Mulford had fallen ill the preceding Wednesday and had wired her niece that it would be impossible for her to serve. Avice's parents were abroad, and those who in the past had chaperoned the girl, remembering vividly the experience, had with one accord made excuses when they received the girl's frantic wires.

So at length, as a final expedient, she had called Vassar, where Lorna was a junior, on the telephone, pleading in a tearful voice that her cousin exercise her lovely nature as well as her not inconsiderable dramatic talent by masquerading as chaperon.

From the very first the idea had intrigued Lorna as a lark of magnitude and possibilities. It appealed especially, inasmuch as at least a score of her classmates would be at the university in question over the week-end; inasmuch, also, as she herself would have gone had she cared the least bit for either of the two men from whom she had received invitations.

So, thoroughly committed to the project, she had run down to New York on Thursday evening and early the following morning had visited Mendez, that renowned hairdresser, that inimitable magician, who, as is well known, can deftly apply to thirty-odd the semblance of twenty or less, and, of course, vice versa.

When Mendez had slipped the transformation coiffure over her brown shingled hair—a transformation parted modestly in the middle and in back seductively knotted; when she had slipped into an elder sister's surplice gown with its white collar and cuffs, she had become forthwith some one, so far as appearances went, other than herself.

It was all very interesting, especially so in view of the position of advantage it gave her in facing this satirical person, this John Cumberland, whom she and Avice had so amused. Posing as his compeer in dignity, in position, in years, she could look at him casually if she wished without girlish reservation, without laying herself open to consideration as a silly young thing flirtatiously inclined.

He had poise, certainly, and lithe physique which was most attractive in a man of his advanced years. His hair was light, crinkling at the sides, his features suggesting that in his youth he had neglected neither strenuous athletics nor equally rigorous scholastic pursuits.

"Excuse me just a minute, Lorna," Avice pushed by her and, rising, novel in hand, Lorna was horrified to see Avice walking slowly down the aisle, obviously killing time until Cumberland should look up from his paper, which, in fact, he did before she arrived at his chair.

Lorna saw her pause and nod, presumably smiling; saw a look of polite attention dawn upon the man's face; saw it broaden into a smile as Avice spoke, evidently recalling herself to him. Lorna saw him arise, saw him shake hands, saw his eyes twinkling as before, with amusement.

Then, as Cumberland gestured toward the next chair, which happened to be vacant, Avice sat down.

At least Avice might have had the decency to bring Cumberland to her and introduce him, even granting that chivalry of the sort was uncommon among the modern sisterhood. But no, the brazen little snippet was rattling away, features, hands, head, everything moving in accompaniment to her line.

And Cumberland sat at his ease, observing her, occasionally venturing a remark, his eyes always twinkling.

And then, as the train neared its destination, came Avice's grand gesture. She brought Cumberland to Lorna's chair.

"This," she said, her eyes blazing maliciously, "is Aunt Mim—Miss Mulford, you know. She is chaperoning me."

Cumberland nodded gravely.

"Miss Avice was telling me how strict you are." His voice was deep, rich, pleasant. His eyes were not twinkling now. Girls have intuitions, perhaps not so precisely accurate as tradition would have it, but they have them. Lorna had them and she caught something from Cumberland's expression and manner that was subtly interesting. So her ill humor vanished at once. She smiled composedly at the man.

"I suppose she didn't tell you how necessary it is."

"No, she didn't." As Avice sat down, Cumberland balanced himself upon the arm of her chair. "Do you know, I am deeply interested. I didn't know chaperons existed any more—except, of course, the lay figures you see at college dances."

Lorna, who had no desire to pose as a curiosity, raised her chin with a toss, a little habit she had.

"Well, as you see, they do." Then she launched a shaft. "Are you going to one of the dances?"

"I?" Cumberland started. 'Miss Mulford, my college dancing days ended just eight years ago." Then he laughed. 'But thanks for the compliment. No, they're having a meeting of the rowing committee tonight and I'm one of the graduate members."

"O, yes." Lorna, feeling very mature and not at all disliking this encounter upon the common ground of maturity, raised her hand with a slow gesture, idly fingering one of her earrings, as she had seen her mother do. And then she borrowed a remark of her mother's.

"I think it is so nice when men keep up the interests of their college days. Don't you think men stay younger in thought than women? I've always fancied that is the reason why most women seem older than men of the same age."

Cumberland smiled, choosing to be gallant.

"That being so, you most certainly must have stayed young in thought."

"O, Aunt Mim is a regular cut-up, you've no idea," interjected Avice mockingly.

Lorna darted a glance at her.

"I'm sure she is," laughed Cumberland. "In fact, the ideal chaperon."

"I hope you'll get Avice's opinion as to that later," said Lorna grimly.

Cumberland glanced out the window, feeling the pressure of the brakes.

"Well, here we are." He leaned down and seized one of Lorna's bags, summoning the porter with a nod. "I'll take these two and the porter can manage the rest."

"You're very good, Mr. Cumberland." Lorna was pleased that he had taken care to grasp her luggage, leaving Avice's to the porter. She liked his height as he strode ahead of her, the set of his goodly shoulders, and the way his hair crisped in the back.

Among the squads of eager students waiting on the platform of the junction station was Tommy Forbes, who caught sight of Avice at once and rushed up to her.

"Hello, Avice. This is great, eh?"

"O, Tommy, it's grand!" She nodded toward Lorna. "This is Aunt Mim, Tommy—Miss Mulford, you know. And this is Mr. Cumberland."

Lorna smiled formally as Tommy bowed and then withdrew a few steps with Cumberland.

"Tommy" — Avice's voice was troubled—"I know it's awful. I knew what you'd say when I wired you. But I had to bring her or stay at school."

"Sure," Tommy darted an inimical glance at the chaperon. "Well, come ahead. I got my car over here."

Cumberland carried Lorna's bags to the motor and stowed them, Tommy performing similar service for Avice. When everything was snug and Avice had hopped into the front seat, leaving Lorna among the baggage in the rear, Tommy turned to the man.

"I can run you up to the college, if you don't mind crowding in among the grips, sir."

Cumberland glanced at Lorna, settled among the luggage, hesitated, then shook his head.

"No, thanks. The train is leaving in a minute or two." He bowed, raising his eyebrows at Lorna. "Please don't be too hard on your niece."

Lorna turned to watch him through the rear window as Forbes started the car. She had liked him. He had that assured, unostentatous poise that years and experience alone give, and yet had not reached an age when youthful interests have paled and waning athletic vigor has left no alternative to plodding meticulously over the golf links.

The ideal age, she thought, and had long thought so. Now he had gone and she would not see him again. And if he did she would be herself, therefore not greatly important to him—and there would be that amused twinkle in his eyes, which on the train she had caused to disappear. Why, she wondered, was life like that?

Tommy Forbes sprang from the car as he brought it to a halt in front of his club. A youth in flannels, whose face was thin and humorous, came running down the walk to help him with the baggage.

"Hello, Spuggy!" Avice hailed him excitedly, springing from the car almost into his arms. Spuggy was one of those boys who never bring a girl of their own to proms and parties, but have a rare time with those whom their friends bring.

"Look here, Avice, hurry up! Tommy and I have got our canoe in commission. I've commandeered Alice Kuhn and we'll drift up to Kingston."

"Gorgeous! Just wait until I go up to the room——"

"Avice," Lorna smiled deprecatingly as her cousin turned to her. "I'm very sorry. But I'm afraid you'll have to lie down this afternoon."

"Lor—I mean Aunt Mim! What's the idea? Of course I am going out on the lake. And I'm not going to lie down this afternoon."

"O, yes, you are, my dear. You'll be up until all hours tonight and you'll have to rest."

"O Miss Mulford. I say!" Tommy Forbes confronted Lorna and his eyes were so tragic that the girl's vengeful mood broke under the humor of the situation.

"Just a second, Tommy." Lorna nodded to Avice. "Come here, will you, my child, I want to speak to you alone." When Avice, sullen, wondering, had walked a few feet aside with her chaperon, Lorna turned to her, whispering fiercely.

"Look here, old thing. On the train you broke a solemn promise not to disobey me. You picked up the finest man I've seen, ever, and kept him to yourself until the trip was almost over. I owe you one for that, and—"

"You wouldn't have met him at all if it hadn't been for me," returned Avice desperately.

"That is—yes, that is quite true and it saves you. Go ahead on the lake, but let me tell you, if you don't mind my slightest word hereafter I'll make you think you've drawn a dill pickle for a chaperon. Do you hear me?"

But Avice was running joyously toward the two collegians, proclaiming her success with dear old Aunt Mim.

At the dinner hour the chairman of the house party committee, a stout, serious faced young man, who introduced himself to Lorna as Mr. Callender, told her that the chaperons would have a table to themselves and that it would be nice if she would come with him and meet her colleagues.

There were three of them of assorted type, all mothers of members of the club and officially selected by the club.

One of the chaperons, a Mrs. Watkins, was short and stout. She had black hair tinged with gray, snapping coal black eyes, and a crackling laugh. Then there was Mrs. Druse Pitcairn, a Philadelphia society leader, who was doing all this solely for her son and wanted her fellow chaperons to know it, and finally, Mrs. Elderkin, a very majestic, and commanding sort. In their company Lorna felt—and doubtless appeared—very much like a steam yacht in a squadron of battleships.

She was quiet throughout the meal and so were the others.

They had hardly finished when the committee descended upon the lower floor, having the house men rustle the furniture out of the way and preparing the rooms for the dance. Lorna joined the crowd of girls going up the stairs to dress and met Avice at the door of their room.

"Did you see me at dinner, Lorna?"

"I heard you. You have the most brassy laugh, Avice. It seemed to annoy Mrs. Pitcairn a lot. Must you do it, Avice?"

"Rats! I should worry about Mrs. Pitcairn. Rufus Pitcairn's mother, I suppose. Well, he's a sad one, too. Do you know what they call him?—Goofus. Isn't that priceless?" Avice began excitedly to tear off her frock before Lorna had closed the door. "What are you going to do tonight, Lorna?"

"I believe," said the girl acidly, "that the chaperons are to play bridge—until probably four o'clock tomorrow morning, if not later. Listen, Avice; I don't know what you can do to pay me back for this; but you'll have to do something. Do you get that?"

"Of course I do and you're a dear and everything that's wonderful. If it will please you any, all the boys are saying that you're the youngest and most beautiful chaperon they ever saw."

"Humph!" Lorna went to the closet and took down a black lace frock, another loan of her sister's, and then emptied a pair of long, jet earrings from a box. "I don't suppose, by any chance, you asked Mr. Cumberland to drop into this dance?"

"No, he doesn't belong to the Catalpa. He's a member of Star and Garter up the street. He won't go there, either. Old grads duck these house parties. They're not wanted. Look here, Lorna, I wish you'd get over this Cumberland idea. You know a middle aged man who looks youthful is like a mealy apple, if you get what I mean."

"Don't be vulgar, Avice. And as it happens, he isn't middle aged. And I don't know what you're talking about, anyway."

Thereafter Lorna's humor suffered further lesion and the fact that they said she looked stunning in her transformation, her earrings, and the black evening gown whose skirt was nearly a foot longer than she was accustomed to wear, did not ease her mood.

Nor was there any cause for amelioration later as she sat at a card table, tucked in a corner of an oriel in the big club lounge, her mind not half upon the game as about her swirled and whirled a scene in which she had so often participated and in which she should be participating now had not a penchant for play acting and love of extraordinary situations overcome her common sense.

Shortly before eleven o'clock, when Lorna had thrice been admonished by Mrs. Druse Pitcairn and once by her partner, Mrs. Watkins, and she was at the point of screaming, word went through the club that the disciplinary dean would shortly appear in his course of a round of the various clubs, a gesture of the university to the end that all might know that the eye of authority was not closed upon this week-end.

Hastily one or two youngsters who had brought Bacchus to the aid of Terpsichore were hustled outdoors and locked up in motor cars and the dance went on.

It was not a false alarm. The dean, a short, ample man of judicial mien with humorously pendulous lips, arrived within ten minutes of the receipt of the warning. He stood at the broad entrance to the lounge smiling benignly, attended obsequiously by the chairman of the committee.

Lorna turned to look at him just as he was joined by another man, evidently his companion. Hastily returning her attention to the table, she committed the heinous fault of trumping her partner's trick. For the other man was John Cumberland.

"O dear"—Lorna smiled pathet-

What Has Happened to Justice?

Killing of Maine Guide in the North Woods Went Unavenged — Bean Murder Mystery Never Solved

THREE shots echoed through the north woods at Haines' Landing, Maine, one afternoon in October five years ago. The shots killed Otis Bean, stalwart guide, and gave Maine one of its deepest murder mysteries, a mystery which to this day remains unsolved.

Had holdup men slain Bean as he came home with a sack of mail? Or was his wife the slayer?

Justice never could discover. Two youths, seen near the Bean home before and after the shooting, were arrested, but never tried. Mrs. Ethel Bean, the widow, was brought to trial, yet so flimsy was the state's case against her that she was freed by a directed verdict before her lawyers could put in a defense. The widow insisted that she had been the victim of mere talk.

In Maine they have their theories. But the law can do nothing. The killing of Otis Bean remains unavenged.

Maine's outstanding murder mystery had its setting in the great hunting country about the Rangeley lakes in northwestern Maine. The victim was Otis A. Bean, one of the best known guides in that section of the country. Three persons stood accused at different times of the crime, but all three went free. The third to be accused was the victim's widow.

Otis Bean, 37 years old, stalwart, romantic man of the woods, who for twelve years had guided sportsmen through the forests and streams of the Rangeleys, was shot to death October 6, 1922, near his home at Haines' Landing. Three shots were fired and all of them found their mark. Justice found out what weapon fired those shots, but the hand that pulled the trigger—justice did not discover that.

Mrs. Ethel Bean, the slain man's widow.

In addition to being a guide, Bean was also a mail carrier employed by Weston Toothaker, owner of the Pleasant Island camps on Mooselookmeguntic lake, one of the Rangeleys. On the day in question he had come in from the lakes in his boat with a sack of mail to Haines' Landing.

Dusk was falling as Bean entered his automobile truck and drove to his garage, about 800 feet from his home. The neighborhood was deserted, for sportsmen who had frequented the camps and the surrounding country had gone back to their homes. The guide jumped from his truck and went to open the garage door.

J. W. Wheaton, one of the suspected youths.

Three Shots

Suddenly the silence was punctuated by a shot—then two more shots in quick succession.

The shots were heard by Bob Martin, an old time guide, who was tramping toward his own home not far distant. Later Martin stated that at the sound of the first shot he had thought nothing of the matter, but that when he heard the other reports he stopped in his tracks, then hurried to the scene.

Martin found Bean sprawled before the door of the garage, the motor of his car still purring. He saw at once that the man had been shot. Martin scanned the fast-gathering gloom.

Up the road a short distance, Martin saw the silhouettes of two men. The guide pressed the button of his flashlight. Its long beam picked out two youths, unkempt, unshaven, who stared at the man by the body of his friend with wide frightened eyes. Then abruptly they fled into the fastness of the surrounding forest.

Martin examined the body, saw that Bean was dead, informed Mrs. Bean, whom he found in the house, of the tragedy, and then sounded the alarm. The search for the two youths began.

Bean had been shot through the head, neck and chest. The wounds had been inflicted by a .38-caliber Colt revolver. The weapon was found within a few feet of the slain man. It was apparently new. Three cartridges had been discharged.

Residents of Haines' Landing reported that they had seen two young men lounging on the veranda of a house across the way from the Bean cottage. This house was owned by Bert F. Kimball, but was not being occupied at the time, Kimball being away on a visit to Swampscott, Mass. Moreover, it was said that a Colt .38, owned by Kimball, had disappeared from the house.

The gun had hung on a hook near a window of the house and could be seen by persons standing on the veranda. Furthermore, access to the place could have been effected easily enough, for Kimball had left the key to the front door on the piazza.

Soon it was definitely established that Kimball's revolver had been used in the shooting.

Thus far the case appeared to be quite simple. Obviously the crime had been committed by these two young men that Martin had seen. They had apparently appropriated Kimball's gun and then lain in wait for Bean with his sack of mail. Possibly they had merely meant to hold the guide up, shooting only when he, a dead shot himself, drew his own pistol.

Constable John Jendron organized a posse made up of Martin and other guides who knew the woods for miles around, but the hunters needed little of their cunning in this chase. Within a short time the youths were captured. They had shunned the woods and continued along the road and on being overtaken by the posse surrendered without resistance.

The prisoners said they were J. W. Wheaton, of Elmira, N. Y., and Norman Mawson, of Methuen, Mass. Protesting their innocence, they were taken to Haines' Landing and on the following day were turned over to Sheriff W. B. Small in Farmington, Maine, the county seat. Throughout all the investigation the young men insisted that they had not committed the crime.

Norman Mawson, the other suspect.

But the case against them seemed strong, even if the evidence was circumstantial. They had been seen on the Kimball veranda. They had had the opportunity to take the revolver. They had been within sight of the guide as he climbed down from his truck to open the garage door. And they had fled the scene on being discovered.

Indignation at the slaying gripped the countryside. Bean, six feet tall, a powerful, handsome man, well liked by sportsmen and guides, had been one of the most sought-after guides in that region. With the arrest of Wheaton and Mawson the people of the community settled back, certain that the slayers were safe in the hands of the law.

Justice in Maine, they told one another, was swift and severe. Otis Bean's murder would not be unavenged.

The weeks passed and the snows of December blanketed the woods, isolating the Rangeleys from the outside world. The two prisoners, erstwhile lumberjacks, boys still in their teens, remained in jail in Farmington and stuck resolutely to their story.

And what, exactly, was that story?

The young men said they had come to the Pleasant Island camps in search of work. They had been sent to the place by an employment agency only to find on arriving at Haines' Landing that there was no work to be had. They said they were trying to find their way home when, as they went up the road near the Bean home, they heard three shots. The shots had frightened them and they had hurried away.

And they had seen nothing of what happened? Nothing.

Not much of a story, one might remark, but in its simplicity lay its strength. The county officers felt beaten. So long as these boys clung to their story, what hope was there of convicting them in a court of law? Incriminating as the evidence seemed, it was nevertheless circumstantial.

The Rangeleys had no Sherlock Holmes who might have gathered clews with which to fix these prisoners as the killers.

It was at this point that the mystery took an entirely new turn.

His Own Investigation.

Certain reports had come to the ears of County Prosecutor Currier C. Holman at Farmington. Whispers, insinuations, suspicions involving a new character in the drama, reached

Things New and Old About the Bible

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga.

There Is the Career of Job.

THE character of Job is beyond reproach.

God's testimony is given: "And the Lord said unto Satan, hast thou considered My servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil?"

The testimony of Job's wife is to be received: "Dost thou still retain thine integrity?" This is good testimony. Your wife knows exactly whether you are righteous or not. It may be that she would not give an honest expression concerning it for the world.

Job's own testimony is of value since it is so well corroborated. "Though He slay me yet will I trust Him; but I will maintain mine own ways before Him." "My righteousness I hold fast and will not let it go." He knows the sure tests of religious character and tries himself by them and let us try ourselves by them.

He claims inward purity, "I made a covenant with mine eyes."

He was considerate of employees, "I had regard for the cause of my manservant and maidservant." He helps the unfortunate, "I was eyes to the blind and feet to the lame." He was free from the love of gold, "I have not made gold my hope." He had no joy in the destruction of his enemies, I rejoiced not at the destruction of him that hated me." Let us measure ourselves by his character. Did you ever rejoice at the calamity of an enemy?

The suffering of Job is of the utmost severity.

There was loss of property. It is no light matter to have the work and savings of a lifetime swept away in a moment. It has led to many suicides.

There was personal bereavement. There is the awful loneliness of the life when those who made life glad speak to us no more in this world.

He suffered bodily affliction. "My skin is black upon me and my bones are burned with heat." There is the terrible affliction of black leprosy. The mind and body are close neighbors and are vitally affected by each other. Only a slight physical ailment is sufficient to make some people miserable, and anybody else miserable who has anything to do with them.

There was the evil counsel of his wife: "Curse God and die." It was a drop of gall in the cup of his suffering that Mrs. Job should have failed in the hour of all hours when she ought to have remained true.

There was the miserable comfort of his friends. We can get rid of our enemies, they don't have much to do with us. But who will deliver us from our friends? These comforting friends came to him in his sorest troubles when of all times he needs comfort and argue with him that his sorrow is the penalty he is paying for some sin against God. The sorrow is enough to bear but added to it is the argument of his comforters that he is under the wrath of God.

There was the bitterness of human desertion, "All my inward friends abhorred me." Next to the tragedy of being forsaken of God is to be forsaken by our friends.

There was a memory of good things in the past, "O that I were as in months past." "Sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things."

He faced the prospect of immediate death. Before there came to him the light of the immortal hope, he felt that he must go down to his grave, smitten by the apparent injustice of God.

There was the seeming omnipotence of evil. To feel that the earth is given over into the hands of the wicked has brought unspeakable anguish to the hearts of many of God's purest saints.

More than all these was the failure to understand God. This is the very heart of Job's trouble. All other calamities would be bearable but for this. There seems to be a conflict within the personality of God himself. He appeals from the God of tradition to the God of reality. He appeals from God as He seems to be to God as He really is. He appeals from God who is merciless to God who is merciful.

The final solution of suffering is beyond the finite mind.

There is an unsolved element of mystery that remains. There belongs to the finite faculties no final solution of human sorrow.

There breaks in upon us every day, "Perpetual moanings from the troubled sea of human life."

There is the world's Gethsemane with its bloody sweat of human anguish.

There is the world mystery of the inequality of human comfort and sorrow.

There is the apparent injustice in the distribution of earthly good and rewards.

"It is a world of mystery
From every meanest blade that cuts the sod,
To the great star-domed temple of our God,
Pulsing with restless unknown power."

The mystery of it was upon the Son of God Himself when He said: "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" But still He said My God. At last it is not the mind but the heart that gives us rest from the perplexities of life.

Job the old-time sufferer was led away from the presence of men with their poor arguments for the ways of God that are fast finding out into the presence of the majesty and greatness of God in the storm. "I had heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee."

Into the midst of the vain discussion of men, into the midst of bodily suffering and anguish of mind, sounds the voice of the Almighty. God does not attempt to justify His ways or to explain the problems of life. He does not seek to answer the doubts of Job, but simply reveals Himself as near at hand.

An element of mystery remains in the mind, but if the heart, the love and longing, the highest intuitions find their object, their resting place in the one sought, then life is at peace.

The Bible does not explain the mysteries of life, but its high value is that it brings God into the life. We are to use the mind to acquire knowledge and to make investigation, but after all it is only the presence and companionship of God that satisfies.

Jesus Himself did not answer curious questions about life. He did not explain many things that men seek in vain to know, but He assured us of the love and presence of God, and called to Him that we might put our trust in Him.

The end of life is the personal relation with God through Christ.

Other things may wait, until that glad day when the mists of earth have lifted, and we see the light within the clouds, and we shall know even as we are known. But even now we may know Him, and have fellowship with Him, and rest our tired minds and aching hearts upon His love.

"FALLEN ANGELS" is the Noel Coward play in which Fay Bainter and Estelle Winwood may be found these evenings. This play was produced in London a couple of years ago but is just now making its somewhat tardy arrival in America. From certain viewpoints it could have waited another couple of hundred years to come over and there still wouldn't have been any cause for tears.

For my own part, I thought "Fallen Angels" delightful. Like most Coward plays, it suffers from a slightness of plot, but the dialogue is so sparkling, so scintillating, it never occurred to me until later how thin it all was. No one now writing for our theater can excel or even equal Mr. Coward's clever conversations. That second act in which Miss Bainter and Miss Winwood proceed to get very drunk abounds in matchless wit and repartee. I thought Miss Winwood was far better than Miss Bainter, but I suppose she did have the better part. These two parts in London were played by Edna Best and your Tallulah Bankhead. If you ask me I'd say see "Fallen Angels" and improve your dinner-table chit-chat.

I thought I saw Sue and Dixon Potter leaving "Funny Face" the other night, the same night I had seen Julia Stephen Lynch at the Ritz. Wasn't it James Robinson, Sr., whom I saw in the Plaza the other night? Mary Matthews Zachary and one of her sisters-in-law I sat in front of at "The Taming of the Shrew." And Carrie Lou Born Mallard I encountered on the subway the other day. At bridge not long ago I was told—no, not to trump my partner's tricks, but that that very partner had that evening had dinner with Adrienne Battey.

"Harry Delmar's Revels" I must confess is the sort of revue I'll never tire of seeing. With most modern day revues struggling to get away from show-girls parading around with everything hanging on them but the kitchen stove, along comes this Mr. Delmar's extravaganza with all my beloved "Perfume Lady" and "Rainbow Girls" ensembles. There was one girl who looked as though she were experiencing actual pain in holding up the mountainous-looking headdress they'd put on her head.

I didn't care so much about the people in the "Revels." Winnie Lightner shouts one suggestive and not particularly funny song after another at a rather bewildered audience. I'm afraid the moment I enjoyed Miss Lightner most was the scene in the first "Gay Paree" in which they emptied a bucket of water on her head. I didn't think Frank Fay was nearly as captivating as he seemed to think. And as for the music, it seems in writing his song hit, the composer simply couldn't get "Limehouse Blues" out of his mind. And that reminded me of Gertrude Lawrence and the fact that she wasn't there didn't add to my good time. After all these somewhat dyspeptic comments, it sounds sort of silly, doesn't it, to tell you that I really did enjoy these "Revels" and can conscientiously recommend them to you. The sketches and dancing are capitable.

Ever since "The Road to Rome" turned out to be the wow it was and since "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" proved a winner, I knew we'd have an avalanche of plays giving us the lowdown on most of the old historical characters. In "Immoral Isabella" young Mr. Lawton Campbell, of Montgomery, Alabama, goes out of his way to let us know just how that guy Columbus and Queen Isabella got to be such tombstone buddies. This play is not nearly as good a play as Mr. Campbell is some day going to write, see if I'm not right. As it is, "Immoral Isabella" somehow fails to get just where it meant to go. Which makes me all of a sudden wonder "Where was that?"

Frances Starr traipses around in Isabella's flowing robes, looking her usual attractive self. Miss Starr always manages to be in plays which allow her to wear trains never less than three or four miles long. She still looks more like Marion Peel than Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun does.

Well, sir, they are now allowing you to see "The Ladder" free of charge. All you have to do is go up to the box-office window and ask for two seats. So far there has only been one casualty and that was when someone carelessly shoved a white-haired lady through one of the glass doors, but she got herself together in time for the first-act curtain. It's certainly a curious looking bunch of people who are taking advantage of Mr. Davis' kind (?) offer. I'm still trying to find out what he's trying to prove by relentlessly continuing to run this play. I'm thinking seriously of taking my dinner guests in the bread line on over to "The Ladder" afterward. I suppose it's nicer being at "The Ladder" than, well, out in the rain.

Yes, I wear size ten and a half sox and I also neck-tie and handkerchief very easily. It's such a charming custom, I think, this idea of sending your columnist little remembrances around holiday times. I still have most of the pink eggs you sent me at Easter and I have saved at least three of the sparklers some one of you delightful admirers sent me on the Fourth.

I am already wondering if I will this year continue to have my irresistible appeal for every vile and ghastly tie to be found. They seem to find me no matter where I go.

PAGES FROM MY LIFE

—BY—
FEODOR CHALIAPINE

"The only authorized English translation of my autobiography."

Feodor Chaliapine

Kaiser Wilhelm and the War.

THE kaiser came to all our performances. He laughed so loudly during "The Barber of Seville" that he could be heard all over the theater, hung over the edge of his box, and altogether behaved in a very free and easy manner, quite like a typical German university student. On our last evening we acted portions of various operas. I appeared in "Il Barbeire di Siviglia." The kaiser sat in a box next to the stage, and during an entr'acte the Frenchman, Renault, who had played Mephistopheles in the "Damnation de Faust," Cooper, myself and the regisseur, were all summoned to the imperial presence.

Wilhelm was standing, resting his weight on the hilt of his sword. His features showed the traces of advancing years; there were deep wrinkles behind the fiercely twisted up moustaches, and there was a good deal of grey in his hair. The whole aspect of the man and in particular his keen, grey-blue eyes, spoke eloquently of an energetic and persevering nature.

"You are a Russian artist?" he said in French, turning to me.

"Yes," I said, "I am an artist of the Imperial theaters."

"I am very pleased to see you here, and have been delighted by your unique talent. . . . I wish to give you something which will be a souvenir of our country and of our theater. . . . Do you sing Wagner?"

"Only at concerts, I have not hitherto ventured on singing in his operas."

"What do you Russians think of him?"

I replied that he was greatly esteemed and beloved.

The kaiser took from the hands of a tall man in evening dress a case containing the golden cross of the Prussian eagle. He wanted to pin the order on my breast with his own hands, but not one of those present had a pin, although the kaiserin and other ladies were in the box. With a smile, he therefore placed the order in my hands.

I felt embarrassed, standing there in the costume of Don Basilio. I was wearing a greasy cassock. My face was frightfully made up, and I was adorned with a monstrous false nose. The serious tone of our conversation was absurdly ill-suited to my costume and appearance. I felt it the more, as I could see that everybody, including the kaiser himself, could not refrain from smiling at sight of me. I was very glad when the interview was over.

In the summer of 1914 after a delightful visit to London I went to Paris, with the intention of going on to Carlsbad for rest and a cure. I arrived in the "Ville Lumiere" on the 25th of July, 1914. Crowds of people were promenading the streets, eagerly devouring the telegrams posted up in the windows of the newspaper offices. At dinner that evening with a well-known banker, I asked my host whether there were any serious foundation for the rumors of war. He said confidently:

"There will not be war!"

This decisively-expressed opinion set my mind at ease. I felt no hesitation in leaving for Germany. But after two or three hours' travel our train came to a stop and we were told to get out, as it would go no further. War had been declared. There were no trains returning to Paris.

I had signed a contract to sing in America during 1915 but the outbreak of the war put an end to this plan, and when I arrived in my country, Fate decreed that I was to remain there continuously for seven years.

As time went on, work in the theaters became more and more difficult. This can readily be understood. People's minds were not on the theater.

Little by little, life became more and more difficult. It was as hard for me to get milk and bread—the bare necessities—as for the humblest working man to provide food for his family. I was glad to sing for the reward of a bag of flour, a ham, some sugar. Sometimes, even, I received a little money, which had largely become of very little value.

The health of my little Marina, always a delicate child, became seriously threatened from undernourishment and I was grateful for the permission granted to send her out of the country in charge of an old friend.

So through all these seven years of horrible revolution, the voice of music was never stilled. Perhaps this was because Russians cannot live without music. What had been art under the czars remained art under the soviet. As for me, who had never played any part in politics but had consecrated by life to art, I was looked upon as a 'Bayan," our ancient Slavonic word for bard or singer.

Out of Russia.

As a result of these long years of war and revolution, I had lost hope of ever getting out of Russia, but the day came when it seemed to me an absolute necessity to get out of Russia and see if I had been forgotten. Of course, it was not so easy to procure a passport. I went to see the soviet commissioners, who were kind and gave me permission to go.

I then went to the British consul for a passport. He said quite frankly:

"No. It is impossible."

"Why?" I asked.

"It is not my duty to tell you, sir," he replied.

I began to feel very much embarrassed about the matter. From the British consul, I went to the American, expecting to receive the same answer. To my surprise and joy, the American consul said nothing but merely cabled to Washington. Within five or six days, I had my visa for America.

Suddenly, one day, I received word from a London manager that if I would sing at a reduced price for some charity league, he would arrange for my visa. I answered:

"All right, on condition that this charity shall be for the starving Russians."

My condition was accepted and I was happy at the thought of going back to that same London where just before the war I had been treated like a king!

Despite my fears, there was no doubt about the feelings of the London public towards me. On the evening of my first concert, the car which had been loaned me, could scarcely get through the crowd of private motors, and public conveyances about Albert hall. My dear Englist bobbies looked furious and had all they could do to keep order.

Inside, the great hall was packed from top to bottom. Again I saw the sight of men and women of distinction in evening dress, a sight to which I had already become unaccustomed. I felt a tremendous emotion sweep over me when I stepped out on the platform and the whole audience rose to its feet and greeted me with an ovation which lasted several minutes.

And when I began to sing my voice rang out confidently in the great hall. I felt that my wings were free and that my songs could soar above the clouds. I felt myself neither Russian, nor Chinese, neither bolshevist nor monshevist, but once again an artist!

Remembering my visit to America in 1907 I thought, involuntarily of the Russian saying: "A crow once shot at dreads every bush!" Indeed it was with this saying in mind that I at last stepped on board the small but attractive steamer Adriatic and found myself once more on the way to brave those haunts where, many years before, the gun had been aimed at the "white" crow—Chaliapine!

Scarcely had I come on board when, strolling along the deck, I met the composer Richard Strauss and the no less interesting and delightful writer, H. G. Wells. Not so very long before this, Wells had been a guest at my home in Petrograd and had done me the honor to say that amid the horrors of the revolutionary desert my house seemed an oasis.

On a beautiful autumn evening we finally sailed into New York harbor and tied up alongside the pier. A number of Russians had come down to meet me and gave me a hearty welcome. Many of them I did not know.

No sooner had I stepped on shore than the gentlemen of the press, as before in 1907, began plying me with questions. Unfortunately their chief preoccupation seemed to be concerning a matter in which I could be of little assistance to them—politics, Russian politics.

"Politics—?" I said. "To ask me about politics is as though you were to ask an Eskimo to give his views about a Beethoven sonata. The art and beauty of every nation—that I sing well and give always of my best, these are my only politics."

Alas! Hardly had I settled down in a midtown hotel than I realized that I had caught a heavy cold and, when the doctors examined my throat they said I was suffering from a severe attack of laryngitis. It would be utterly impossible for me to give a concert within a few days, as had been planned. It was necessary to postpone this and other concerts and my illness lasted about six weeks.

Three times I hoped to be able to get through my New York concert and three times I was forced to put it off.

Finally, the managers said:

"Another postponement is impossible. Either we must cancel this concert altogether, or you must somehow manage to sing."

"Alas!" I exclaimed after a moment's silence.

My managers went on to explain that, knowing the kindly feelings of the public towards me, they felt sure, "if I would only agree to show myself on the stage and sing as best I could, everyone would be pleased."

"The New York public realizes that you are not well and even if you cannot sing your best, this will not count against you," they argued.

It is impossible for any audience to know or understand what terrible suffering an artist undergoes when he has promised to sing and is not well. How often an artist, appears to be perfectly happy when in reality his eyes are filled with tears! But tears would not help matters—sing I must!

They said it was amusing when, in answer to my valet's consoling assurance:

"Never mind, Feodor Ivanovitch, God will help you!"

I fairly shrieked:

"God is not interested in the concert business!"

Then I put on my evening clothes and went to the Manhattan opera house. How grateful I shall always be to you, my dear old friend, Anna Pavlowa! Your sympathy and understanding helped me through the terrible ordeal of that evening!

I sang, but not with my real voice. In spite of this, the audience was more than friendly. When I first walked onto the stage I was deeply moved by the ovation which greeted me from a theater crowded from top to bottom. I was ill—yet the audience understood and applauded me!

American Women.

The day after my first concert, I went to the little village of Jamesburg for a change of air. Then, somewhat improved in health, I returned to the gay city of New York to appear at the Metropolitan, for the opera house, hearing I was in America, had asked me to give several performances.

I avoided the Metropolitan opera house as much as possible, because every time I saw it, I remembered how I had been misunderstood and how my artistic sensibilities had been hurt there in the past.

Still, the time came for me to go to rehearsals of "Boris Goudonov," in which I was to appear for the first time before an American audience.

My dear old friend, Giulio Gatti-Casazza, who, as I have already said, was my impressario, when I sang for the first time at La Scala, Milan, welcomed me heartily and kindly.

At last, came the day of the performance, and I trembled with twin fear—that of a first appearance and that of the "white" crowd, which might not greet kindly a singer from soviet Russia.

To me, of course, the theater is a shrine. I enter its doors as I would those of a temple, with little or no interest as to who may be in the audience.

So on this day, I drank the usual two cups of coffee, dressed about six-thirty, prayed after my own fashion and went to the opera house. Of course, my dear, thoughtful and understanding Gatti-Casazza, who knows my habits well, met me at the door.

"Hello, Chaliapine," he said. "Don't be nervous! A great audience is waiting for you and everyone is thrilled and excited about hearing and seeing you again. Come, I have had Caruso's dressing room prepared for you."

With a friendly hug, he took me to Caruso's room! Still another emotion!

"Just a little while ago," I thought, "he was in this room, perhaps as nervous as I, at the thought of the coming performance—Caruso with his sunny nature, so full of life and health and gaiety. Now he is in his grave! No one will ever see him again in this theater or in this room!"

Remembering the friend, the artist, an overwhelming desire came over me to write a few lines in memory of him

How Her Twin Sister Sees

With Intimate "Close-ups" of th Great Love of the Young Wi Soon to Wed Queen's Neph

"NOW IT CAN BE TOLD!"

OF ALL the glittering American girls whose romances have captured the imagination of the public — from Anna Gould's marriage to the fortune-hunting Count Boni de Castellane, to Millicent Rogers Salm's honeymoon with her handsome South American—none has so piqued the curiosity of readers as the young but spectacular Morgan twins, Gloria and Thelma.

They are the "magical Morgans" because each, at seventeen, was a belle in international society; because each, though not wealthy, as the daughter of an American diplomat hobnobbed with kings and princes; each eventually married millions, to each love brought tragedy, yet both, though only twenty-one, are now "on top of the world" after plumbing the depths of sorrow!

Curiously enough, however, with all the glamor that surrounds them no one outside their exclusive intimates in the "400" really "knows" the twins.

Gloria, particularly, is an enigma to the world. She seldom appears in public. She has never been interviewed. She refuses to see reporters on her frequent to-and-fros between the United States and Europe. She, even more than her twin, is under the famous Vanderbilt "no talking for publication" ban, a private agreement between members of that famous family.

Now that the announcement of Gloria's engagement to Prince Godefroi Hohenlohe Langebourg has been made, interest is keener than ever in this young Vanderbilt widow who will wed a scion of a German family nine centuries old and who will soon be known as "Her Serene Highness."

It is, therefore, with no little gratification that the editors present on this page a "close-up" of Gloria by the one person who knows her best—her other twin, Thelma!

The "close-up" is compiled from a series of articles written by Thelma soon after her twin's marriage to the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt. Thelma, herself divorced, found time heavy on her hands. She was separated from her twin sister for the first long period in years. She still thought Gloria the most interesting person in the world. Gloria's romance with the famous "Reggie" entrapped her imagination. So she sat down with pencil and paper and, in her own way, wrote what she thought of that romance and Gloria.

The result was a most human and interesting picture of the one twin by the other. Today, with Thelma the wife of Lord Furness, one of the richest men in England, and Gloria about to become Princess Ho-though she were the woman of forty and he only a little boy. I watched Reggie constantly at her heels like a faithful angel himself and from what I saw of them during those few days—and from what I know of their romance since its inception—I am here to tell society that it simply doesn't know what it is talking about when it whispers, "Will it last?"

It wasn't one of your love-at-first-sight cases. Though they saw each other frequently at teas, the acquaintance extended no further. Reggie was an eternal subject for the match-predicters, but no one suspected a romance between him and Gloria then. About a month before I sailed for Europe I gave a party at the Beaux Arts. The guests were Mary Terry, Countess Zichy, Reggie, Angier Duke and Julian Little. Gloria promised to join us after the theater and she did. I noticed that night for the first time that Reggie Vanderbilt seemed smitten with my twin, and she glowed under his ardent eyes.

Chance added fuel to the flame that began to burn between them. And a few weeks later, on the day I sailed, Reggie arrived at the dock just as the Lapland was towed out. I thought I glimpsed him in the crowd at Gloria's back, but not until weeks later did I learn what important events hinged on my departure that blustery January day.

"I was crying when Reggie came up all out of breath," Gloria tells me. "He told me to cheer up and said, 'Let's go to lunch.' So I went to lunch with him and—well, that was really when we fell in love, Thelma."

Gloria was on the eve of sailing for Havana with Mrs. Baruch. Reggie begged her to marry him. She was stopping at the Waldorf with our aunt, Mrs. William Rafferty. She told Reggie she would have to have time in which to make up her mind—the month in the tropics. But he was too impetuous for her. Three days later they were engaged and within a month the wedding took place.

When I returned from Europe I found Reggie and Gloria, instead of occupying the mansion at Sandy Point Farm, living like a pair of true honeymooners in a small vine-covered cottage in the rear of it. The effect was quite Arcadian, I assure you. Not at all what you would expect of a multi-millionaire and bride.

When they are in town, Gloria and Reggie will live at Reggie's house, in Seventy-seventh street. There each floor is a separate suite with a lift running from floor to floor, which one operates himself. Reggie's living quarters during his bachelor days were very much of the same character as the Sandy Point trophy room — sporting prints, photographs of thoroughbreds, a big blue divan, a huge polar bear rug in front of the fireplace. The only books I can recall from a quick glance at his library are Burton's Unexpurgated Edition of Arabian Nights. A most comfortable rookery — Reggie's Bachelor Hall. I wonder if he minds giving up his glorious bachelor ease.

Seriously speaking, I am sure he doesn't. The simple truth is that he loves Gloria and Gloria loves him. That should be enough to make a successful marriage, if there weren't plenty of other reasons. Though she is only 17, Gloria is no flapper. She has the poise and judgment of a woman twice her age. She has seen too many marriages smashed to have any false illusions. She went into matrimony open-eyed, determined to make it a go.

Twin daughters of Harry Hayes Morgan, famous United States diplomat.
Educated abroad, where they were the playmates of royalty.
Made their debuts at sixteen and were the pets of Paris and London society.

GLORIA

Married Reginald C. Vanderbilt, most famous "catch" in the New York "400," when she was seventeen.

Lived idyllically with Vanderbilt and was heart-broken when he died.

Went abroad with their baby daughter. Now engaged to Prince Hohenlohe Langebourg, nephew of Queen Marie.

THELMA

Married James Vail Converse, scion of an old New York family, when she was only sixteen.

Separated from Converse at seventeen and divorced him in Paris.

Married last year Lord Furness, one of the richest men in England, and now is a leader in London society.

MY LADY FAR AWAY

INSTALLMENT IX.

THE Lahara, guarded by a handful of native sailors, lay off the island. Some hundreds of the wild lake people were gathered on shore in a state of utmost excitement. Hopper had seen the headhunter type excited before and didn't particularly like it. Here were all the symptoms of trouble on the boil—men dancing about with peculiar jumping-jack motion that generally precedes attack; waving their enormous bows, shaking their bundles of tough six-foot arrows—arrows that they could send right through a human body as easily as a boy can spit a grasshopper. One or two had even fitted arrows to strings; their long tortoise shell shooting cufrs—almost the only garment most of them wore, glittering restlessly, as the sinewy arms quivered to the tremendous pull of the bows.

At first one could see nothing but this mass of brown humanity, surging about and humming with confused noise, like a swarm of excited bees. Then, in the midst became visible that which caused Hopper—though he had vividly expected as much—to curse briefly but vividly. . . . "Down sail," he ordered. "Pull like hell!" He had seen Smith and Martha in the midst of the crowd. The wind, in lee of the island, had failed them now; they shot to shore beneath the pull of twelve strong arms, and grounded on the beach. Hopper and four boys sprang out; two others stayed to guard the boat, as far as that was possible. Hopper, trained to quick thinking, saw that the case was bad. Even the Lahara, finely fitted yacht as she was, could have made no stand worth mentioning against half the lake population—with the other half, in all probability, following. It needed only one spark cast into this mass of human gunpowder to start an explosion that would sweep the lake country bare of all stranger life.

Still—no attack had been made; it might be possible to prevent it. What was Smith doing? What did he say—shout—across the noise of chattering natives?

"Mr. Hopper! We want you here."

Hopper made his way to the two beseiged whites. He could not quite understand the situation. What did the queer chap want?

"Wait a bit; I'll speak," said Smith. He made signs for silence, and suddenly burst forth into a vivid oration in the native tongue that held the surging crowd, magnetized it, and kept it almost still for the space of two or three minutes.

When he had done, he turned to Hopper.

"They've been trying to carry off Mrs. Lyle," he said. "I've persuaded them that it would be stealing my wife. They count me almost one of themselves, you see. But it won't do to put up any bluff with these folk. The whole lake country is out; the only chance is to take me as I am, and let me stand between her and trouble, with the proper right to do so. Mr. Hopper, I'll be obliged if you'll fetch along the two half-caste engineers I left in charge of the Lahara—she'll have to take her chance for a few minutes—and marry us just here."

"My good sir," replied Hopper, shouting to make himself heard, "if they don't respect the government, they won't respect a ceremony they have never seen and know nothing about."

"Of course they don't understand the ceremony," Smith interrupted impatiently. "But they understand facts, and I don't suppose you expect me to start living with the lady without one."

Hopper oh'd and ah'd. "Very irregular," came vaguely through the increasing tumult that surrounded them. But he sent a couple of police on the yacht to take the place of the engineers; and waited. tapping his teeth with his nails, until the two half castes arrived.

Nevertheless the magistrate, who wanted to be sure of the legality of this extraordinary marriage, insisted on hauling them out and bringing them out and bringing them over to the island. He didn't quite remember how the law stood about native witnesses; but, anyhow, these half whites were bound to satisfy it.

Instinctively the natives drew back as if they understood that something serious was about to take place.

As the ceremony went on a general retreating movement became perceptible among the crowd. What spells were being cast? What was this glittering thing that the White Chief pressed on the finger of the woman? Why did they join hands? (Hopper, since he had to perform the marriage, was carrying it out with all possible elaboration; being, as he represented it himself, law and church and crown combined, for his division.)

So was the marriage made; and when it was over, the magistrate kissed the bride with a sharp, determined kiss—he didn't like her, but a pretty woman is a pretty woman, and there's no use foregoing lawful perquisites—turned quickly round, told the willing engineers to go back to the ship, and called his boat.

"You say this'll stop the trouble?" he demanded, with one foot in the boat.

"You may rely on that," said the man called Smith. "Nobody on the lake is going to touch my wife." He put his arm around her—drew her to him almost roughly. The crowd of headhunters saw, and out crashed a mighty laugh; the immemorial bridal jape, that has shaken the sides of a thousand civilized generations, that here among the stone age folk displayed its very spring and origin.

Hopper was no ethnologist, but he understood that.

"If these chaps," he said, "had a parcel of old boots and slippers, I'm hanged if they wouldn't throw 'em after you."

Nobody listened to him. Smith was busy directing one of his own boys to go on board the Lahara and fetch clothes, provisions, mosquito nets and blankets for a camp upon the island. When Martha wished to go herself he told her that she had better not. "We've rubbed in the facts," he said. "Let them stay rubbed. Probably these beggars would think you were bolting again." And once more he put his arm around her, but this time it was not for the benefit of the crowd. Martha thrilled to that strong, warm pressure. "After all," she thought, feeling her slim figure shaken like a reed in the hold of the big hermit of the lakes, "one might do a great deal worse—even if I didn't know—what I know!"

Smith had loosed her; stood alone. The magistrate's whaleboat was pausing on its oars a little way out. "If you're all right," declared Hopper, "I don't see why I need stop on. I had best get along with my patrol and call in on the way back."

"We're all right," answered Smith. "I can manage them." He signaled to the crowd; shouted a few words in their own tongue. They answered with a yell that shook the ground. Then they turned as one man to the shore, and a wild shoving down of canoes, and leaping in, and paddling, and banging and quarreling; and gettin tangled up with one another, and breaking clear again, began. It was over in a minute or two. The whole fleet had got under way and was racing as hard as it could go towards a flat pale blue island in the middle distance of the lake.

"What on earth did you say to them?" demanded Martha, glancing sidelong at her groom. She was really not at all curious about what he had said. She had other things to think of.

"I told them," explained Smith, "that they could go over at once to my pig island—that's it, the flat one—and start killing the pigs."

"O!"

"They will gorge themselves for days—think about nothing else. We are safe from any disturbance. . . . Martha, you beautiful thing, do you know you have given me new life? God, when I think of what I've been missing—might have missed—with you in the world! I'll tell you all about myself some day, and then you'll understand. But I can't think of anything but you now. I can't believe it's really true. You—to give up the world for me!"

"Fool!" thought Martha, standing within the ring of his encircling arms. "Give up the world—I don't think! But I do like him. I can even understand how it all happened—before." Something about the man called Smith—his strength, his strangeness, the wild, convention defying life he had chosen, appealed to Martha, who in her very soul was iconoclast. "For a while," she told herself. "For a while I shall adore it. Then—well, then it'll be loaves and fishes again, and plenty of both."

It was not hard for her to put the dove note into her voice; the love-making tone that had deceived more men than Royden and Smith. Was she deceiving now? She scarcely knew. She never questioned herself when she was happy. And strangely, truly, she was happy now; with the arm of the White Chief around her, with the wind of the lakes, the luring, calling wind that had secrets to tell, astir in her hair, and the sun, now high in heaven, spilling raw gold upon beach and forest into shadeless splendor, almost too bright for human eyes, the island of her strange honeymoon.

And no one—not Hopper, anxious to conduct the ceremony effectively; not Smith or Martha, absorbed in one another—had noticed that while the wedding was going on. Hopper's police, left to guard the Lahara, were busy surreptiously clearing out certain small, heavy cases, filling their own bags and those of their friends with the contents, and substituting ballast from the hold. . . . The Papuan native policeman is plucky, humorous, well disciplined, a credit on the whole to his country. But no one has ever suggested that he is always and inevitably the pink of honesty. And if there is one thing that tempts him above gold, above food, almost above woman, it is—cartridges. . . .

Hugh Royden, coming back to the lake after a fruitless search through the largest—it seemed, also the most deserted—of the islands; tired, streaming with heat, torn by thorns and lawyer-vines, and, it must be allowed in rather a bad temper, found a boat and a letter awaiting him.

The letter was from Hopper.

"Dear Mr. Royden,

"You will be relieved to hear that Mrs. Lyle has been found on an island some miles away from the one where I landed you. She is quite well and unharmed. I have not yet heard the circumstances that led to her disappearance from the yacht, but I infer from what I saw that she drifted away in a canoe. A large body of natives had embarked in canoes and were about to cause her annoyance, when Mr. Smith brought up the Lahara, thus obviating unpleasantness for the moment."

"Dash the long-winded beggar," thought Hugh, "one would thing he was writing a report. "Mr. Smith—what's all this about old Moses? What? By God! . . ." He flung the letter out across the empty, quiet lake as though some monster had suddenly arisen from its depths.

". . . Mr. Smith," the letter ran, appeared to think that further trouble was to be anticipated, and desiring to protect Mrs. Lyle with the full authority of a husband, suggested to me that I should perform the ceremony of marriage. This I did, with the engineers as witnesses, being fully qualified to perform marriages in the district of Southwestern Papua. I shall make it my business to register the marriage immediately on return to headquarters. With a view to the continuing and completing of my patrol, which has now been for some days delayed, I am proceeding immediately up the Pelican river. Anything you may wish me to witness in the nature of an affidavit, as previously discussed, I shall be happy to attend to on my proximate return. I——"

If there was anything more in the letter, Hugh Royden never knew it; for the wind from the lake picked it up and carried it away. He let it go, and for the next minute or two the island beaches echoed to the fury of a tricked, disappointed, and justly angered man.

He pulled himself up before long. It was not meet that the inferior races should witness the humiliation of their superior. Already the mop-headed cannibals in the boat were beginning to grin and stare. Royden hurled a curse at them—he was thankful for the chance of cursing anything, just then—and told them that they would have to take him over as quickly as possible to the bungalow island. He did not doubt for a moment that he would find the couple there. What he proposed to himself he scarcely cared to define. Worn out by a sleepless night, by the shock of the news from England, by his anxiety over Martha and her fate, now by this last, most crushing and amazing blow, he felt himself unable to think clearly. But he could feel, and his feeling, like a red-hot goad, drove him resistlessly towards the pair who had so tricked and insulted him. Hugh Royden, an hour ago, had been near doubting whether he ever had loved Martha seriously. Now, with the thought of her beauty in another man's possession, he was only too certain that he did. He knew—none better—that Martie was the very soul of caprice—but he knew too that her caprices never led her away from what was advantageous to herself.

He did not say to himself that he would kill the man called Smith and take Martha back again; but as the boat slid over the blue-silk surface of the lake, heading towards the distant high island on which a tall spire of smoke pointed out the place of Smith's bungalow home, he sat with his pistol across his knees, and almost lovingly fingered its smooth surface. It was the very same that he had carried through two years of the great war; with which he had more than once blown the life out of enemy fighters, white men made like himself. Did half-forgotten feelings born of the war come back to him as he sat in that boat, deaf and blind to all the beauty and music of the lakes, traveling, as fast as might be, to the house of the man who had betrayed him? There was none to say.

Welch and Stella Antares, the same afternoon, were out on the beach of the bungalow island, engaged in the prosaic occupation of beating tappa-cloth. There was always plenty of that sort of work on hand for any one who cared to do it; it was not exactly Welch's job—in fact, he would have preferred to be away catching snatches—but wise and wily as ever, he had chosen rather to engage himself, and enlist the help of Stella in a long, monotonous task that would keep her from thinking about herself.

Therefore, the slips of whitish bark fiber were laid in rows over the back of an old canoe, and the sound of tappa hammers, steadily beating many pieces into one, echoed over the lake and up against the unbroken wall of the forest. The busier Stella was kept, the better. So thought the man who knew the ways, the loves, the sorrows of wild nature—from which wild human nature, white or black, is so little removed.

Besides he wanted to be with her.

Welch had been married, when he was a mere lad of a keeper, to a girl, an attendant in the freshman room of the Sydney Railway station. It had been a very successful match; the boy, clever, patient, naturally studious and refined, was no companion for Gladys May, and she, on her side, neither understood nor appreciated him. She had died early, and the man remained a very contented widower. Women, so far as he knew them, were "felidae"—cats, more or less. You treated them as you treated the great cats in the cages of the zoo—mastered them, fed them, caressed them, kept clear of their claws, and trusted them—never.

He had gone through a good part of life without changing his opinion. Martha Lyle, the first well-bred woman with whom he had come into contact, only emphasized it. He compared her in his mind to Minnie, the celebrated tigress of the Brisbane zoo, most beautiful great cat in captivity, and most treacherous. Minnie would make friends with you, lead you to suppose that you were an exception to other people—that she might snarl horrifically at the general public, and claw off the hats of the general public's wife, but that you were "not like the rest . . ." Minnie would purr like a car running downhill, roll over on her elastic spine, and beg you to stroke her immense cream stomach when you came in to take away the dinner bones. You would think that nobody ever was such a tamer as you. You would congratulate yourself, pet Minnie—until she turned on you and tore you open.

They shot Minnie at dawn one day. She took a good deal of killing, and the head keeper frankly cried. Welch, who had never been one of Minnie's fans, watched coolly, and when the deed was done remarked that the world was well rid of her. She was too damn like some women.

Stella Antares, this slip of a girl who could handle snakes as easily as himself, who never tricked, or lied, or posed, who knew no fear, save fear of bloodshed, who was beautiful, and didn't know it, passionate, and pure; who had lived as simply, as innocently, in her hidden fastness, as one of the snow-white ospreys flying over the lake—this was a new sort of woman to Welch; and he found her strangely attractive.

Perhaps the girl knew it, perhaps she did not. Her demeanor would not have shamed any woman of society, in the presence of an admirer for whom she had no particular use. Stella Antares wielded her hammer, smoothed the strips of tappa, spread out finished work to dry and set in the sun, almost without remark. Once in a way she said something vaguely civil. But Welch, watching her, saw that her thoughts were far from him and from her task. In truth, her mind was away on the lake, with Smith, the magistrate, and Royden. Of Martha she did not think very much—perhaps because she did not dare to truth her thoughts; knew, in her secret heart, that she would not be sorry if the search proved a failure.

For about half an hour the tappa beating went on. Then Welch, looking up to see what had caused the sudden cessation of Stella's steady hammer strokes, saw, to his astonishment, the girl darting off into the forest as if pursued by demons.

Turning round to learn, if possible, what had been the cause of this sudden vanishment, he saw that which made his lips purse up in a long, silent whistle. Hugh Royden was approaching the shore.

Landed, he did not wait for Welch; he ran to meet him. Before him went a lengthening black shadow; it was latish now, and men and beasts no longer moved specterlike, shadeless, under the flogging rays of noon. His face, against the light, showed almost featureless; but Welch, in his very gait and bearing, felt calamity.

"Didn't you find her?" he asked.

Royden stopped short. Welch could see his face clearly now; its ravaged look astounded and dismayed him.

"Isn't she here?" cried Royden, in a high, furious voice.

"Nobody has come here. What's the——"

"Are you shielding them? Damn you, if you——"

"Get a hold on yourself and don't talk nonsense," advised Welch. "I want to know what's happened."

Hugh Royden looked at him once, twice, swallowed in his throat and answered: "Smith found her. Said the natives were turning nasty. Persuaded her to marry him in order to save her life. Hopper did it and cleared out. That's 'what.'"

The long whistle that had been hanging on Welch's lips came forth. "I thought there was something of the kind brewing," he said. "Only what one might expect of Smith, under the circumstances. When a man——"

"Confound the circumstances. Where are they? Do you know?"

"Can't guess—and if I could, I shouldn't tell you. What can you do?"

"I'll tell you that when I get hold of him."

"O, nonsense." Welch was thinking rapidly. Inside the forest wall he had missed seeing the appearance of the canoes that morning; missed their sudden flight. He did not yet know—and cared extremely little—how Martha had been found. Still he thought well to ask.

"How was she found? Do you know anything about it?" he asked, trying to put in time. If this lunatic could only be delayed a little—kept on the bungalow island until the flood of his anger had time to subside—Welch thought that all might be well. Royden was a man of strong feelings, of somewhat tyrannical character, but the other felt sure that, essentially, he was conventional, law-abiding.

"He's not the sort that kills the other man and goes happy to the gallows for it," thought Welch, the self-contained, whose heart, perhaps, had never beat too hotly for any woman in the world, Gladys May not excepted. "Respectability is his god—when he doesn't happen to be chasing up cannibal rivers. . . . And even that was for the most respectable and conventional of reasons. She isn't worth breaking his neck over, literally or metaphorically—that little tiger pussy."

Royden was answering him. He pulled himself back into attention.

"We separated. I went off to a big island with one of the boats, and Smith went in the Lahara. And, by the way, I'd like to know what the infernal regions he has done with my boat? The Lahara wasn't his to play with, even if he could pilot her. Ah!"—a new light shone in his eyes—"I have it. Where she is, he'll be. You can't hide a ninety-ton schooner in your pocket. I wonder I didn't see her, running across here—but—I suppose she was behind some of the islands."

He stopped and stared blankly out across the fiery lake.

By and by he pulled himself together. "I'll be off," he said briefly. He beckoned to the rowers. "Here," he called, "I'm going; pull her up."

"Taubada," said the insinuating voice of Jacky. 'Taubada."

"Eh, what? What d'you want?"

'Taubada sir, altogether this boy he velly tired, velly hungly. Taubada, we-fellow boy altogether we no all same one sitima (steamer) ingin, sir. No sleep, no kai-kai, (eat). Taubada, ingin belong-boat, him sleep sometime, all the time him kai-kai flenty wile (oil), flenty kerosene. Maybe you havem some wile, some kerosene belong me an' 'nother boy?" Jacky's cunning, laughing face looked up with a would-be piteous expression.

'That's a boy," thought Welch, "with a proper headpiece on him. That's a boy who knows which side his bread is buttered on, and by golly, I'll see it is buttered—by and by. He's hit on the only thing that would have checked this lunatic."

For indeed, Hugh, who was nothing if not considerate to his men, who was known on his station as "best blanky boss that a man could find in a month of Sundays," had risen to the fly artfully thrown by Jacky, and waved the rowers ashore.

"I forgot these beggars," he apologetically said to Welch, looking more like himself than the other yet had seen him. "We have been at it all night and more than half the day, and I don't think any one's had much thought of food. Take them to the house, Jacky, and see them fed."

"You've done a wise thing," said Welch. "They wouldn't have got you far in the state they were in."

"I reckon not, maybe." He looked, sidelong at the remnants of Welch and Stella's picnic lunch.

Royden, who was beginning to feel hungry, and at the same time ashamed of such a commonplace want, edged away to the camp table that had been laid, some little while before, by Stella; found food, ate it, quickly and absent-mindedly, and returned to Welch again. He was quieter, more composed. By and by, lighting a cigar, and tucking it in one corner of his mouth, he asked, "Where's Antares?"

"Antares was here with me just before you came."

"What happened to him?"

"Bolted."

Hugh gave a short laugh. "White livered little cur," he remarked.

"Aren't you rather hard on Antares?"

"Who? I? I thought the world of the little chap. I'd have liked to adopt him—if—I—if we——" He broke off. "But he disgusted me last night. . . . was it last night? Seems like last week. A boy ought to be a man at sixteen or he'll never be. That's what they say. Eh?"

"Quite right. A boy at sixteen is pretty much what he's going to be afterwards."

"And Antares?" Hugh was drawing quietly at his cigar now, looking out across the water, not at the other man.

"Antares," said Welch, tapping lightly with his hammer. "Antares, I agree with you, will never make a man."

No answer came from Hugh Royden.

An hour or so passed in waiting, and then, just as Royden was beginning to get impatient again, and just as Welch was growing rather tired of his silent companion, the boatboys returned.

"We-fellow altogether ready, Taubada sir," called Jacky, jauntily. "We come along with you now, row you to hell."

"That won't be necessary, after all," drawled Welch from his seat on a shady rock. "I think, as a matter of fact, hell's coming here."

"What do you mean?" asked Royden. But he saw, in the moment of asking. A good way out upon the surface of the lake there lay a long, high island. It had a wooded point, and round the point the yacht Lahara was coming.

Round the point of the island came the Lahara, going rather slowly. A native was at the wheel; two others, in the bow, seemed to be waiting to drop anchor. No white person was visible.

"This is a curious business," thought Welch. "I suppose they are coming home for the honeymoon; but it's damned odd that nobody is on deck."

His eyes, trained to closeness of observation by many a day spent watching wild things in the bush, ran quickly over the boat. Certainly she had an air of desolation about her apart from the absence of any responsible person at the wheel or in the bow. The boats seemed to have been slung in anyhow; they dangled from the davits all awry. A long end of rope trailed loose from the deck into the green of the lake water, dragging like a tail. The masts——

Welch never started; a trainer of wild beasts must have his nerves under control. But he pressed his lips rather tightly together as he looked at the foremast of the Lahara, and raised his mobile eyebrows. Royden, who had turned to speak to him, caught the expression of his face, looked back at the boat, and let out a sudden expletive.

"Half mast," he said. "Who's dead?"

One could hardly call it half masting the flag—that incompetent running of something crumpled, tangled, part way up the foremast, where it vainly strove to unloose its folds and flutter on the breeze. But it was quite clear that some one had tried his best to set that signal of distress. The question was, who?

Welch could hear the heavy breathing of the other man who stood watching the yacht, determined evidently to show no sign of the agonized suspense he must be undergoing. It was a hard moment. If Martha was dead, why was not Smith on deck, conning the boat? It would help no one to lose the Lahara before she landed her passengers. If, on the other hand, something had happened to Smith—that dark something which no one particularizes but every one ically at Mrs. Watkins. "How awfully stupid! I'm sorry."

"I'm afraid," replied Mrs. Watkins sharply, "that being sorry won't—"

Lorna heard no more. Some instinct told her that John Cumberland was behind her. And instinct was not misleading.

"Miss Mulford."

"O'" Lorna turned around, looking up into the man's face. Then collecting herself she smiled her slow smile. "I didn't know you were an undergrad."

"I'm not. But I'm going to act like one. Let's dance this, shall we?"

"Why"—Lorna glanced at the card players. Mrs. Watkins, who had quite enough of her partner, pushed back her chair with a decisive movement.

"Go ahead and dance," she said darkly. "I'm going to knit for a while. I've had quite enough—quite."

"O, thank you!" As the orchestra sent forth a jazzy blare, Lorna laying aside her scarf, arose and was swept into the dance.

"Do you know," she said, smiling up at her partner, "that you're a life saver? This is my first dance. Undergraduates haven't any chivalry any more. And that card game!" Her brows and eyes raised tragically.

"You dance beautifully." Cumberland's voice was low and she liked the look in his eyes. As a matter of fact, he spoke but the simple truth. There was not a girl in the room, probably there was not a girl at any club in the university that night, who could dance nearly so well as Lorna. She loved dancing and had studied it and her sense of rhythm was a highly developed faculty.

Moreover, she enjoyed dancing with Cumberland. She liked the way he led, liked the way he held her, and she liked him, so poised and clean and strong and masculine.

"I've been thinking about you all evening," he said. "Luckily I had a dinner suit at the Graduates' club. So I put it on and made Dean Fleming bring me here."

"And you did all this because you wanted to see me?" Lorna eyed him with an attempt at mockery. "You didn't neglect to bring your line together with your dinner clothes, did you?"

"That's no line, Miss Mulford. I'm absolutely sincere. And allow me to say you're the youngest looking aunt I ever saw."

"Young! Just how young do you think I am? You may answer frankly, you know."

"Well, I'll bet you're not thirty."

Lorna laughed.

"Thank you, kind sir. That is a compliment."

They fell into silence, following the dance and the encore until the musicians definitely laid aside their instruments.

"Let's go outside. What do you say?"

"All right." Lorna picked up her scarf from the chair at the card table, now deserted, and went with Cumberland out upon the wide veranda. But he did not stop there. He led her down the steps to the lawn.

"I tell you," he said. "We can't dance here, of course. It isn't done. But I'm crazy to dance; aren't you?"

"Yes. I'd like to. Awfully."

"But you see we can't. Not here. I tell you——"

"You know," she heard him say, "there is a roadhouse three miles from here. Quite all right. Why can't we go—now?"

"But"—her voice was thin—"I—I'm a chaperon."

"O, the deuce! Go in and tell that child of yours you're going to light out for an hour or two. She won't care: she'll be glad to be rid of you." He laughed. "Did you ever yet know a flapper who'd mourn if her chaperon ran out on her?"

"No," smiled Lorna, "I never did But there is a sense of duty, you know."

"O, duty be hanged! Listen there never was such a night as this. Aren't there enough chaperons about the club, in all conscience? And it'll only be a little while. Please! I know I can borrow a roadster. I'll be back in a jiffy."

"Well"—Lorna hesitated and as ardently he pressed his advantage she was utterly lost. "Very well. I'll speak to Avice, get my coat and I'll meet you at the hedge entrance."

"Bully." Cumberland conducted her up the steps, then dashed away to get the car.

Avice, whom Lorna detached from her partner just as a dance was beginning, frowned upon her cousin.

"Who are you going with?"

"O, with a man I know. Just for a little while, Avice."

"I know who. You must think I'm stupid. It's John Cumberland. I saw you dancing with him. And he never recognized me, although I smiled at him twice."

"When I dance with a man, he never sees anything but me. Now run along and be a good girl until I get back."

"You're a fine chaperon, aren't you! And I won't be a good girl."

"Well, be anything you please for all I care!"

"I'll tell him who you are."

"You dare tell a word to anybody and I'll let Miss Standish know the trick you played on her. Then see what happens to you."

"You're the one who needs a chaperon, I must say."

"Ta ta!" With a smile Lorna went out of the room, out upon the porch, and down the steps to the walk.

She had just reached the sidewalk when Cumberland came up with the car. He stepped out, catching her by the arm.

"Great! Here we are!"

With a little laugh, Lorna stepped into the motor and in another instant Cumberland was beside her at the wheel.

"Well, I've done many things in my life, but I never kidnaped a chaperon before. This is going to make history." He put the engine in gear and they rolled away.

"Is it?" Lorna's voice was vacant.

"When were you at your last college dance?" he asked.

"If I told you that," she smiled, "you'd know how old I was."

"I expect to know that and lots of other things. Aunt Mim, I'm just literally mad about you."

"I'm not old enough to be your aunt, anyway."

"Certainly not. By the way, what does the 'Mim' stand for?"

"Mimosa."

"Charming name! Charming. Well, Mim, every one who knows me at all well calls me Jack. You're distinctly in that category."

"O, am I? You're a fast worker, aren't you?"

"I don't know." He turned the car into a street leading toward open country. "Isn't there a lot in striking a sort of palship right off the bat if you like a person and you are fatuous enough to believe she likes you."

"I suppose that is so." Lorna was desperately anxious to be poised and witty and to impress this man at her side. Unquestionably he was of the sort who knew the world, was popular at his clubs, probably a first nighter at the theater, who knew actresses—nice ones, of course—and gave dinners.

"Of course, those children back there, those flappers with their string bean figures"—at least, Lorna thought as he said this she didn't have a string bean figure—"their painted faces and hard glassy eyes." He shrugged, not completing his thought. "Were you ever like that? I'll gamble you weren't."

She turned to him with a little laugh.

"Are you trying to make an old woman feel at ease?"

"Bunk!" He fell into silence and so they rolled through the night until at length he sent the car into the driveway at the foot of a lake whose head bordered the university acres.

"Here we are." Cumberland parked the car and helped her to the ground. "I think you'll like it. So far as I am concerned, I can dance with you and that would make any place heaven."

She laughed.

"You can't turn my head—Jack. That is one of the prices you have to pay for running off with a chaperon."

But the truth was that her head was turned. Poignant regret filled her as they went into the roadhouse. For Cumberland appealed to her in every way; she had never known any one who had so captured her imagination.

It was, she felt, a bitter dilemma and the bitterest part was that she had to carry on. She had got in too deeply now to withdraw. Which meant, of course, that the end of this romance, for such she regarded it, could be but a matter of days.

She was thinking of this, thinking painfully of this, as she and Cumberland walked upon the dance floor and she slipped into the hollow of his arm. And somehow, as they danced, there seemed to develop in her a feeling of nearness to him, a feeling that whatever she did, he would understand and hold her high.

So strong grew this feeling that at length she looked up at him.

"Jack, I want to talk to you."

He glanced at her, and seeing her tense face he stopped dancing.

"All right," he said simply. "I'll get your scarf. We might walk down by the lake. It's rather wonderful there."

They walked slowly down to the water's edge, standing back of a rustic settee, their hands resting upon the back.

"It is wonderful." Lorna turned to Cumberland and began to know the processes by which comedy verges upon the tragic.

"Suppose, Jack, I were not what you thought I was—you—you—would think I was frightful, wouldn't you?"

He laughed.

"If you were not you, I'm afraid I should," he said. "But, you see, you are."

"O!" There was a note of pain in the exclamation. "Don't you see, Jack——"

"Yes, of course I see. As you are, you are everything I like, Mim, dear. You are sweet and clever, and graceful and charming——"

"O Jack!" Suddenly she placed her hand upon his arm. "I——"

And then, as a familiar brassy voice, but infinitely more brazen now than ever, beat upon her ears, the night for Lorna gathered itself up in a whirling scroll.

"I see you and don't you think I don't."

"Then, as it seems, we are seen." Cumberland's voice was filled with amusement as he turned and confronted Avice Walton. "And how did you get here?"

"I followed you both. Just as soon as I saw you leave I got Tommy Forbes and followed you. You must think I'm simply an idiot. Well, I'm not. Ha! Ha! Don't think it for a moment."

"And you!" She pointed an angry forefinger at Lorna. "You a chaperon! You're a swell chaperon, if you ask me. You ought to be ashamed of yourself. You make me sick."

"Really? Do I?" Lorna, seeing the end of the world, met the catastrophe like the sportswoman she was.

"Yes, you do. A chaperon? You're the one who needs watching, Lorna Mulford, and I'm here for the job. You came down here as a chaperon just as an excuse. Don't tell me! I know all about it. You knew all the time what you were up to. And making believe on the train you didn't know this man! Bah! From now on I'm the chaperon, and I'll let you know I am, too."

"Just a moment." Cumberland, hardly successful in concealing the mirth that filled him, stepped toward the girl. "Is it possible that out of the mouth of babes comes wisdom for chaperons and that—"

"Chaperon!" Avice stared at the man. "Are you crazy or do you think you're fooling me?"

"The fact is, little girl, that I'm completely at loss."

"O, you are! Well, let me tell you that Lorna isn't Aunt Mim at all. She's my cousin and she's in Vassar and she dressed up and put on a transformation because Aunt Mim couldn't come and I didn't want to stay home. And she has no business running off with older men to roadhouses."

"Let me understand, Avice." Cumberland's voice was patient, kindly. "You got your cousin to assume the part of a chaperon for you and in return you reward her by this most dramatic expose. Avice, my dear! I had always thought that if youngsters of your generation had one great virtue it was disregard for conventions—and sportsmanship."

To Lorna there was something wonderful about this quiet speech. Quivering, on the verge of tears, she was inspired by his greatness to be equally great—or at least to attempt the stance.

"Jack," she said, and her voice was laden with dignity, "won't you give my young cousin five cents to return to the house party? And I'll attend to her later. Just now I'm going into the dressing room for a few moments. Say five minutes. Will you wait for me?"

Not waiting for him to speak, she hurried away, while Avice, as though the situation were beyond her, went off calling for Tommy Forbes.

As Lorna sat at the dressing table in front of the long mirror, she looked at her eyes and with surprise saw no suffusing moisture. They were, on the contrary, excited, brilliant. And her face was highly flushed and within her was, not desperation, not fear, understands—where was Martha? Nobody who knew her would suppose for an instant that she was keeping company with a corpse. If they were both dead—and Hugh began almost to think that this must be the case—why were not the natives raising the despairing wail that certainly might be expected of Papuans left all alone in a hostile country, with no one to give orders?

My Lady Far Away

The yacht came nearer; one of the natives on deck pulled over the telegraph; below, the engines slacked and ceased. Some one, in a hoarse Papuan voice, shouted, "Lower away!" and the anchors went down. Behind the boat the sun, dropping towards the lake, had lit therein blinding fires that threw back, augmented, the splendors of the burning sky. Against all this wonder of fire and gold, the boat stood out black, like the ghost ship in "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner." Hugh saw the natives lower a boat, saw them sit, waiting; still as figures cut out in black paper, waiting—for whom? Saw, with burning eyes, and heart that throbbed heavily, a small, light figure come slowly up from the cabin. Native? No. Man? No. Martha.

Welch heard the long, slow sigh of relief. Welch saw the unclenching of the closed hand, slackening of the tense muscles.

The dangerous moment was over. There would be no murder done tonight on the island owned by the man named Smith. For Smith had not come forth from the cabin; and Welch, looking on that clumsily half-masted flag, felt sure, in his own mind, that he would never again come forth from any cabin any more.

Martha had landed. Hugh stood watching her with burning eyes, but without a word or a movement. Welch reflected that he at least owed the lady no grudge, went forward to meet her.

The sun was behind her when she landed; but as she turned to greet him, he saw that she was curiously changed; almost in some indefinable way, beaten, defeated. She was carelessly dressed, her hat askew on her blond head, her flesh silk stockings slack, one side of her frock lower on its shoulder than the other. Martha used to be the very soul of neatness, daintiness. Welch wondered, but found nothing to say save:

"Glad to see you back." He could not add "Mrs. Lyle."

Martha laughed unpleasantly.

"It's well some one is," she said. She was opening her mouth to go on, when one of the boat boys, an Orokiva, started the Orokiva death cry. It was instantly taken up, in various tones, by the rest of the crew, and for a minute or two the air, the lake, rang with those wild, inhuman cries, in which the Papuan native expresses his protest against the common lot of mankind; his melancholy forecast of the inevitable doom that will, some day, fall upon himself.

Welch stopped them as soon as he could; he was not without a certain private forecast of his own, warning him of the unhealthiness of such noises at that time and in that place. But the cries, and the name that went and came among them, had told their tale. It seemed to affect Royden somewhat strangely. He walked up to Martha, and, staring down from his bulky height at her fragile beauty, blurred and diminished by weariness, emotion and distress—he spoke.

"So he's dead? So you've come back?"

"Yes," said Martha, scarcely looking at him. Her voice seemed hardened, indefinitely changed.

"So," went on Royden, coolly dropping the subject of death, as though it had been of no account. "So you're Mrs. Smith, are you?" He stared at her, almost brutally. "Did he force you to marry him?" he demanded, roughly.

She did not seem to mind; some thought, entirely alien from Royden and his affairs or feelings, seemed to hold possession of her.

"No," she answered. "And I'm not Mrs. Smith."

"One must not call a lady a liar," declared Royden, his tone edged with satire. It seemed to rouse her. She turned and looked at him. "I'm not a liar," she told him, calmly. "I'm Lady Wilsdon."

Hugh Royden said nothing. He was still strangely colored, though less pale, when he found his voice."

"I think," he said, "I understand. I understand—quite a number of things." In that moment one could see the great gentleman in Hugh Royden; the man of ancient honorable race, to whom "Noblesse oblige" was not empty motto. The soldier, too, who could take a death wound smiling.

"I must," he said, turning towards Welch, "have appeared quite extraordinarily stupid of late. No doubt I was the only person who did not understand the state of the case."

Nobody answered him. Martha had dropped, as if utterly wearied, on a log and was staring at her little, muddled shoes. Presently she looked up.

"He died very suddenly," she said. "I don't understand. It was only an hour ago. We were together, talking, and he fell down, and his face turned a strange color. So I said, 'What is it?' and he said 'I think, love, death'—so oddly, just like that—and then he said something else I couldn't understand about an arm and a clot——"

"Ah!" broke in Welch. "I understand. Do you remember the first night we saw Antares? When—Smith—had injured an artery? Not at all an uncommon case—clot stopping the heart."

Martha did not answer him. "So then," she went on, "he asked me to kiss him, and he said—'Goodby—we——"

Something in the eyes of Hugh Royden checked her. "Where was I?" she asked peevishly. "O, yes. And then he just died. And I had hysterics. And one of the boys came along and said things about the Taubada being dead, and put the flag up, and the engineers brought me over. So that's all."

"O, not quite all," observed Hugh Royden. "You are Lady Royden, you know."

"And you are Lord Royden, ain't you?" demanded Welch.

"It's a little confusing," allowed Royden, in such a smooth, pleasant voice that Martha knew him to be desperately angry; and by the tiny watch light of that knowledge began to collect her shattered hopes. When they cared, they were always angry about things. It was only when they were getting tired that they became easy and good-natured.

"A little confusing," Royden said. "First I hear from the magistrate fellow that my grandfather's dead. So I infer that I have the title. And then I hear that I hadn't, but at the same time that I have. One will get used to it by and by. To be a beggar, and a millionaire, and then a beggar again, and then the other thing again, all inside a couple of days, is rather—wearing."

"A beggar—that's putting it rather strongly," objected Welch. "Surely you'd have had something."

"Quite surely not. My grandfather entailed every cent on the heir."

"Then Smith—I can't help calling him so—was a millionaire as well as a peer, for a day?"

Royden ignored the question of Smith; chose not to speak of Smith; waved him away, in fine. Welch looked at him oddly, out of narrowed eyes. "There's something you've forgotten," he thought.

If Royden had forgotten something, Martha, it seemed, had remembered something. She began to revive, like a flower after rain. Her head went up a little. She pulled her frock straight on her shoulder; felt her hat; coolly adjusted her stockings. Out of a bag she slipped a little mirror and began to powder her face. "I've been crying such quarts of tears over the poor dear," she explained. "I feel absolutely heart broken. It was so sad. Of course—our little day on the island—a sort of picnic together—it wasn't long enough to take things seriously. It was all like a dream, a strange dream, to me." A dream-like expression stole over her face, illustratively.

"Where's the corpse?" asked Welch.

She stared, almost too visibly, at his roughness.

"We closed the door and left him," she said in a hushed voice.

"The dead lion," mocked Hugh Royden. Martha finished the unspoken half of the sentence for herself. "If he likes to call himself a dog," she thought, "I shan't object. He is so dreadfully angry that I do believe—I do believe I may manage to pull it off yet. But goodness gracious, did ever any woman have such putrid luck?"

Welch had begun on his tappa again; he was smoothing a new piece into place. "By the way," he remarked, presently, "I suppose we may consider Lord Wilsdon master of the place now?"

"If the rotten place is worth considering," was Lord Wilsdon's reply.

"Then, my lord"—Welch was not given to my lording, but he wanted the title just then—"would you not like me to move out of the house, in order to leave room for your lordship's aunt?"

"My what? Who?" There were a dozen different flavors in Hugh's reply. Amazement, relief, dismay, incredulity, warred with each other, and with yet another feeling or two unnamed.

"For your aunt, Lady Wilsdon."

Martha, on that jumped to her feet. "How dare you?" she cried, furiously.

"I don't understand," said the innocent tamer of wild cats. "I seem to have incurred your ladyship's displeasure. I was merely asking about the rooms. As your ladyship knows, the house is——"

"You said I was his—aunt!"

"Well, and aren't you—my lady?" Welch's accents were very quiet, very gentle, but they carried; went home. Martha knew herself defeated; this time forever.

She had pluck; she called on it. With head held unnecessarily high, she turned to the tree ladder; called a boat boy to help her up and over it. "I shall go to the house," she said. "I suppose that red haired tomboy will be better than no company at all."

"Are you speaking of Antares?" cried Hugh. A sudden thought had struck him—an amazing, illuminating thought.

"She's speaking of Stella Antares—the Hon. Stella——" explained Welch. He had abandoned all pretense at tappa beating now. This scene was really too interesting.

"There seems," said Hugh Royden slowly, "to be a good many things that I haven't heard anything about. Stella Antares is one."

"O, if you didn't guess it," cried Martha, speaking in a very high key, and with extreme rapidity—the true accent of the shrew—"I promise you every one else did. Such a creature! Indecent—bold—brought up like a savage——" She stopped; her lower lip fell down. Hugh was not even listening. He did not see her; did not see the black, burning sands of the lake, the fiery golden water, the yacht, poised like a great bird a little way from shore. He saw a dusky room, half lit by native lamps; Smith taking his great bow down from the wall; himself, rough, hurried, and holding a pistol in his hand. He saw a slight figure crouched low on the mats at his feet, a hand—how white, how beautiful!—mutely refusing the instrument of death; he saw himself push the beautiful, humiliated creature away with his foot—— and in his honor. Although I do not pretend to be a poet, I snatched a black pencil from the make-up table and wrote these lines on the wall:

Today, with throbbing heart,
I entered thy art's shrine,
Oh, friend of many years!
But thou didst not reply to my greeting.
Snatched by cold death from sunny climes,
Thou liest in the earth!
My tears fell and,
Seeing my grief,
Thy muse wept,
Sharing my sorrow.

The overture started. At last came the Coronation scene. . . . To this day, I do not know who crowned me—the composer, my comrades, the artists, the chorus, the musicians, or the public. I only realized this—that on that evening I had indeed been crowned as an artist, at the Metropolitan opera house!

I intended to relate before this that one of the first things to claim my attention on my second visit to America was American womanhood.

I believe that in America, woman holds the most important place.

Traveling over America from coast to coast, I have noticed that the education and moral stability of the country seems to depend wholly upon women. Man in America works with his whole brain and all his muscles, but it is woman, who directs this brain and controls these muscles.

Finally, I must say, that a real American woman is a treasure and, that on the broad plains of this country, so rich with corn and wheat, woman is a flower that never fades!

After finishing my engagements in America, I returned to Russia, stopping in London for one or two concerts. In June, I again left Russia, this time taking with me members of my family.

I spent the summer at Bad Homburg, where my happiest occupation was playing with my little daughter, Dassie. If I had any worries, I forgot them all in the presence of this laughing little girl.

Before sailing for America, once more, I made a concert tour of the Scandinavian countries, Norway, Sweden and Denmark. Then came a long tour in the United States, which included both concerts and operatic performances.

the prosecutor. These were to the effect that if Holman wanted to find the solution of the riddle it would be well for him to investigate the affairs of the dead man's widow, Mrs. Ethel Bean.

Holman at this time knew nothing about the Beans' domestic situation. He heard, however, that all had not been going well between the woman and the guide she had married fifteen years before at the age of seventeen. He heard that the wife had been discontented with her lot, and also that the six-foot guide had found time for romance beyond the doors of his woodland home.

The prosecutor decided to investigate for himself.

So it was that in the middle of the winter, with the roads blocked by heavy snows, Holman set out from Farmington unannounced to make his way into Rangeley, forty-five miles away. He said nothing of this new track he was taking. The newspapers had long since forgotten Bean's death, for were not the guilty parties in jail awaiting trial?

Holman made his way through to Rangeley up the shores of Mooselookmeguntic lake in that dreary, snow-blanketed country, and went about his task. Among other things he learned that Mrs. Bean had left the Rangeleys to visit a sister in Portland. When he completed his work in the north he returned to Farmington and then visited Portland with the sheriff.

Still no word of what was to come.

On the eighth of February, 1923, the Franklin county grand jury was in session in Farmington. Mrs. Bean had left Portland a day before and had come to Farmington, stopping at a small hotel there. It was stated that she had been summoned to give testimony regarding the two suspects, Wheaton and Mawson.

On the afternoon of February 8 the grand jury reported a secret indictment against Mrs. Ethel Bean, charging her with the murder of her husband. At the same time the jury decided that no charges should be brought against Wheaton and Mawson.

An unusual scene followed. Farmington was locked in snow and ice; no trains would move through the town that night, and travel by automobile was impossible. Through the white stillness Sheriff Small and his deputies journeyed down the main street to the small hotel where the widow of the slain guide was sleeping. They roused her served the warrant charging her with murder and then escorted her to the county jail.

The plight of the lonely widow in a jail stirred northern Maine. And to add to the drama, the woman's sister, Mrs. George Hollis, of Portland, who was with her in Farmington when she was arrested, demanded that she be allowed to share her sister's cell in the county lockup.

The unusual request somewhat flabbergasted the county authorities, but after a day of denials they relented and permitted the vivacious Mrs. Hollis to enter the jail and share her sister's hardships.

With all Maine agog now at the turn taken in the case, a cry went up for a speedy trial for the widow. Cyril N. Blanchard, an attorney of Jay, Maine, hurried to Farmington to serve for the defense, and later it was announced that former Attorney General William R. Pattangall, of Augusta, one of the foremost lawyers in the state, had been enlisted in the woman's behalf.

Stage Set for Trial.

At the same time it was revealed that Attorney General K. W. Shaw would conduct the state's case.

With Mrs. Hollis continuing to live in the jail with her sister, the stage was quickly set and before February had passed, the trial was under way. On the eve of the trial, letters came from the slain guide's mother in Milan, N. H., offering consolation to the widow. Aubrey Bean, a brother of the murdered man, also came to her defense. The Bean family believed that the guide had been the victim of an attempted holdup.

From the county jail on the morning of February 26 Mrs. Bean, pale but with head high, a smile playing on her lips, strolled down the snow-covered road to the old wooden courthouse. When she entered the courtroom she saw the faces of many friends, and to these she nodded as she took her seat. The trial began.

Within two hours the jury was selected and within another hour the state made known what it claimed had been Mrs. Bean's chief motive for killing her husband.

Another woman!

The third person in the triangle, according to Holman, was a blue-eyed waitress at the Pleasant Island camps. Her name was Elsie Stewart and her blonde bobbed head was visible in the courtroom among the state's witnesses.

Bean, said the county prosecutor, had been a man of many romances. His wife had branded him a "bad man with women," and had often quarreled with him, one such quarrel lasting from 10 o'clock one evening until 2 a. m.

Bob Martin, the guide, told him he came across Bean's body and of seeing the two boys near the scene.

Constable Jendron testified that when he arrived in front of the garage door he saw footprints made by the woman's slipper half-way between the door and where the body was found. The prints, he said, were within twenty inches of prints made by a man's hobnailed shoe.

Herbert L. Welch, a neighbor, said that a short time before the shooting he heard a man and a woman talking in the road. He heard the man say, "Yep, I'll be right over!" He said the man's voice was that of Bean. Shortly afterward, said Welch, he heard the shots.

Mrs. Bert Kimball testified that she and her husband went away October 6 and left their home in the care of Mrs. Bean. The witness said Mrs. Bean had promised to look after the plants in the Kimball home.

The state brought out that although Bert Kimball's revolver had been taken, no edibles—or anything else in the house—had been touched.

On the third day of the trial Elsie Stewart took the stand.

Readily this young woman admitted that she had been the other woman in Bean's life. During September, 1922, he and she had been together every night but three, she said, and he had never left her before midnight. As for Bean and his wife, she said they always seemed "pleasant" together.

Another witness testified that Mrs. Bean had made the statement, "I'm going to get a rich man some day with an automobile and then I can have things."

During the testimony of Sheriff Small, cross-examination by the defense brought out that Small and Holman had tried to force Mrs. Bean to sign a confession of guilt.

At the end of the third day the state rested its case.

That evening, in the hotel where the contending lawyers, as well as Judge Charles J. Dunn, had their quarters, there were long conferences with the presiding judge. And the outcome of these talks was that when the trial was resumed in the morning, Judge Dunn made an address to the jury.

A Free Woman!

He stated that in his opinion the state had not put in a case strong enough to convict, that it was useless to proceed further and allow a defense to be made. He directed that the jury bring in at once a verdict of acquittal for Mrs. Bean.

The jury complied with alacrity.

Mrs. Bean, her face radiant, went to the jury box and shook hands with each of the jurymen. Friends gathered around her to congratulate her. Later, with her sister by her side at the hotel, she received reporters and gave them an interview.

Unruly tongues had been to blame for the melodrama, she said. The talk had started, she said, after she had left the Rangeleys to return to the solace of her parents' home in Portland. She insisted that on the night her husband was slain, when the news was brought to her, she thought of taking her own life.

That same day the sheriff sent a deputy on a tour of the shops with young Wheaton and Mawson, and the boys were decked out in new clothes. Then they were released and the following morning left Farmington on the same train which bore Mrs. Bean to Portland.

"I did my best," said Holman after the trial ended. "I went to the Rangeleys in the middle of the winter in an attempt to clear the thing up. I am sure the boys know nothing about the killing. It was a case of circumstanital evidence all the way through. I feel that I have done my duty, and that there is no other move I can take in the case."

but the high resolve of an intrepid gambler.

With a sigh of relief she took oft the earrrings, whipped off transformation, wiped away the sepia under the eyes. Rapidly she worked and deftly. Then, at length, she saw looking at her from out the mirror a tense, blazing girl, the waves of her vivid brown hair burning under the light—young, vibrant, resilent, defiant.

Holding her head high, she darted to the door. There she paused, her hand involuntarily rising to her breast as a shaft of apprehension stabbed her. Then she opened it. She stepped out into the hall.

Cumberland was waiting, near the entrance to the dancing apartment. Seeing her, he came down the corridor to meet her. He stopped short.

"Lorna Mulford!" There was something in his voice, a little catch, that exalted her, lifted her to the heights.

"Jack—do we go back to college, or do we stay here?"

"My girl! My radiant girl!" He came toward her. "As if you need ask!"

How Her Twin Sister Sees Vanderbilt Princess-to-Be

was 21 and another five millions on the death of his brother, Alfred G. Vanderbilt. The wife of a Vanderbilt doesn't have to make any social concessions. His mother, the dowager Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, regards Reggie as the apple of her eye. She has been awfully sweet to Reggie's wife and that approval in itself is enough to smooth Gloria's pathway wherever she goes.

Gloria and I were born abroad and lived abroad until we were twelve years old. And almost every summer, after we finally came to the United States to complete our education, back we had to trot to Antwerp or Brussels or wherever my father and mother happened to be. Then—Paris, Monte Carlo, Deauville, this watering place and that—the tedious routine began all over again. I suppose it was an interesting life after a fashion. We knew, young though we were, Lucerne, Stuttgart, Amsterdam, Barcelona, Hamburg, Antwerp, Brussels—all cities where my father was stationed.

Until we were nine Gloria and I knew no language but French. Then we learned Spanish. We still speak with a marked foreign accent. Our nursemaids and governesses were either French or Swiss or Dutch or Spanish or Belgian, depending on the country where father was representing the United States. I know the fairytales—and the swear words—of half the nations in Europe.

The result of this cosmopolitan childhood of ours, instead of making cosmopolites out of us, intensified our love for America. Our speech, our dress, our manners, and our standards were all foreign, but our hearts were red-white-and-blue — and they still are!

WITH THE PUZZLE EDITOR

It's getting close to Christmas and the puzzle editor knows that you're as busy as you can be, writing letters to Santa Claus, figuring out gifts for other people, and doing all those pleasant and necessary things. Therefore the puzzles are a bit easy this week—sort of a vacation.

—1—

Here's a picture word square to start off the day, and it's in jumbled form. In other words, after you guess the words you must rearrange them to get the word square.

PICTURE WORD SQUARE

How about a little exercise in the ancient custom of beheading? After you have beheaded these four words, the first letters will form a word that means something that comes in winter.

1. Behead a winter vehicle and get "went in front of."
2. Behead tidy and get consume.
3. Behead uncovered and get a writing instrument.
4. Behead a sea animal and get healthy.

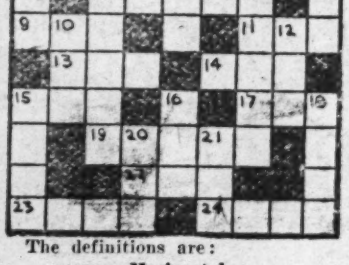

—3—

In this word diamond the key word is something that most of you are enjoying now. The second line is warm, the third means openings, and the fifth is a boy's nickname.

Wrestling Tricks Explained

by "YOUNG HACKENSMITH"
Chicago Y. M. C. A.
World's Champion Bantam and Featherweight Wrestler

"Young Hackensmith"

Any youth above the age of fifteen years, possessing a sound constitution and desiring to take up a course of athletic exercises, cannot do better than study wrestling. Younger boys while they cannot master the more difficult and strenuous parts of the sport, can learn some of the simpler holds and get plenty of good exercise while wrestling in their school or club gymnasium.
or club gymnasium.

The Referee's Hold.

At the beginning of a match both contestants generally assume the position shown in the photograph entitled the "Referee's Hold."

Neither man has an advantage in this pose and from it almost any other hold may be attempted. In this position, each man should be careful that his opponent does not out-wit him by a sudden movement and secure a dangerous hold.

In securing the referee's hold, place either hand, usually the left, around your opponent's neck. With the other grasp his upper arm, keeping your feet well back so that he cannot trip you. Watch every movement of his feet and hands. From this position you are ready to try for a good hold, such as the "waist lock."

The Waist Lock.

The waist lock is secured from either the rear or the front. To get to the rear of your opponent, seize your opponent's right hand with your left and raise it. Lunge forward under his arm, placing your right arm around his waist and turn around in back of him, putting your left arm around the other side of his waist. In this position you can raise him off his feet and he will be pretty much at your mercy.

The best way to take advantage of this hold is to put one foot behind your opponent's and fall sideways. Use your leverage and stay behind your opponent. See the illustration of this hold.

The Front Waist Hold.

Push back on opponent's head to secure an opening for the "waist hold."

When maneuvering to obtain it, you can best do it by suddenly thrusting forth either arm and pushing back your opponent's head. Press your forearm against the point of his chin. You can now lunge forward and thrust your arms around his waist as shown in the illustration.

The Waist Lock

The Side Chancery.

In the side chancery, place either arm around your opponent's neck arm powerfully toward your body, thus squeezing your opponent's neck.

When you have obtained the hold, drag your opponent forward to the mat. Do not lessen the strain on him at all. Then, with all your power, turn him away from you on his back and keeping the weight of your from the side. Grasp the wrist with your free hand and draw your bent body on him, force both shoulders flat on the mat.

Sometimes you may secure a fall by tripping your opponent when you have secured this hold. When the side chancery is obtained on yourself, thrust your left hand over your opponent's shoulder and seize his upper wrist with your other hand, endeavoring to loosen his grasp.

The Double Leg Hold.

To secure a double leg hold, lunge forward quickly and grasp your opponent's legs behind the knee joints.

Press your shoulders against his stomach. Endeavor to force his body back with your shoulders, and at the same time pull forward with your hands, drawing his legs from under him.

The Side Chancery

As he falls backward, lunge forward, keeping the weight of your body on his chest.

When the double leg hold is secured on yourself, thrust your hands under your opponent's and around his stomach and force him back as shown in the illustration.

Defense Against the Double Leg Hold

Standing Crotch and Half Nelson.

This hold can be secured from the referee's hold.

Throw your opponent's left arm over your head, shifting your left hand into a half nelson. At the same time reach with your right arm between his crotch around his outside leg, bringing your right shoulder well under his body, then lift him up and bring him to the mat.

Your opponent is now brought to the mat from the hold, shown in the illustration.

If you will raise up on his crotch he will be unable to bridge out and your fall will be secure.

Several other holds will be described in the next article.

POSERS!

Socrates was famous for his method of teaching, which was that of asking questions. Now we'll be Socrates and you be our pupils. It's easier to ask questions than it is to answer them.

1. Who said "I regret that I have but one life to give for my country?"
2. What was mark Twain's real name?
3. What is the capital of Alaska?
4. Which is called "the forest city?"
5. How long is a meter?
6. How many pounds are there in a long ton?
7. What state is called the "Green Mountain" state?
8. What is the largest island in the world?

AND FOR AVIATORS.

Bill: What is Bob so pleased about?

Harold: He's got an idea for an invention that will make him a millionaire.

Bill. Well, what is the big idea?

Harold: A cake of flying soap for shower baths.

EDITORIAL

SAVE YOUR BOOKS

The other day a friend and I were discussing a certain occasion in history, and some doubt arose as to some of the facts about the event. Said my friend, "I'll look that up tonight when I get home. I know just where I can find it in my old school history."

Some day all you boys and girls will have libraries of your own. Some of them will be large and some of them will be small, but all of them should be as useful as possible. And among the most useful things you can have in a library are your old school text books.

For example, your geography has clear and simple maps, your grammar puts rules of speech as clearly as any book could, and your physiology tells you simple facts about the body in small space. Most of the books you use now, of course belong to the schools, but as you acquire your own text books in high school and in college, sort them carefully before getting rid of any of them. Many may form the very practical and useful backbone for a library in later years.

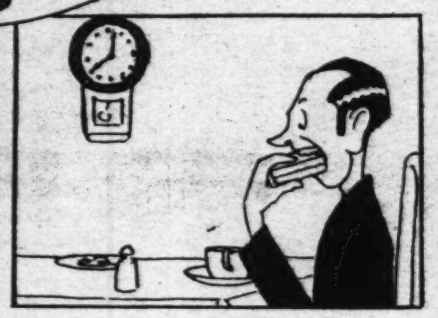

RIDDLES.

Here are a bunch of riddles that the editor collected for you without the help of any of the readers. But some of the readers are going to need help before they are through trying to guess the answers.

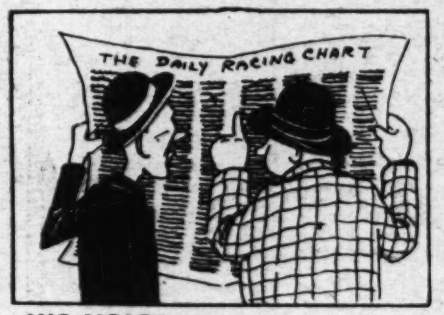

1. To what profession does a postman belong?
2. Why has the shoemaker wonderful powers of resistance?
3. Why are doctors like thieves?
4. Why are hogs like trees?
5. At what time of life does a man belong to the vegetable kingdom?

The Ghost at Faversham's

A Story of Mystery and Hidden Treasure

BY W. BOYCE MORGAN

SYNOPSIS.

Clay Martin is staying at Grayson academy over the Christmas holidays and working in the village postoffice because of his father's financial difficulties. He takes a special delivery letter to Lloyd Faversham, another student at the academy, and Lloyd tells him it is from his guardian, James Fabian. Lloyd and his twin sister, Dot, had lived with their rich grandfather at Kentville after the death of their parents, but now their grandfather has died and his will makes Fabian, his former secretary, their guardian. Fabian has written to Lloyd that his grandfather left little money, and that he and his sister must leave school. Suspecting that Fabian is robbing him, Lloyd resolves to go at once to Kentville and investigate. He persuades Clay to accompany him, and after wiring his sister that they are going, the two boys leave early the next morning. They reach Kentville after an all-day trip, and are about to take a cab to the deserted Faversham homestead, when the driver tells them that the place has been haunted since the death of Lloyd's grandfather.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT III.

For a few seconds after the old driver's announcement, Clay and Lloyd gazed at him in silence. Finally Clay chuckled.

"I'm glad I came," he cried. "This begins to sound interesting."

Lloyd's face was sober.

"What do you mean, my home is haunted?" he said to the driver.

"I mean jest what I says!" affirmed the driver, as they climbed into the cab. "There's been funny goin's-on up at that place since last summer. Nobody in this town'll go near it. And I ain't advisin' you to, neither."

Lloyd glanced at Clay. "Nonsense!" he cried. "We aren't going to let anything like this scare us away, are we, Clay?"

"I should say not!" scoffed Clay. "I'm all the more anxious to go now."

"Well," said the driver dubiously, "go if you must, but don't be sayin' I didn't warn you. And—" here his voice sank to an impressive whisper. —"don't, whatever you do, stay there all night. At night's when these things happen."

"What things?" demanded Lloyd.

"Oh, strange lights, and noises, and things like that. Lots of people has seen 'em, but nobody goes up there any more."

The boys grinned at each other—not without some effort, and sat in silence as the rickety car jolted over the narrow road. They came to the shore of the lake, and finally Lloyd pointed out a big, wandering house set on a knoll at the water's edge.

"That's it," he said to Clay.

The driver took them to the drive way, but refused to go farther, so they paid him off and trudged up the walk to the deserted house.

The early winter dusk had already fallen, and a weary wind sighed through the pine trees that surrounded the house. As they approached the big, open porch, Clay suddenly uttered an exclamation and stooped over.

"Well," he announced, "that old man said nobody comes near here, but if those aren't tracks, I never saw any!"

Lloyd gazed down and saw the unmistakable print of a man's shoes in the light snow. His eyes were troubled as he looked at Clay, But Clay laughed and hopped up on the porch.

Lloyd inserted a key in the rusty lock, and they entered the huge, cold, silent place. Dust lay thickly over everything.

"It sure is deserted," commented Lloyd. "Well, let's get a fire going in the fireplace. Then I'm going to start a search. I don't know what I expect to find, but I won't be satisfied until I go over all the things that are left here."

Wood was found in the back yard, and a cheery fire roaring in the fireplace of the big, empty living room drove away some of the gloom that pervaded in the old dwelling.

"Now let's start looking," said Lloyd. "There's a wall safe in that next room. We'll tryk that first. I feel pretty sure that grandfather kept a lot of his things there."

They entered a small room off the one they were in, and Lloyd pointed out a panel in the wall. Pushing it aside, they saw the knobs of a safe.

"Locked!" announced Clay, after trying it. "Do you know the combination?"

"No," confessed Lloyd. "But I suppose it's empty anyway. If there was anything in it, Fabian has probably got it."

Then they began a systematic search of the whole house. A desk in the den was filled with papers, but they went through them without making any discovery of importance.

"My only hope," announced Lloyd, "is that we'll come across something that will prove grandfather had more money than Fabian makes out. If we can do that, I'll be sure that he has robbed us."

Having completed their examination of the lower rooms, the two boys climbed the wide staircase to the second floor. By this time the evening was well advanced, and the cold house was a dreary, forbidding place. The gas had been turned off, and their only light was a sooty oil lamp that they had found in the kitchen.

As they worked in the silent house something of its atmosphere affected the boys, and even Clay lost some of his cheerfulness. It was not without some reluctance that they entered the room in which old Mr. Faversham had lain while he was ill. Nevertheless they examined it thoroughly, but without result.

"Well, I'm afraid our trip has been in vain," sighed Lloyd. "And for one, I'm ready to go to bed. We can sleep in one of these rooms up here. It will be cold, but we can find lots of covers. In the morning we'll have one last look, and I guess that's all we can do."

The sighing of the wind was the only sound they could hear as they put out the fire in the living room and climbed the stairs to the second floor. Darkness, except for their one lamp, was thick all about them. Choosing a room that was sheltered from the lake wind, they piled covers on the bed and lay down, removing only their coats and shoes.

They talked for a while in low tones, but their voices sounded so small in the huge house that they soon were silent, and finally both of them were breathing deeply and easily. Then suddenly Clay was sitting bolt upright in bed, conscious that something had awakened him.

"Lloyd!" he whispered hoarsely. "Did you hear anything?"

"Something woke me up," re turned the other. "What was it?"

"Listen!" commanded Clay. Straining their ears, they heard only the noise of the wind for a moment. And then, from below came a faint, irregular knocking.

(To Be Continued Next Week.)

"Pushing it aside, they saw the knobs of a safe."

HOW TO MAKE A PAPER KNIFE

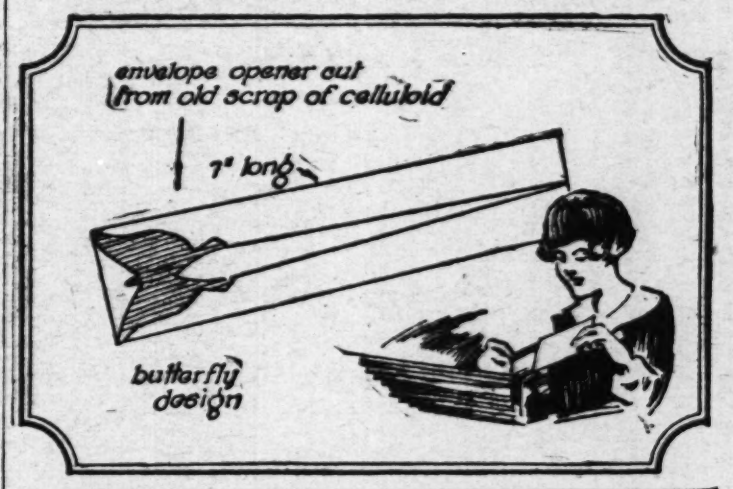

If you have a large celluloid comb that is no longer useful because many of the teeth have been broken out, save the back. It will give just the right amount of the right kind of material for a pretty paper knife like the one shown.

First lay out the design on the celluloid with ink. You can make a perfect pattern from paper by folding it once, then cutting out the design with a pair of shears. Then unfold and fasten to the strip with paste or glue. (This can later be washed off.) In fact, the paper design can be pasted down tight all the way around and left while the shaping is done. Otherwise, carefully mark the outlines with ink, then use these for the guide lines.

For the actual cutting, a grindstone or emery wheel will be best. Hold the celluloid firmly against the wheel at right angles and remove the surplus celluloid. When this has been done smooth down the edges all around with fine sandpaper or emery cloth, then sharpen the edges by rounding off the edges.

Some dyes, particularly any aniline dye, usually penetrate celluloid. If the strip is clear, you can color the portion showing the butterfly outline, with dye.

This is a useful article which will find a constant use in your room for cutting paper or opening your mail, or it can be offered as a gift.

Friction Uses Half Our Force

Is isn't very hard to walk along the sidewalk, but if you try to push a heavy box along, it is a different story. This is not because of the weight of the box, in itself, but because of friction, the rubbing of the box against the pavement.

Half of the energy used in the world is used in overcoming the mighty forces of friction, although we could not do so much unless it were present. Oil is put on machinery to overcome friction. Wheels are used for the same purpose.

As hard as men try to overcome friction, they could not live without it. For one thing, we could not walk, because if one foot did not stick to the ground while the other was being brought forward, we could get nowhere, but would be continually sliding, jdst as a fellow who is on very slippery ice and tries to walk. Nor conld automobiles run if it were not for some friction.

Engineers and mechanics are forever trying to get less friction in their machines, but they will never succeed in eliminating it entirely, and they do not want to, because the machines would not run at all then.

OVER THE HILLS, ETC.

"Was your barn hurt during the cyclone?"

"I dunno, I aint' found it yet."

What Is Doggy About Dogwood?

What is there that is "doggy" about the dogwood? You may examine it closely expecting to find some reason for the name—of course it has a bark, but so have trees and other plants—it has no flower that looks like a dog's head. As a matter of fact, a dog didn't have anything at all to do with the naming of this plant.

There are several stories concerning its name, but it is believed to be a contraction of "daggerwood." Dogwood is very hard and can be polished smoothly to a very fine point. For this reason it was used to make daggers. Even now it is used to make those minature "daggers" or skewers that the butcher sticks in the roast. From the name "daggerwood" it was contracted to "dagwood" and then to its present name, "dogwood."

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter 58—Glimpses of Roman Life.

By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

FROM VERY EARLY TIMES THE PEOPLE OF ROME WERE DIVIDED INTO TWO CLASSES — THE PATRICIANS AND THE PLEBIANS. THE FORMER WERE THE OLD, ARISTOCRATIC WEALTHY FAMILIES, THE LATTER WERE THE POOR FREEMEN. THESE TWO CLASSES WERE ALWAYS QUARRELING, AND FREQUENTLY CAME TO BLOWS.

ROME, UNDER THE REPUBLIC, WAS GOVERNED BY TWO CONSULS (ELECTED EACH YEAR) AND THE SENATE. THE SENATE WAS A BODY OF MEN REPRESENTING THE ROMAN TRIBES. IT WAS AT FIRST A COUNCIL OF ELDERS AND TOOK ITS NAME FROM THE LATIN WORD "SENEX", MEANING "OLD MAN."

FOR A LONG TIME ROME HAD NO WRITTEN LAWS, AND THE PATRICIANS WHO PICKED THE JUDGES WERE ABLE TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE PLEBIANS. AT LAST, THE PLEBIANS DEMANDED THAT A CODE OF LAWS, FAIR TO BOTH SIDES, BE DRAWN UP, AND THE SENATE SENT MEN TO GREECE TO STUDY THE LAWS OF THAT COUNTRY AND SELECT THE BEST.

UPON THE RETURN OF THE COMMISSION, TEN MEN WERE CHOSEN TO DRAW UP A CODE. THE NEW LAWS, KNOWN AS THE "12 TABLES," WERE COMPLETED IN 451 B.C. AND PLACED IN THE FORUM WHERE ALL ROMANS MIGHT READ THEM. HENCEFORTH, ROMAN BOYS WERE REQUIRED TO MEMORIZE THESE LAWS.

MANY OF THE NEW LAWS WERE HARSH. MEN WERE SEVERELY WHIPPED WITH RODS FOR SLIGHT OFFENSES, WHILE FOR MANY CRIMES THE CULPRITS HAD THEIR HEADS CUT OFF. MEN CALLED "LICTORS," CARRYING BUNDLES OF RODS AND AXES FOLLOWED THE CONSULS ABOUT AND WERE EVER READY TO PUNISH CRIMINALS.

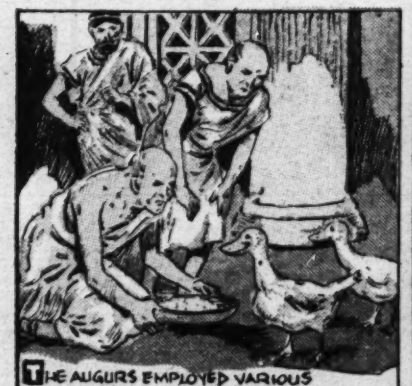

THE GODS OF THE ROMANS, LIKE THEIR LAWS, WERE "BORROWED" FROM THE GREEKS. A TEMPLE WAS ERECTED TO EACH GOD AND GODDESS UNTIL ROME WAS FILLED WITH THESE IMPOSING EDIFICES. FINALLY, THE ROMANS BUILT A HUGE TEMPLE CALLED THE "PANTHEON" IN WHICH STATUES OF

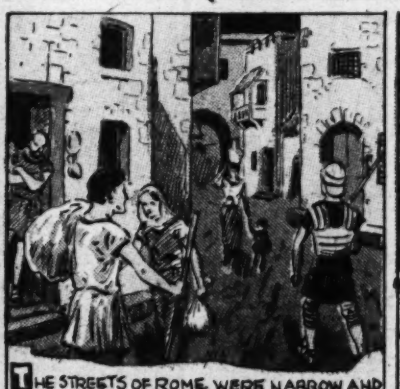

ALL THE GODS WERE PLACED. WHENEVER THE PEOPLE FELT THEY NEEDED THE AID OF A CERTAIN GOD, THEY WOULD FORM A PROCESSION, MARCH TO HIS TEMPLE AND SACRIFICE A LAMB, A GOAT OR A BULL UPON THE ALTAR AS A GIFT TO WIN THE FAVOR OF THE GOD.

THE ROMANS WERE VERY SUPERSTITIOUS AND FIRMLY BELIEVED IN "SIGNS". NO ROMAN WOULD BEGIN AN UNDERTAKING WITHOUT FIRST CONSULTING AN "AUGUR," A SORT OF PRIEST WHO WAS SUPPOSED TO BE ABLE TO INTERPRET OMENS, TO SEE IF THE "SIGNS" FAVORED THE ENTERPRISE.

THE AUGURS EMPLOYED VARIOUS MEANS TO "READ THE SIGNS." SOMETIMES THEY OFFERED GRAIN TO THE SACRED GEESE. IF THE FOWLS REFUSED TO EAT, IT WAS CONSIDERED AN ILL OMEN. AT OTHER TIMES THE AUGURS WATCHED THE FLIGHT OF BIRDS OR CUT UP ANIMALS TO LOOK INSIDE FOR "SIGNS."

THE STREETS OF ROME WERE NARROW AND CROOKED. THIS WAS BECAUSE WHEN THE CITY WAS REBUILT AFTER ITS DESTRUCTION BY THE GAULS (390 B.C.) EACH MAN PLACED HIS HOUSE WHEREVER HE PLEASED. THIS UNSIGHTLY CONDITION WAS NOT REMEDIED UNTIL AFTER THE GREAT FIRE DURING THE REIGN OF NERO.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

IN THE "ATRIUM" OR LIVING ROOM OF EVERY ROMAN PATRICIAN'S HOUSE WAS A BATHING TANK OR POOL, FED BY A FOUNTAIN. THIS WAS, OF COURSE, THE FAVORITE PLAYGROUND OF THE CHILDREN OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

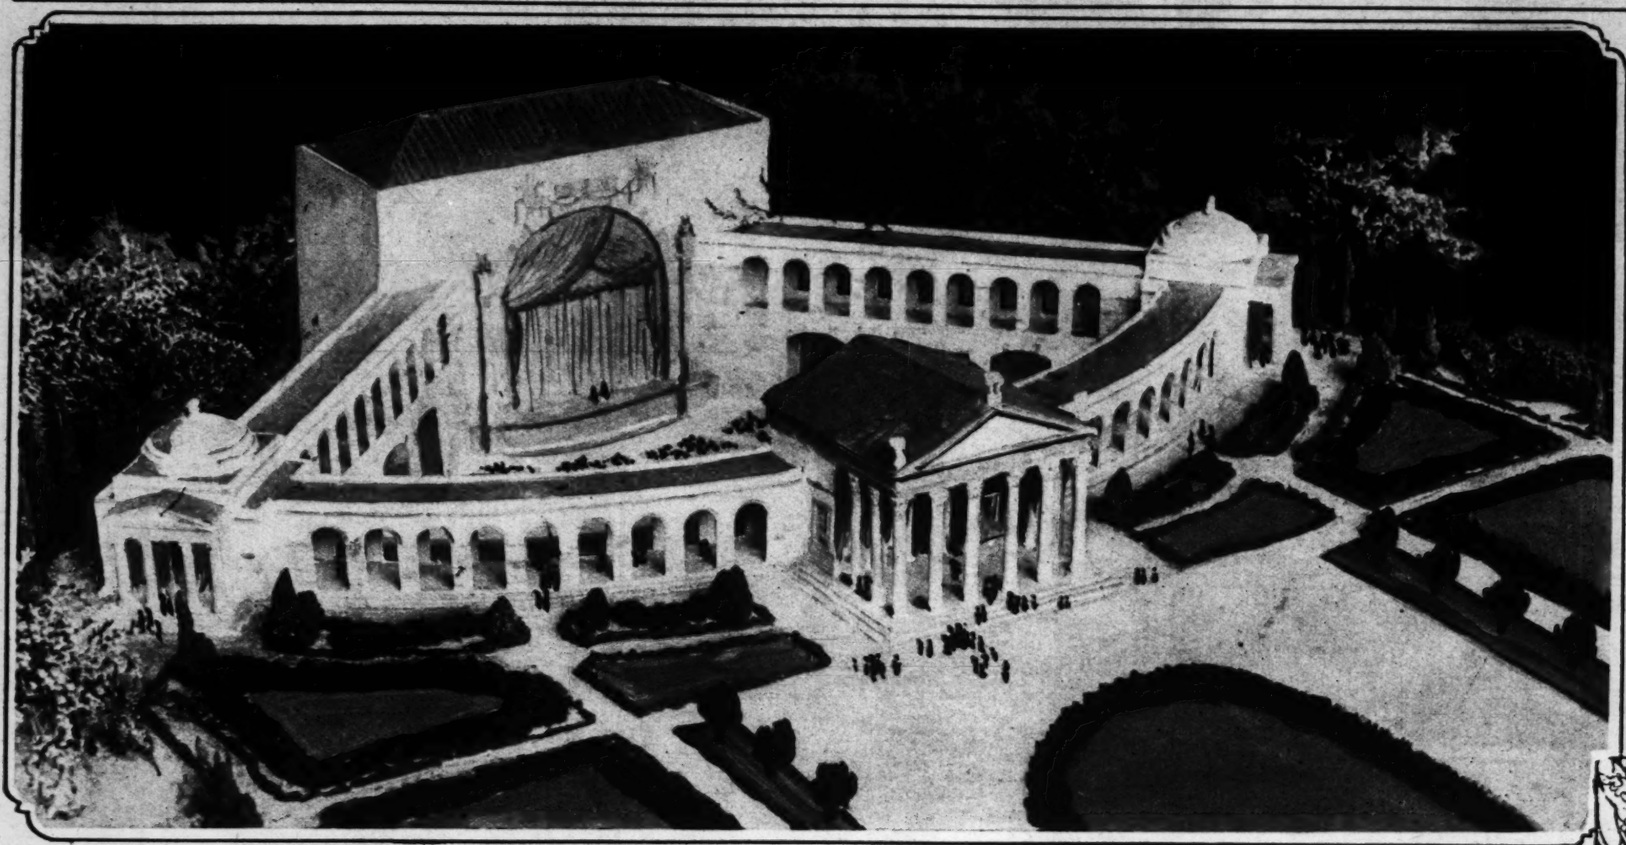

THE DINING ROOM OF A PATRICIAN'S HOME WAS CALLED THE "TRICLINIUM" OR "THREE COUCH ROOM," BECAUSE OF THE LOW COUCHES PLACED AT THREE SIDES OF THE TABLE. THE MEN RECLINED WHILE THEY ATE, BUT WOMEN AND CHILDREN WERE MADE TO SIT UP AT THE TABLE.

SUGGESTED AMERICAN LEGION MEMORIAL AT PIEDMONT PARK—This is a reproduction of the model made from the plans of Hentz, Adler and Shutze, Atlanta architects, for the proposed municipal open air amphitheatre to be erected in Piedmont park as a memorial to Atlanta's World War heroes. As will be recalled Charles Howard Candler, prominent Atlanta citizen, has for a long time been actively interested in the inauguration of a movement for an open air amphitheatre for summer opera and other outdoor public functions in Atlanta. Members of the American Legion have suggested that it take the form of a memorial to Atlanta's World War heroes, and at Mr. Candler's suggestion Hentz, Adler & Shutze prepared tentative plans providing for a great amphitheatre with a seating capacity of three thousand. This attractive model will soon be placed on public exhibition. (Francis E. Price)

When you dine at the Biltmore

Eating becomes a glorious adventure! Is your appetite fickle? Perhaps a bit of Beluga Caviar might tempt it; or maybe you prefer olives. Perchance an English Mutton Chop from the shires of old England, of royal thickness and superb succulence? Of course, a dish of tasty ham and turnip greens is hard to beat. You may have your choice; topped off with a bit of Puritanical Pumpkin Pie of such deliciousness that you instinctively grace it with a capital P.... unless, of course, your taste becomes aristocratic and craves the more cavalier Peach Melba..... regardless of what your taste craves, it is here; from the seven seas dainty viands have been gathered—and listen! A Biltmore dish is distinctive; no skimping of quality, and always prepared by competent chefs who have been trained as only Biltmore chefs are trained. Why not have dinner here tonight?

HOLLINGSWORTH'S UNUSUAL CANDIES FOR CHRISTMAS

UNUSUAL CANDIES!
A slice of Georgia peach floating in its own juices, captured in a shell of rich, smooth chocolate.

FOR CHRISTMAS—
My Hobby Box in an especially decorated cover.

OF COURSE, there will be a tree . . . and bulging stockings by the mantel. There will be a jingle of bells . . . a "Merry Christmas to all." . . . But remember that one of the choicest Christmas gifts for all "who love fine things" is this special holiday-wrapped My Hobby Box by Hollingsworth. . .

If you've tried the pieces in My Hobby Box, you already know what a delicious treat it holds for you. Chocolate honey-kuma made of cracked pistachio nuts, almonds and pecans stirred into a honey fondant. Spanish style candy fruit cake covered with soft melt-in-your-mouth caramel.

If you remember . . . My Hobby Box has very few creams—most of the pieces being fruits and nuts and other unusual things. You'll find Brazils, covered with fresh fruit fondant and chocolate coated. Milk chocolate almonds. Caramels rich in butter and cream. (Some with nuts, some chocolate covered.)

Hollingsworth's famous fruit pieces, floating in their own rich juices and sealed within shells of chocolate. These delightful things . . . and more!

Hollingsworth's candy is a perfect Christmas gift. My Hobby Box is the Hollingsworth specialty. The Hollingsworth agency near you, one of the finer drug stores in your neighborhood, will gladly have it delivered in the special holiday wrapper for you. It comes in one, two, three and five pound sizes. $1.50 the pound. Virgil Hollingsworth, Augusta, Ga.

All Atlanta Puts Stamp of Approval on The New Ford

All Atlanta marveled as the day dawned that revealed the New Ford Car. Eager throngs crowded the Atlanta Ford Plant and the dealers' display rooms in this section at an early hour. No other motor car in the history of the industry, regardless of style or price, ever created such favorable comment or such heated enthusiasm. Public sentiment ran rampant, and the general question of "Have you seen the new Ford?" brought answers from the thousands that were able to edge their way into view of the remarkable models that were first displayed.

Truly, such an achievement in motor car construction deserved its praise, and those who saw were quick to spread the news of this mighty value, heretofore unequaled. At the remarkably low prices there can be no other car that offers such luxurious transportation for so little cost. Before you decide upon a car—see the new Ford. Call at any of the dealers listed below. They will gladly give you a most satisfactory and pleasing explanation of the many new Ford features.

This photograph shows the low, graceful lines of the new Ford Tudor Sedan. Smart and fleet, yet sturdy and substantial. Generous seat space and ample leg room. Deep cushions. Rich upholstery. Full-nickeled hardware and all appointments in quiet good taste. Your choice of a variety of colors.

This new Ford Sport Coupe combines town-car style with speed, comfort, safety, reliability, economy and low price. Richly appointed throughout. Finished in a variety of beautiful colors—an unusual feature in a low-price car. Standard equipment includes rumble seat, four-wheel brakes, hydraulic shock absorbers and shatter-proof safety glass.

Ford

More than a new automobile
More than a new model

The new Ford is the advanced expression of a wholly new idea in modern, economical transportation

THE new Ford is more than a new automobile—more than just a new model. It is the advanced expression of a wholly new idea in modern, economical transportation.

It is important not only because of what it is, but because of the far-reaching effect it will have on the business and social life of the entire country.

Because of the new Ford, millions of people will be able to do more and better work—increase their earning capacity—and have more well-earned leisure to spend with their families and in the great out-of-doors.

Business of every kind will go forward at a swifter pace because of this new car. Thousands of miles of good roads will follow it wherever it goes.

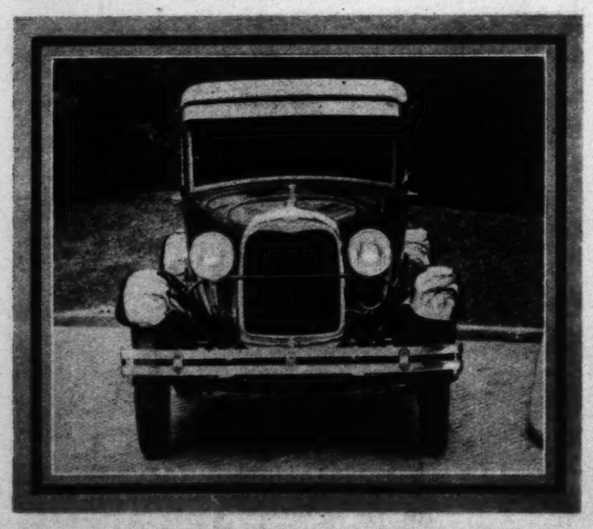

For now, for the first time, it is possible for you to get a really fine automobile at a low price. The performance of the new Ford is comparable in every respect with that of cars selling for hundreds of dollars more than the price of the new Ford.

The new Ford will do 55 to 65 miles an hour, and that means you will have speed enough for every need and emergency.

It is quick and easy to handle in traffic. With a Tudor Sedan body and a two-passenger load, it has accelerated from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 8½ seconds. It has four-wheel brakes and a shatter-proof glass windshield to give you the safety demanded by modern motoring conditions. The multiple dry-disc clutch and the standard gear shift with roller bearings add to your ease and enjoyment in driving.

New comfort is brought to you in the new Ford because of its hydraulic shock absorbers, low center of gravity, minimum unsprung weight and the easy-riding qualities of the transverse springs. All body types have generous oversize seat space and ample leg room—all are finished in a variety of colors and are richly appointed throughout.

Above all, you will find the new Ford a great car to own and drive because of its day-after-day and year-after-year reliability and low cost of up-keep.

This photograph shows the good-looking front ensemble of the new Ford. Simple, graceful, yet undeniably sturdy and capable. The wide radiator and headlights are full-nickeled. Full-crown fenders carry out the impression of fleetness.

The new Ford Roadster is a car for Youth and the Country Club. Low, smart, rakish and as speedy as it looks. Finished in a variety of beautiful colors.

Twenty to thirty miles per gallon of gasoline is just one example of the economy of this car. The real quality that has been built into every part of it means freedom from trouble, long life, and a saving of many dollars a year in repair bills.

In short, everything that you want and need in a motor car is given to you in the new Ford—speed, comfort, safety, beauty, reliability and economy combined to an uncommon degree.

The low price is the result of production economies and manufacturing methods as unusual as the car itself.

By all means, see this new Ford car as soon as possible. Inspect it carefully part by part. Arrange to drive it yourself and test its performance under all conditions. You will know then that there is nothing quite like it anywhere in design, quality and price.

The Roadster sells for $385; the Phaeton for $395; the Tudor Sedan for $495; the Coupe for $495; the Sport Coupe for $550; the Fordor Sedan for $570. (All prices are F. O. B. Detroit.)

THE GUMPS

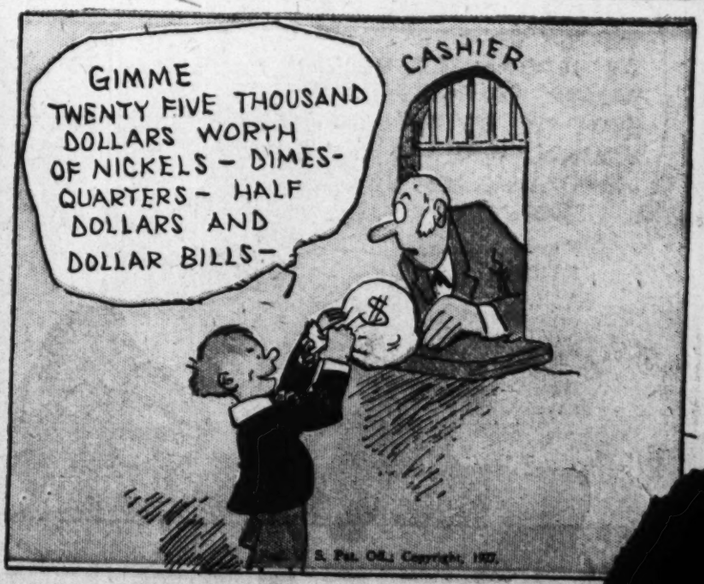

Little Orphan Annie

HAROLD GRAY

I DON'T WANTA BOTHER YUH, SANTA- I KNOW YER AWFUL BUSY RIGHT NOW- BUT I THOUGHT YUH OUGHTA HAVE THAT LIST- IT'S JUST A FEW KIDS I KNOW, WHO HAVEN'T ANY FOLKS TO TELL YUH 'BOUT 'EM- AN' YOU'VE BEEN MISSIN' 'EM SO FAR EVERY YEAR- COURSE I DON'T BLAME YUH, BUT I SORTA FELT YOU'D BE GLAD TO KNOW 'BOUT 'EM IN TIME, THIS YEAR-

WELL, I GOT EVER'THING- PEN, INK, PAPER AND AN ENV'LOPE- NOW WE'LL GET TO-GETHER AN' FIGGER OUT WHAT WE'RE GOIN' TO SAY-

GEE!

WHERE'S JIM? DID HE GET SLEEPY?

YES, I JUST PUT HIM TO BED-

WE CAN STAY UP A WHILE, CAN'T WE, ANNIE?

NOW LET'S SEE- FIRST WE'VE GOTTA TELL SANTA WHERE WE LIVE- "END O' CORK- SCREW ALLEY, SMOKY HOLLOW- DEC. 18, 1927- DEAR SANTA CLAUS:—"

CAN I ASK HIM FOR A SLED, ANNIE? CAN I?

GEE'. I'D LIKE A DRUM-

I'VE ALWAYS WISHED I HAD A DOLL- 'TWOULDN'T HAVE TO BE SUCH A BIG DOLL OR NOTHIN'-

HM-M-M--- I DON'T KNOW IF IT WOULD BE SUCH A GOOD STUNT TO SAY JUST WHAT YUH WANT- YUH SEE IF HE WAS OUT O' THOSE THINGS YUH MIGHT GET NOTHIN' AT ALL- NO- I WOULDN'T ASK SANTA FOR ANY 'SPECIAL THINGS-

YUH SEE SANTA'S A REG'LAR GUY, HE IS- 'BOUT ALL YUH WANT TO DO IS TELL HIM YER NAME AN' WHERE YUH LIVE AN' SORTA LEAVE TH' REST UP TO HIM- HE ALWAYS DOES TH' BEST HE CAN FOR GOOD KIDS- HE SEEMS TO KNOW WHAT YUH WANT MOST WITHOUT BEIN' TOLD, TOO-

LET'S SAY THIS- "DEAR SANTA CLAUS!- THIS IS JUST TO REMIND YUH THAT WE'LL ALL BE LOOKIN' FOR YUH CHRISTMAS EVE- WE'VE BEEN GOOD AS WE KNOW HOW ALL YEAR, BUT WE'RE NOT ASKIN' FOR VERY MUCH- WE'LL BE TICKLED TO GET ANYTHING YUH FEEL LIKE GIVIN' US- LOVE FROM ALL OF US AN' A MERRY XMAS AN' A HAPPY NEW YEAR"- NOW WE'LL ALL SIGN OUR NAMES AN' JIM'S-

THERE- YUH SEE WHEN HE GETS THAT LETTER HE'LL KNOW WE'RE NOT LITTLE PIGS- WE'RE NOT ASKIN' FOR A LOTTA STUFF- HE'LL DO LOTS MORE FOR US, MOST LIKELY, 'N IF WE HAD—

NOW IT'S WAY AFTER BEDTIME- YOU KNOW SANTA LIKES GOOD KIDS WHO DON'T SIT UP LATE- SO HUSTLE, NOW- HIT TH' HAY-

GEE- IF SANTA'D ONLY BRING ME A DOLLIE-

I WON'T ASK, BUT I'D SURE LIKE A SLED-

DO YUH THINK SANTA CLAUS KNOWS IF WE REALLY GO TO BED OR NOT? I'M NOT A BIT SLEEPY-

BET YER LIFE HE KNOWS- NOW YOU BIRDS QUIET DOWN AN' SHUT YER EYES- YOU'LL BE ASLEEP IN NO TIME- AN' DON'T TALK ANY MORE OR YOU'LL WAKE JIM-

GEE- CHRISTMAS CAN BE TH' HAPPIEST TIME O' TH' YEAR--- OR IT CAN BE TH' SADDEST- BUT IT'S GOIN' TO BE TH' HAPPIEST 'ROUND HERE, IF I'VE GOT ANYTHING TO DO 'BOUT IT-

POOR LITTLE TYKES- WHAT CHANCE HAVE THEY GOT? NO FOLKS- NOTHIN' TO LOOK FORWARD TO BUT BEIN' POOR AN' HAVIN' TROUBLE- BUT THEY'RE TOO LITTLE TO KNOW WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT, YET- AN' I'M GOIN' TO KEEP 'EM FROM FINDIN' OUT, LONG AS I CAN-

AFTER ALL I'VE TOLD 'EM I'VE JUST GOT TO SEE TO IT THAT SANTA CLAUS DOES HIS STUFF- WONDER WHY IT IS TH' WORLD'S GOT TO BE SO DARNED FULL OF UNHAPPINESS WHEN SOME FOLKS HAVE SO MUCH AN' IT TAKES SO LITTLE TO MAKE POOR KIDS LIKE THAT HAPPY-

YOU KNOW JIM GOOFUS, DON'T YOU?

NOPE! WHAT ABOUT HIM?

SURE YOU KNOW HIM,- A LIL' SHORT FAT GUY AND HE'S GOT A TALL SKINNY LONG NOSED WIFE.

WELL, WHAT ABOUT HIM?

WELL IF HE DON'T STOP RUNNING AROUND WITH A CERTAIN SINGLE GIRL—

I'M GOING TO TELL HIS WIFE.

WHY SHOULD YOU WORRY ABOUT WHO HE RUNS AROUND WITH?

WELL, SHE HAPPENS TO BE MY GIRL,— THAT'S WHY.

SMITTY.

CHRISTMAS CAROL

CHRISTMAS IS JUST ONE WEEK AWAY AND EVERYBODY'S GETTIN' ALL SET

MOST EVERYBODY HAS GOT BUNDLES TO BRING HOME - ALL KINDS OF NIFTY PRESENTS

THERE GOES MORE TO SOME KID'S HOUSE - BUNDLES UNDER EACH ARM

LOOK AT THOSE POOR KIDS - THEY'VE GOT BUNDLES UNDER EACH ARM TOO BUT THEY AIN'T NO PRESENTS

ALL THEY BRING HOME IS BOARDS AND BOXES - THAT'S 'BOUT ALL THEY GET FOR CHRISTMAS

I SUPPOSE THEY'RE GLAD TO BE WARM. TOUGH GOIN' THAT

WHY DON'T THEY GET NICE THINGS LIKE THE REST OF THE KIDS! THE COAL MAN IS THEIR SANTA CLAUS!

DIDNT YOU HEAR ABOUT IT OSCAR? EMMY'S LOST HER VOICE— THE DOCTOR SAYS SHE WONT BE ABLE TO TALK FOR A WEEK.

WHEE!

MOONSHINE— HERE IS A TELEGRAM THAT CAME FOR YOU THIS MORNING.

WELL, WHAT'RE YOU WHISPERIN' ABOUT, EMMY? I SEE YOU'VE ALREADY OPENED IT SO IT AINT ANY SECRET AROUND THIS NEIGHBORHOOD.

MY STARS! THAT TELEGRAM SAID THAT MR. FISHBERG, THE BIG MOVIE MAGNATE WAS COMING TO SEE MOON ABOUT PUTTING HIM IN THE PICTURES AND HERE I AM SO HOARSE I CAN'T SAY A WORD OUT LOUD. I MUST GO GET SOMETHING FOR MY THROAT SO I CAN TALK PRETTY TO MR. FISHBERG MYSELF.

NEXT?

GO AHEAD AND WAIT ON THE LADY— ALL I'M AFTER IS A LITTLE INFORMATION.

FOR PITY SAKES! I DO BELIEVE THAT MAN IS FOLLOWING ME.

THE FASTER I WALK THE FASTER HE WALKS— IF THERE ONLY WAS A COP OR SOMEBODY IN SIGHT I'D FIND OUT WHAT HIS GAME IS.

A PURTY KETTLE OF FISH I CALLS IT— WITH ME SO HOARSE I CAN'T EVEN SQUEAK. WELL, I THINK I'VE GIVE HIM THE SLIP THIS TIME.

SAY—

IT'S GETTING SO A GIRL AINT SAFE ON THE STREETS AT NIGHT—

OH—IF I COULD ONLY HOLLER— IF I ONLY HAD MY VOICE.

PUFF—PUFF—PUFF— I CANT GO A STEP FARTHER— PUFF—PUFF—PUFF— I WONDER IF HE SAW WHERE I HID MY MONEY

TAXI, MISTER?

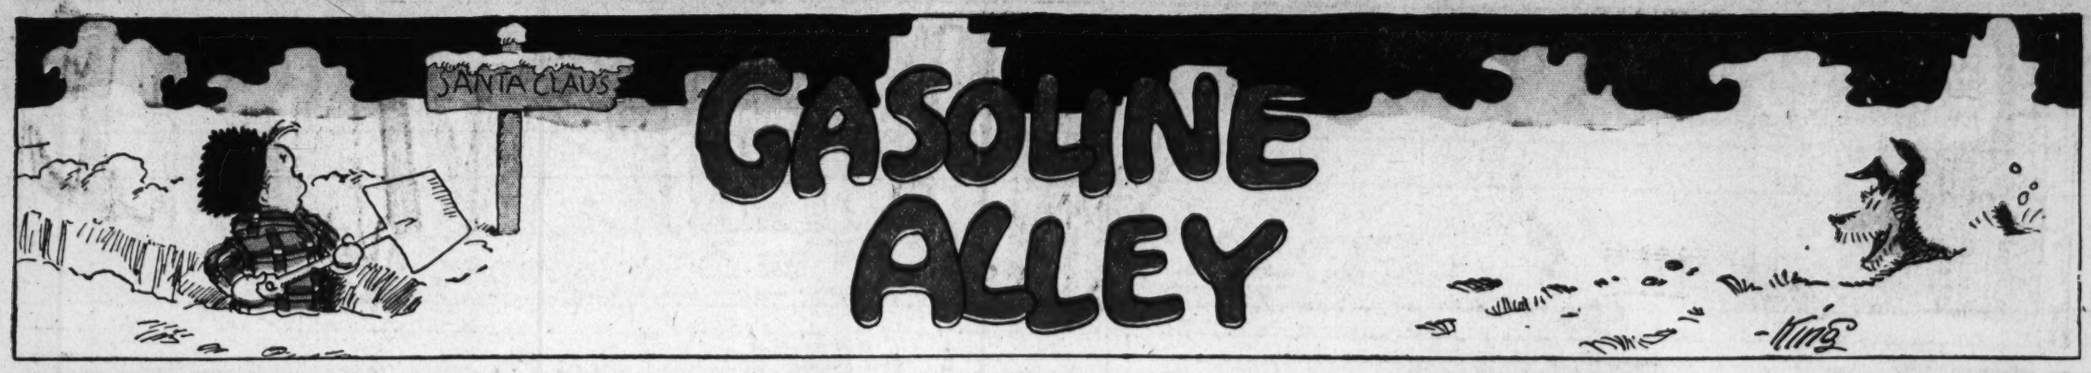

YEH— I WAS LOOKIN' FOR A FELLOW NAMED MULLINS AND THE MAN AT THE DRUGSTORE SAID HE LIVED AT THAT OLD LADY'S HOUSE—AND FOR ME TO FOLLOW HER, BUT SHE'S TOO FAST FOR ME AND I DON'T THINK SHE KNOWS WHERE SHE'S GOING ANYWAY— SO TAKE ME TO THE STATION— I'M GOING TO TAKE THE NEXT TRAIN OUT OF THIS TOWN.

I WONDER WHY MR. FISHBERG DIDN'T SHOW UP.

GASOLINE ALLEY

LAST WEEK SKEEZIX DECIDED IT WAS TIME SOME ONE GAVE SANTA CLAUS A CHRISTMAS GIFT. SO HE BUILT HIMSELF A LITTLE AEROPLANE AND STARTED OUT TO DELIVER A CAKE, SOME COOKIES AND OTHER GOODIES. RUNNING SMACK INTO ONE OF THE NORTHERN MOUNTAINS, HIS PLANE WAS DISABLED AND HE TOOK SHELTER IN AN OLD MAN'S CABIN.

GOODBYE AND GOD BLESS YOU, SKEEZIX! THE CAKE AND COOKIES YOU GAVE ME HAVE STRENGTHENED ME AND I CAN NOW TRAVEL TO MY NEAREST NEIGHBOR'S FOR SUPPLIES.

THIS FUR COAT YOU GAVE ME WILL KEEP ME WARM AND I'M SURE I'LL FIND SANTY ALL RIGHT.

I HAD TO BREAK INTO SANTY'S GIFT TO GIVE THE OLD MAN FOOD. I HOPE SANTY WON'T FEEL BADLY ABOUT IT.

OH, YOU POOR LITTLE THINGS! THERE IS SO MUCH SNOW I'M SURE YOU HAVEN'T HAD A THING TO EAT FOR EVER SO LONG!

I'M SURE SANTY WON'T CARE IF I BREAK UP A LITTLE COOKIE AND GIVE IT TO YOU. I THINK HE'D DO THE SAME HIMSELF.

AND HERE IS A LITTLE BEAR THAT NEEDS HELP. HE MUST HAVE LOST HIS MAMMA.

A LITTLE FOOD WILL HELP YOU OUT, LITTLE FELLA. AN' THERE WILL STILL BE SOME LEFT FOR SANTY CLAUS.

THERE'S AN' ESQUIMO WHO'S TUMBLED AN' HURT HIMSELF!

GLOO UG ANGLI WOG!

HERE, EAT THIS CAKE! THEN MAYBE I CAN HELP YOU UP.
